Sharing message of peace through music

Foundation, to compile these lessons into a "musical" on war and peace. Amahoro was born.

Amahoro. Besides being a daily greeting, the title means "Peace" in the languages of Rwanda and Burundi. The 14 songs of the CD are created from individual stories, but also based on general principles that relate to settling of differences, things like getting to know the "other," sharing our resources, rejecting violence, and caring for the earth. These same principles were outlined by United Nations, in its 2000 declaration of a "Decade of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World." Woven together loosely around the theme of a Journeyer searching for the elusive destination "Amahoro," the place of peace, the songs are meant to awaken reflections and questions on these themes. In sharing these songs, with the gracious collaboration of Bryan Marks and the CHS chorus, it is Lois' hope that they might, in some small way, contribute to understanding, understanding that could in turn could bring us all one step closer to the place called Amahoro.

Lois Cecsarini, a former Cohasset teacher who now works for the United Nations, joins in with the seventh and eighth grade chorus in singing the final song from "Amahoro," a musical program she wrote based on her experiences traveling around the world. "Amahoro" means peace.

Former Cohasset teacher, Lois Cecsarini listens for the first time to the music she created being performed by the seventh and eighth grade chorus. The concert was held during the Middle School Arts Fest, held in the high school auditorium Wednesday, June 7. The sixth grade band, sixth grade chorus and seventh and eighth grade band performed as well.

Savanna Norris narrates the dialogue portion from the musical program, "Amahoro," which means peace. The program was written and created by former Cohasset teacher Lois Cecsarini, who works for the United Nations and has traveled extensively through many of the world's war-torn countries. The music she created was inspired by her experiences around the globe.

Cohasset 13 Scituate 11

Division 3 state semifinal
Thursday, June 8, 2006

The scoreboard tells the story as the Skippers celebrate their victory in Scituate.

Staff photos by Robin Chan

Pete Emst cradles the ball and goes on the attack in the second quarter.

Ben Libby displays his prescient abilities after the Scituate win, as he seems to already know who will be number one.

Trevor Brady checks the balls out of the hands of Scituate's Colby Hawkins at the start of the first period.

Mark Flibotte (14) clears out Scituate's David Lee (15) so that teammate Chris Davis has a chance to grab the loose ball on this exchange in the third period.

Dan Trendowicz dishes the ball to Aidan Buick (1) as the Skippers go on the attack in the second period. Trendowicz would later connect with Buick for the game-winning goal with just over a minute to go in the game.

Mark Flibotte heads toward the D-S net on his way to a goal in the second quarter.

Ben Libby keeps his eye on the ball while collecting the rebound from his initial save in the third quarter.

Despite being knocked to the ground by a Dover-Sherborn defender, Aidan Buick scored on this fourth period shot to put the finishing touches on Cohasset's championship victory

The Cohasset High School student body packed the stands for the championship game.

Rosemary Brennan elected General Councilor

On June 25, the Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston will participate in the Transfer of Leadership for their congregation. More than 800 sisters, associates, and guests are expected at the Mass that will take place at St. Ignatius Church, Chestnut Hill.

Rosemary Brennan, CSJ, who has been elected as General Councilor, teaches at Boston College's Institute of Religious Education and Pastoral Ministry. Prior to this she was Director of the Sisters of St. Joseph Retreat Center in Cohasset for eight years and has continued to serve on retreat teams both in Cohasset and throughout the United States and Canada. In this capacity she has coordinated retreats for men and women of diverse denominational backgrounds. Sister Rosemary holds a Masters of Education from Boston University and a Masters of Divinity from Weston Jesuit School of Theology. She is also part of the three-person steering committee that coordinates the Catholic Association of Field Educators, a network of field educators serving in Catholic seminaries and graduate schools across the United States and Canada.

Prior to this she was Director of the Sisters of St. Joseph Retreat Center in Cohasset for eight years and has continued to serve on retreat teams both in Cohasset and throughout the United States and Canada.

The other women who have been elected by the congregation to serve in the ministry of leadership for the next six years are: Mary L. Murphy, CSJ, President; Lee Hogan, CSJ, Assistant President; Marilyn McGoldrick, CSJ General Councilor; Brenda Forry, CSJ, Helen Sullivan, CSJ, and Ellen Powers, CSJ, Area Councilors.

Murphy, CSJ, moves into her position as President of the Sisters of St. Joseph from her current position as a General Councilor. Other members of the Leadership Team completing their six-year term are: Joan Duffy, CSJ, President, Elizabeth Cawley, CSJ, Assistant President, Margaret L. Sullivan, CSJ, General Councilor, as well as Area Councilors, Ellen Pumphret, CSJ, Mary Ellen O'Connell, CSJ, and Margaret Nichols, CSJ.

Earlier this year, Sisters and Associates articulated a vision for the next six years that states: Enflamed with the compassion of God, we, Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston, women of the Church, rooted in the Gospel together with our Associates are impelled by the active, inclusive love of God to: deepen our relationship with the dear neighbor without distinction; foster prophetic communion; and journey into the future with Sisters of St. Joseph and Associates throughout the world and with all God's creation. The mission of the newly elected team is to empower the congregation to live this vision at this time in history.

Rosemary Brennan, CSJ

The Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston is a congregation of vowed religious women of the Church and rooted in gospel values. They are committed to living as women of unity, reconciliation, and inclusive love of neighbor without distinction. Fidelity to this vision is at the heart of their mission.

OBITUARIES

William C. Casey

William Coleman Casey, 77, of Winchester and a summer resident of Humarock Beach for more than 40 years died June 7, 2006.

The oldest of eight children, Mr. Casey was born in Arlington. He was raised in Arlington and graduated from Arlington High and Boston College in 1950. He met and married his love, Anne Marie Cahill of Chestnut Hill. They raised nine children in Winchester and were married nearly 53 years.

Working for more than 55 years, Mr. Casey along with his brother John of Cohasset owned and operated Casey & Hayes Movers and Brede Exposition Services.

Mr. Casey lived a full life dedicating himself to his family and his businesses and charities. Gifted with a beautiful tenor voice himself, music was an important entity in his life.

He enjoyed his community work as a former Boston Rotarian and Paul Harris Fellow. He enthusiastically supported many charities and was presently involved with the development of the Paraclete Center in South Boston.

For those who loved this larger than life man he will be fondly remembered for his love of the simple things in life: a crimson sunset, a steady summer breeze, and the upbeat music of a marching band.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held in St. Mary's Church in Winchester. Internment followed at Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline.

The arrangements were handled by the Costello Funeral Home in Winchester.

Donations in his name can be made to The Paraclete Center, 207 E St. South Boston, MA 02127.

Rosemary Brennan elected General Councilor

Prior to this she was Director of the Sisters of St. Joseph Retreat Center in Cohasset for eight years and has continued to serve on retreat teams both in Cohasset and throughout the United States and Canada.

On June 25, the Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston will participate in the Transfer of Leadership for their congregation. More than 800 sisters, associates, and guests are expected at the Mass that will take place at St. Ignatius Church, Chestnut Hill.

Rosemary Brennan, CSJ, who has been elected as General Councilor, teaches at Boston College's Institute of Religious Education and Pastoral Ministry. Prior to this she was Director of the Sisters of St. Joseph Retreat Center in Cohasset for eight years and has continued to serve on retreat teams both in Cohasset and throughout the United States and Canada. In this capacity she has coordinated retreats for men and women of diverse denominational backgrounds. Sister Rosemary holds a Masters of Education from Boston University and a Masters of Divinity from Weston Jesuit School of Theology. She is also part of the three-person steering committee that coordinates the Catholic Association of Field Educators, a network of field educators serving in Catholic seminaries and graduate schools across the United States and Canada.

The other women who have been elected by the congregation to serve in the ministry of leadership for the next six years are: Mary L. Murphy, CSJ, President; Lee Hogan, CSJ, Assistant President; Marilyn McGoldrick, CSJ General Councilor; Brenda Forry, CSJ, Helen Sullivan, CSJ, and Ellen Powers, CSJ, Area Councilors.

Murphy, CSJ, moves into her position as President of the Sisters of St. Joseph from her current position as a General Councilor. Other members of the Leadership Team completing their six-year term are: Joan Duffy, CSJ, President, Elizabeth Cawley, CSJ, Assistant President, Margaret L. Sullivan, CSJ, General Councilor, as well as Area Councilors, Ellen Pumphret, CSJ, Mary Ellen O'Connell, CSJ, and Margaret Nichols, CSJ.

Earlier this year, Sisters and Associates articulated a vision for the next six years that states: Enflamed with the compassion of God, we, Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston, women of the Church, rooted in the Gospel together with our Associates are impelled by the active, inclusive love of God to: deepen our relationship with the dear neighbor without distinction; foster prophetic communion; and journey into the future with Sisters of St. Joseph and Associates throughout the world and with all God's creation. The mission of the newly elected team is to empower the congregation to live this vision at this time in history.

Rosemary Brennan, CSJ

The Sisters of St. Joseph of Boston is a congregation of vowed religious women of the Church and rooted in gospel values. They are committed to living as women of unity, reconciliation, and inclusive love of neighbor without distinction. Fidelity to this vision is at the heart of their mission.

OBITUARIES

William C. Casey

William Coleman Casey, 77, of Winchester and a summer resident of Humarock Beach for more than 40 years died June 7, 2006.

The oldest of eight children, Mr. Casey was born in Arlington. He was raised in Arlington and graduated from Arlington High and Boston College in 1950. He met and married his love, Anne Marie Cahill of Chestnut Hill. They raised nine children in Winchester and were married nearly 53 years.

Working for more than 55 years, Mr. Casey along with his brother John of Cohasset owned and operated Casey & Hayes Movers and Brede Exposition Services.

Mr. Casey lived a full life dedicating himself to his family and his businesses and charities. Gifted with a beautiful tenor voice himself, music was an important entity in his life.

He enjoyed his community work as a former Boston Rotarian and Paul Harris Fellow. He enthusiastically supported many charities and was presently involved with the development of the Paraclete Center in South Boston.

For those who loved this larger than life man he will be fondly remembered for his love of the simple things in life: a crimson sunset, a steady summer breeze, and the upbeat music of a marching band.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held in St. Mary's Church in Winchester. Internment followed at Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline.

The arrangements were handled by the Costello Funeral Home in Winchester.

Donations in his name can be made to The Paraclete Center, 207 E St. South Boston, MA 02127.

Central air conditioning for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.
If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.
Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.
Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

'Annie' brings Pecevich back home to South Shore

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Katherine Pecevich has been a working actress and director for almost 20 years, but recently the Brockton native has seen her career take off — literally. Known to South Shore audiences for her many performances with the former Showstoppers Dinner Theatre in Scituate, Pecevich is currently criss-crossing the country in the national tour of the Tony Award-winning musical "Annie" now at Boston's Opera House.

"This is my first national tour and really my first time on the road and I'm loving it," explained Pecevich last week by telephone from Buffalo. "We didn't travel much when I was a child and I didn't fly for the first time until after college. This tour is a whole new experience for me."

A Brockton High School graduate whose father was the longtime head of the foreign language department at the school, Pecevich had graduated from the Boston Conservatory with a degree in musical theater and was working as an actress in the Berkshires when a personal matter changed her professional life. "I moved home to Brockton over 10 years ago to be a caretaker for my father who was very ill. While I was home, I worked as an actress and director with Showstoppers and I also taught children's theater in the Scituate Public Schools. After my father passed away, I moved to New York to restart my career. I signed with an agent who specializes in comic character actors. Shortly after I arrived in New York, I was cast in my first independent film, 'Pay Day,' which I did for a directing student at the Tisch Graduate School at New York University. I played a depressed woman who ultimately kills herself which was kind of a departure for me as an actress. The film ended up being shown at the 2004 Sundance Film Festival." It also led Pecevich to be cast in her first commercial television project — an episode of NBC-TVs "Law and Order: SVU."

"I played an emergency room doctor. I actually had six lines in the script, but only one made it on air. I did have my own dressing room, though, and what's even nicer was that I joined the Screen Actors' Guild (SAG).

I feel very lucky, because as a character actress things only get better with age. I got my SAG card from doing television, and I joined Actor's Equity to go out with 'Annie'."

Pecevich was also almost cast as a replacement in several long-running Broadway shows including "Mamma Mia!"

"My agent was submitting for some wonderful stuff and I was getting close when I heard about 'Annie.' It was an open casting call to cover Miss Hannigan and several other of the older female leads. I was cast as Mrs. Pugh/Sophie/Perkins and as understudy for Miss Hannigan. We opened in Seattle last August and I've been with the show ever since." With Conrad John Schuck back as Daddy Warbucks, the current production is again directed by its lyricist Martin Charnin who brought the legendary original production to Broadway in 1977.

Annie (Marissa O'Donnell) and Sandy (Lola).

With music by Charles Strouse — including "Tomorrow" and "It's a Hard Knock Life" — and a book by Thomas Meehan, the musical stage version of the adventures of comic strip heroine Little Orphan Annie would that same year win seven Tony Awards including Best Musical. It also won a legion of fans who remain loyal to the little red-head and her dog Sandy almost 30 years later.

"It is amazing what this show means to people," says Pecevich, 37, who remembers seeing "Annie" for the first time when it came through Boston on its first national tour in 1979. "This show works because it is simple and clear. It doesn't pretend to be anything it isn't. It is also timeless. Even the scenes in the White House with Franklin D. Roosevelt have parallels to today. What makes our production so great is that the entire original creative team is involved. Our Annie, Marissa O'Donnell, is terrific, too. She has these wonderful freckles and beautiful blues eyes and an amazing voice. It just doesn't get much better than that."

In addition to her mother and sister in Brockton and sisters in Wellesley, Northboro, and Hull, who came to see her when she went on as Miss Hannigan in Charlotte, N.C., earlier this year, Pecevich expects a good turnout of local friends and family to be on hand when she makes her debut on a downtown Boston commercial theater stage.

"It is thrilling to come to Boston and play the Opera House. Since we're playing in my backyard, there will definitely be a huge contingent of my friends and family coming out to see the show. I'm happy, too, because I love my characters and I can't wait to play them in Boston. And, I'll be staying at my mother's house in Brockton so it will be fun to actually get to drive to work each day."

And fun, too, according to Pecevich, to once again sample some favorite hometown food.

"I'm definitely going to the Cape Cod Cafe in Brockton. There isn't a better barroom pizza anywhere in the world."

"Annie" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, through June 25. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com

Movie review

Young Damien (Seamus Davey-Fitzpatrick) watches his mother (Julia Stiles) sleep peacefully ... for now.

'Omen' remake ups the anti-Christ

The Omen (C+)

What do you do when you realize your child is the Anti-Christ?

I believe this is a question all parents ask themselves.

It's also a question famously asked by the original "The Omen," Richard Donner's terrific 1976 B-movie featuring a diabolically clever plot and, more importantly, an A-movie cast.

In the new film, shot in Prague and directed by remake specialist John Moore ("Flight of the Phoenix"), we get the B-movie leads. Robert Thorn (Liev Schreiber in the Gregory Peck role) is an American diplomat in Rome. Katherine Thorn (Julia Stiles in the Lee Remick part) is the power-couple wife giving birth in a Rome hospital. After their infant child dies, a grief-stricken Robert, at the behest of a priest, agrees to switch the dead child with a newborn whose mother has died.

Can you spell Armageddon? We know the "switched" son is strange because his parents name him Damien and people start getting knocked off in the most gruesome ways imaginable.

Morevoer, in the role played by Billie Whitelaw in the original, Mia Farrow ("Rosemary's Baby"), who knows a thing or two about birthin' and raisin' devil babies, is Damien's witchy nanny Mrs. Baylock. Apparently, in hiring her, the Thorns missed the line on her resume that read, "Apostate of Hell."

Based again on the ingenious, widely imitated script by David Seltzer, a superior offshoot of "The Exorcist," this film takes everything that was ambiguous and subtle in the original and makes it so obvious, it's often unintentionally funny.

Little Damien (spooky-eyed Seamus Davey-Fitzpatrick in the role originated by Harvey Stephens, who plays a tabloid reporter in the new film) now looks like he just stepped off Spaceship Beelzebub. His mother's fear of him — a motif borrowed from "Rosemary's Baby" — is now entirely too justified.

Baboons not only go nuts in his presence, now an ape goes literally ape. Most notably of all, Jerry Goldsmith's original Academy Award-winning score, often mistaken for Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana," has been replaced by the assaultive compositions of Marco Beltrami ("Underworld: Evolution').

Still, the film has its moments, chief among them scenes in an Etruscan cemetery in which Thorn and photographer Keith Jennings (David Thewlis in the David Warner role) uncover the identity of Damien's real mother and the true fate of Thorn's biological son and are attacked by a pack of devil dogs.

Otherwise, this is an "Omen" for the "Save the Last Dance" crowd. If you want to see a truly wild Anti-Christ film, check out "Day of the Beast," a surreal 1995 comedy from Spanish bad boy Alex de la Iglesia ('Accion Mutante"). You'll also see where this "Omen" stole its poster image.

Rated R. "The Omen" contains graphic violence.

Doobie Brothers Takin' it to Sohier Street

70s rock legends play Music Circus Saturday

On the telephone from his home in northern California, Tom Johnston, singer, songwriter and guitarist with The Doobie Brothers, is ready for a relaxed conversation about the million-selling rock band he helped form in 1970. Much has changed in the music business in the past 36 years, but Johnston — along with fellow original bandmate Patrick Simmons — remains true to the sound that earned the Doobies 16 Top 40 hits including "Black Water," "China Grove," and "Listen to the Music." Maintaining their place in the pantheon of classic American rock groups means touring (including a stop this Saturday at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset), however, and on that subject Johnston is a little less relaxed.

"We've had two weeks off which has been great. I know that we'll be back out on the road soon and that means traveling on planes and the tour bus. The traveling from place to place gets old fast, very fast. We often say that we get paid for 22 of hours of travel. We play two hours a day for free," says Johnston. "We do between 70 and 90 dates a year. During the mid-70s, we would play between 150 and 200 shows a year. That schedule almost killed me."

Johnston stepped away from The Doobie Brothers in late 1974. Simmons remained and was joined by guitarist Jeff Baxter and singer, songwriter and keyboardist Michael McDonald, both of whom had been with Steely Dan. When Johnston's health prevented a return to the band and his primary songwriting responsibilities, the group divided that task between Simmons, McDonald and guitarist Tiran Porter. Before long, the group's hard-charging, guitar-infused rock and roll gave way to a style of blue-eyed soul marked by keyboards and horns. With hits like "Takin' It to the Streets," and "It Keeps You Running," "What a Fool Believes," and "Minute by Minute," The Doobie Brothers remained at the top of charts throughout the rest of the 1970s. By 1982, Simmons was ready to depart and rather than send out "The Doobie Brothers" with no original members, the group was disbanded. In the mid-1980s, Johnston, Simmons and McDonald all released solo projects. When they came together for a benefit reunion concert in 1987, a more full-time reunion was not far behind. Since that time, Johnston and Simmons have continued to headline a reformed version of The Doobie Brothers. McDonald has even joined them on several occasions. Johnston is quick to point out that the differences between him and McDonald are musical, not personal.

"Where Michael took the band was just as popular as where as it had been before. He is incredibly talented and he helped the group reach a lot of new people. When I left, it had nothing to do with Michael. It was just time for me to get away from everything. I had an ulcer and I almost bled to death. I took two years off to regain my health and then did two solo albums."

With Johnston and Simmons firmly back in the fold, The Doobie Brothers have been back together since 1989 and are now joined by Michael Hossack on drums, John McFee on guitar, strings and vocals, saxophonist March Russo, drummer Ed Toth, Skylark on bass and vocals, and Guy Allison on keyboards and vocals.

"We're grateful that we still get radio air play and that our fan base is still so strong. We put great effort into our live shows and these days we know exactly what we're doing. The road is different, too. When we're not on-stage, we lead a more sedentary lifetsyle. All in all, we're having more fun than we ever did before.

The Doobie Brothers will be at the South Shore Music Circus on Saturday, June 17, at 8 PM. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.

Family fun in New England

Summer deals for families feature lighthouses, falcons, fairways

By KIM FOLEY MacKINNON
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

While the waves at the beach and constructing sand castles may be the idyllic picture of summer fun, there are more ways than that to build vacation memories. Consider the "Summer Learning" packages being promoted by the New England Inns and Resorts Association.

The family-oriented packages include a chance for the kids to check out what it's like to be a lighthouse keeper, improve their golf game, handle a live hawk and take rock-climbing lessons.

Any of these will ensure your kids will have nothing to complain about when it's time to write that "What I Did This Summer" essay in the fall.

The inns in the association are found throughout New England. Here are some of our favorites (find more at www.newenglandinns.com).

Massachusetts

Bring your mini-Tiger Woods to the Cranwell Resort and Spa (800-272-6935; www.cranwell.com) in Lenox, where they can participate in the resort's Junior Golf Program. Kids 6-16 will get a junior golf assessment to identify their strengths and weaknesses and then take group classes. The Golf Digest School, a 60-acre complex, is the largest in New England. The juniors learn basic swing fundamentals and practice techniques, rules for playing and how to play the course. Classes are offered Tuesdays and Thursdays for $20 per session. Overnight midweek (Monday-Thursday) lodging packages are from $325 per room; available June 1-Oct. 31.

On the Cape, your kids can learn what a lighthouse keeper actually does at the Lighthouse Inn (508-398-2244; www.lighthouseinn.com), where a three-day package includes a tour of the Bass River Lighthouse, plus a narrated cruise of the Bass River and whale watch tickets. The inn has been in the same family since 1938. Originally bought by a developer after the lighthouse had been dark for years, the property escaped being parceled out because the mortgage payment was due. Guests were taken in to pay the bills and the family recognized a good thing when they saw it. By the time your kids come home from their lighthouse experience, they will have filled a personal keeper's log with neat facts, including how to identify turn-of-the-century ships by their sails and details of shipwrecks of the Civil War and Cape Cod. Available June 30 through Labor Day. Prices start at $1,050.

Mini Land Rover program at The Equinox in Vermont

Sailing at Sebasco Harbor Resort in Maine

New Hampshire

For real family togetherness, go to the Mount Washington Resort (800-258-0330; www.mtwashington.com) at Bretton Woods to attend family rock-climbing school. Learn about safety systems, communication, knots, proper use of equipment, belaying and rappelling. Parental bonus: Kids who tend to complain about boring family vacations are unlikely to whine when dangling from a line.

Classes are led by experienced and certified guides from the International Mountain Climbing School. The package includes 1 1/2 days of climbing instruction, two nights' accommodations, two dinners, two breakfasts and one picnic lunch. Rates start at $295 per person per night. Available July 17-19 and Aug. 14-16.

Maine

Grandparents and grandkids can ditch the parents and do their own thing with a program designed just for them at the Sebasco Harbor Resort (800-225-3819; www.sebasco.com). The "Grand Vacation" package includes overnight accommodations for up to four (two adults, two children, ages 5-12), breakfast and dinner each day and use of bikes. The big draw is the choice of a golf lesson with a pro and unlimited playing on the resort's three-hole Lake Course, a sailing lesson for two with a half-day sailboat rental or passage for up to four along the coast on the resort's boat, The Ruth. The kids also can visit the resort's supervised kids' camp program (while the grandparents nap or take a break). Package rates start at $297 per room (up to four people with a minimum two-night stay). Available June 18 through Aug. 31.

Vermont

For those who want a little more of an extreme vacation, high-tail it up to the Equinox Resort (800-362-4747; www.equinox.rockresorts.com) in Manchester Village, where two standouts among myriad activities are the junior off-roading class and falconry class.

Kids 5 and up can participate in the off-roading program. Once behind the wheel of a mini-Land Rover, they'll get instruction on maneuvering and driving a circuit of off-road obstacles. If they want more than this 45-minute lesson, the next level is a bit more challenging ($85 per lesson or $150 for both).

Falconry is a skill your kids won't learn during a normal school year, but those 12 and up can try it here. The British School of Falconry, located at the resort, will teach them how to both handle and fly a hawk. Participants are also educated on the role falconers play in the conservation of raptors. Rates for the classes start at $55 per session. Off-roading and falconry sessions are offered for adults, too. Summer lodging rates are from $269 per night, with a variety of special packages available.

Bus fees

Some kids will have to pay to ride

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Transportation to and from school will no longer be free for many Cohasset students. The School Committee has voted to implement bus fees as well as parking fees for those students who drive themselves to school, on a one-year trial basis.

However, the June 15 vote was not unanimous as School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said she was philosophically opposed to charging parents to make up the budget gap caused by a failed override vote when the schools are the responsibility of the community as a whole.

This fall, all students in grades seven through 12 will be charged $180 each, per year, with a family cap of $540, to ride the bus. Students in kindergarten through grade six, who live within two miles of their school, will be charged as well. Those students in kindergarten through grade six who live outside the two-mile radius will be bused free of charge, as mandated by the state.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said there are 1,493 total students in the district and 1,207 of those students could be charged for transportation. Assuming those students all continue to ride the bus, at $180 per

School security beefed up

By Samantha Brown

Security is a top priority for Cohasset's schools. To ensure they are monitored day and night, a new security system is slated to be installed at all three buildings which will connect to monitors at the Cohasset Police Department.

The School Committee approved allocating funding in the amount of roughly $42,000 for a new system for the Osgood School at its June 15 meeting, although where that money will come from is still up for discussion.

Both Deer Hill and the middle-high school gave money left over from their building projects which has been earmarked by the School Building Committee to cover the cost of a security system upgrade. Not wanting to leave Osgood out of the upgrades, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the school department would find the money to cover the cost for its new system to ensure all three schools install the same security system.

Walsh said the funding for Osgood can either come from the $226,000 it has in Foundation Reserve grant funds

Cost of some services rises

Building department and ambulance fees are going up.

Selectmen voted Monday to go along with Town Manager Bill Griffin's recommendation to increase the fees for sealer of weights services, which would allow for full cost recovery for services. As the sealer of weights, Building Inspector Bob Egan is responsible for making sure when a scale says an item weighs five pounds, it really does weigh five pounds. He also ensures when a gallon of gas is purchased at the town's gas stations, a gallon is truly received. Fees for Egan's services will be increased from $10 to $25 per scale and pump.

Egan said the fees are not unusual as the town of Scituate has set its rates at the same level. In addition, Egan said businesses with a number of scales or a

There were 32 teams at Cohasset's Alumni Field on Friday night but no cleats, soccer balls or lacrosse sticks could be found.

Yet all the participants had as much determination and heart as any high school athlete playing for the state championship.

Sporting Relay For Life T-shirts, team members walked the track throughout the night with the common goal of raising money to find a cure for the disease that eventually touches everyone in some way.

According to the American Cancer Society, more than 600 volunteers raised more than $160,000 (compared with an average of $80,000 nationwide) in the overnight event that started Friday afternoon and wrapped up Saturday morning. And donations are still coming in. In 10 years, the Cohasset Relay for Life has raised more than $1 million with the average team raising $4,900 compared with the $1,800 national average, organizers say.

Hundreds of Relays take place around the country each year. "In our small community, we are really making a difference," said Cohasset Relay chairman Harry St. Onge.

A rumble from the field was audible Saturday morning as the "The Tenacious Teen Team" heard the news its members had raised $15,002.50, making the 25-member Tenacious Teens the tops among the youth teams at the Relay in terms of raising money.

Team leaders Tessa Young and Kenzie Raymond, both 16, are from Hingham. The girls, along with their teammates are sophomores at Buckingham, Browne and Nichols School in Cambridge.

Tessa explained she was introduced to the Relay through a team at her church and then founded her own team when her church stopped fielding one of its own. Both Tessa and Kenzie know people their own age who have had cancer.

Teammate Emily Duggan came all the way from Dover to be part of the Tenacious Teens. "Having friends so into it, I got into it," Emily said.

St. Onge, the Relay chairman, said there are two aspects of the Relay that he finds are really "fantastic."

"The youth teams we have are actively involved and enthusias-

Cultural Council to meet June 26

The Cohasset Cultural Council, a program of the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, will host a public input meeting on Monday, June 26, at 7:45 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Library. The council seeks input from Cohasset residents as they enter the 2007 grant cycle during which the council will disburse at least $2,500 for cultural programming of benefit to Cohasset residents.

The public input session will take place from 7:45 to 8:30 p.m. Anyone interested in seeking a position on the council or who would like more information on the Cultural Council is welcome to attend.

Applications for 2007 funding from the Cohasset Cultural Council must be postmarked by Oct. 15. 2006. Applications, guidelines and information can be found online at www.massculture.org. For more information call council chairwoman Selene Eymer at 781-383-2761.

Village celebration idea is proposed

With work on the downtown streetscape coming to a close, Selectman Ted Carr suggested the town hold some kind of dedication or event to encourage residents to bring business back to shops which were affected by the construction. With road closures and torn up streets, village merchants have reported a decrease in sales by at least 30 percent over the past few months, Carr said. He added he would be happy to spearhead the effort and said he would work with Greenbush liaisons Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber as well as village merchants to come up with ideas.

King St. becoming rear-end alley

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Simply stated, motorists are tailgating along King Street (Route 3A), says Police Chief James Hussey. He said that driving behavior coupled with the amount of curb cuts along the stretch of roadway adds up to an accident waiting to happen.

And that is just what occurred this past week, times four.

There were four car accidents on King Street; three of which resulted in an operator being cited for failure to use proper care.

"They were all basically the same type of accident: rear-end collisions which usually happens when a vehicle is following too close," Hussey said.

On Monday, June 12 a landscape truck towing a trailer and traveling south on Route 3A hit a 2005 Nissan Altima that was making a turn in the vicinity of 130 King St. (Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square). The truck driver was cited for failure to use care, Hussey said.

On Wednesday, June 13, a southbound garbage truck hit a 2005 Pontiac Grand Prix which was attempting to turn right onto upper King Street at the Stop & Shop light. No one was cited in that accident, he said.

On Friday, June 16, the operator of a northbound 1995 BMW was cited after the car rear-ended a 2002 Infinity that had stopped to take a left into Fitness First.

And on Sunday, June 18, the operator of a 2006 VW Jetta was cited after hitting a 1998 Mercury Grand Prix near Acapulco's.

"Motorists must keep a safe distance," Hussey said. He explained that along that part of the highway an operator may be looking for a particular store or business and slow down or stop quickly in order to make the turn. "There are so many curb cuts on both sides of the street that a motorist may not see where he wants to turn until he is right there," he said.

"Motorists must keep a safe distance."

Bridge jumpers are back again

Almost since time began – in other words, as far back as anyone can remember – when the temperature rises, youths jump off the bridge on Border Street into the rapids below.

However, Police Chief James Hussey does not want anyone to get hurt and is very uncomfortable with this rite of passage in Cohasset.

For the second year in a row, he is going to increase patrols at the bridge. In fact as of July 1, when the seasonal officers come on board, there will be even more vigilance in the area.

"We will make sure the officers respond there and keep the kids moving," he said. Hussey said his department would be proactive and not wait for complaints or calls from concerned citizens.

"My biggest concern is the young kids," Hussey said. He explained the officers can pick up juveniles and deliver them to their parents or call their parents.

He has also considered levying fines for repeat offenders to act as a deterrent but will check out the process first and see if any legal hurdles need to be cleared. "It would be a drastic measure but is one we are considering," Hussey said.

With the mini-heat wave earlier this week and sunny skies on the weekend, the police log has peppered with calls about bridge jumpers.

Juvenile in trouble over fire alarm

Police are summonsing a juvenile (meaning the youth is under 17) to court on the charge of pulling a false fire alarm. The incident occurred at the middle-high school Thursday, June 15 at about 12:53 p.m. In accordance with the Memorandum of Agreement between the school department and police, the school spoke with police about the incident.

"We contacted the parents and set up a time to talk to the teen with the parents present," Police Chief James Hussey said. "We are summonsing the child into court on charges of pulling the alarm." Police did not release the child's name on account of his age.

Girl approached by vehicle

A 15-year-old girl riding her bike alone along King Street at about 9:30 p.m., last Thursday, was approached by a man in what she described as a newer, black small station wagon. The man told her little girls should not be out alone at night and he offered to give her a ride home. When he pulled up again, she went into a yard on King Street and the car drove off. The girl was not able to provide a license plate. The incident is under investigation, Police Chief James Hussey said.

Detail officer hit by backhoe

A detail officer at Depot Court and South Main Street was hit in the shoulder with part of a backhoe that was working on the village project last Friday at 7:54

Stolen laptop holds priceless memories

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A laptop containing years of digital family photos was stolen from the Tedeschi family sometime during the night on Friday, June 16. The family lives on Beach Street. Paul Tedeschi said the car was unlocked and parked in the driveway when the laptop was stolen.

Tedeschi said the car was opened from the side closest to the street and other items such as his golf clubs, tennis racquets and his check book were not taken. He said the Cohasset Police Department took fingerprints Saturday morning and an investigation is under way.

The laptop is a silver, Dell Inspiron 8600 and it is password protected, which means whoever took it will not likely be able to use it. The Tedeschi family has offered up a $1,000 reward for a "no questions asked" return of the laptop. He said it is possible the laptop could have been discarded into the woods or even left at the boutique at the RTF if those who took it were not able to use it due to the password protection. He said more than anything, his family just wants the pictures back, as he does not have backups for his files.

Tedeschi said he was told by the police department there were a number of other thefts which took place over the weekend both at the Arts Festival on the Common and at the Swim Center. Sunday morning, he found an abandoned docking station for an IBM think pad, which could belong to someone else in the community and was also password protected and therefore useless to the person who took it.

Tedeschi said he walks his dog every morning and did not see the docking station the day before. He called the police which came and removed the docking station with rubber gloves on. It too will be dusted for fingerprints.

"I just want to remind people how important it is to back up your files," said Tedeschi, adding in the age of digital photographs, it is easier than ever to take pictures and upload them to a computer, but if that set of files is gone, you can be left with nothing. He said while he also used the laptop for business, it is the photos that mean the most and anyone with any information is urged to call the Cohasset Police Department at (781) 383-1055.

a.m. It's not clear what exactly happened but the backhoe's supports could have been being put in place and the machine then moved a couple of inches.. The officer was taken to South Shore Hospital to be checked out as a precaution, but he was not seriously injured, Police Chief James Hussey said. The backhoe was checked out for mechanical problems and was not defective, he said.

Larceny at the Festival

Police are investigating the theft of several items, including jewelry, pottery and ivy, over Friday night at the Festival on the Common. Police Chief James Hussey said the security guard said he saw three youths run from a tent at about 3:30 a.m. The thefts were reported at about 9:43 a.m. Saturday.

MVA at Spring and S. Main

Last Friday at 3:19 p.m. a Ford Mustang attempted to cross South Main from Summer Street over to Spring Street when it was involved in an accident. Police Chief James Hussey explained the operator of the Mustang apparently thought the intersection was a four-way stop. When the operator saw a gray 2002 Subaru traveling on S. Main Street slowing down as it approached the intersection, he thought it would stop but the Subaru did not. "There were no injuries; the mustang was towed from the scene and the operator was cited for failure to use care at an intersection," Hussey said.

Boat vandalized

A boat at the Sailing Club was vandalized over the weekend. The hatch cover was ripped off and the thief took hardware and a gas can adapter. Anyone with information should contact the police at 781-383-1055.

Swim Center vandalism

At 10:15 a.m. last Saturday police received a call about windows broken at the Swim Center and the theft of a cash box. The cash box was empty, Police Chief James Hussey said. He said the incident was more than a burglary. He said six windows were broken, therefore, the crime also involved vandalism. The matter is under investigation and anyone with information should contact the police at 781-383-1055.

Festival-goers' cars towed

Several Festival-goers could not locate their cars after attending the Festival on the Common because they had been towed. A fire captain reported the way several cars were parked would prevent a fire engine from being able to travel through the area and therefore the cars were towed for public safety reasons. The police log indicated five cars were towed last Saturday afternoon. Police Chief James Hussey said the cars were parked illegally.

Peacock causes a stir

Police received a call about a peacock on the roof of a home on Beechwood Street on Sunday followed by a call stating the woman was trying to catch the bird.

Chief James Hussey said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy advises that an animal like that is wonderful to see. People should enjoy them but leave them alone, Hussey said.

Elworthy is new CEA director

Town Manager Bill Griffin has appointed Linda Elworthy of Salem, Mass. to be the town's next Director of Elder Services at the Council on Elder Affairs. Elworthy will take over for Kathy Bryanton, who retired at the end of May.

Selectmen voted Monday to waive their right to veto Griffin's appointment and approved bringing Elworthy on board.

"I am passionate about senior services," said Elworthy, adding by the year 2010 there will be 8 million seniors across the country and their needs will have to be met. "I am a fiscal bulldog," she said, adding she realizes the money spent by the CEA comes from the taxpayers and as a seasoned grant writer, she will do all she can to supplement the funding provided by the town.

Elworthy said her goal is to become a member of the community and she has been able to find temporary housing in Hull while she looks for a permanent residence in Cohasset. "I want to plant my feet here," she said, adding she can't wait until she no longer has to make the drive down from Salem. "I'm delighted to be here," she said.

Elworthy was one of 15 candidates for the position. At Griffin's request, the résumés which came in were reviewed by members of the CEA and the field was narrowed down to eight. Following interviews, the eight were reduced to four candidates and Griffin added a fifth to the final list, as the person is a current employee of the department.

An interview team comprised of Anna Abbruzzese of the CEA board, Director of Finance Michael Buckley and Hingham Council on Aging Director Barbara Farnsworth then developed a strong consensus Elworthy was the strongest candidate for the position.

Elworthy's was Director of Elder Services for the city of Salem from 1998 to 2006. When a new mayor was elected and severe budget cuts were made, the mayor decided to consolidate the elder services department with the recreation department and Elworthy's position was eliminated. She has also worked in the adult day health and long term care fields for many years and holds a bachelor's degree and master's degree in education from Emmanuel College. She has an extensive amount of grant writing and fund-raising experience.

Positive evaluation for Town Manager

Town Manager Bill Griffin's evaluation is complete and Selectmen ranked his performance as "superior" or "outstanding" in each category. Griffin was evaluated in seven different areas including: Proactively administers Town affairs, minimizes issues that require Selectmen intervention, keeps the Board informed of Town Affairs; Leads and manages the budget process effectively; Proactively administers the office of the Board of Selectmen, is responsive to individual board member requests (e.g. information), as well as to official Board decisions; Easy to communicate with and to work with; Accomplishes tasks in a timely manner; Provides leadership to the organization, inspires teamwork, good morale and positive results; Has met the goals and objectives set by the board for the evaluation period. Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said on behalf of the board, "We're glad to have Bill here."

COHASSET'S WEEK

Beach association pays sticker fees

Town Manager Bill Griffin met with Sandy Beach Association President Robin Lawrence June 7 to discuss beach stickers. Griffin said Lawrence informed him the person who donated the Sandy Beach property in roughly 1917, did so for the benefit of both Cohasset and Hingham residents. For many years, the Association has purchased 200 beach stickers from the town and sold them to Hingham residents.

After hearing the discussion during the June 5 Board of Selectmen's meeting, Lawrence asked an Association employee if the Association has been paying for the stickers and was told for several years the Association has not been billed for the stickers. When Lawrence found out, he brought in a check payable to the Town of Cohasset for $10,000, which represents five years of sticker fees. Lawrence and Griffin agreed future annual payments will be made in exchange for the stickers.

Village work update

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said work in the Village should hopefully be done by the end of this week. The first crosswalk was completed on Monday and 13 trees, which include chanticleer pears and lilacs, were planted Tuesday. Painting of the streets took place Wednesday night.

Dormitzer said there have been questions raised as to how the town arrived at the plan it currently has and why. He replied well over $300,000 was spent on designs with the Waterfield Design group, and when Town Manager Bill Griffin came on board in January 2005, the town tried to get away from using Waterfield.

Dormitzer said when the project was first put out to bid in January 2004, it included bluestone pavers for the sidewalks, not asphalt, but only one response came in and the bid was too high. The project was redesigned and went out to bid again and the town received a good bid for the $1 million it had left, Dormitzer said. He said the new design did not include streetscape work on Brook and Elm Streets, but hopefully the town will be able to secure additional grant money to improve those areas.

Dormitzer said there has been some question as to why there are "bumpouts" downtown and he said really, there are no bumpouts, only extended sidewalk ramps which comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act. He said the ramps allow for accessibility to handicapped parking spaces. "It was all done with $1 million because that's all we had left," said Dormitzer.

Once the project is complete, Dormitzer said a list will be made of all improvements made and the cost associated with every improvement.

Committee vacancies

Several town committees currently have vacancies. The Cohasset Cultural Council and the Government Island Advisory Committee both have one, three-year seat open, while the Harbor Committee and Historical Commission both have two, three-year seats open. The Economic Development Committee and Harbor Health Committee both have one, one-year seat open. Anyone interested in participating should send a letter of interest to Town Manager Bill Griffin, 41 Highland Avenue.

Committee appts.

The Board of Selectmen appointed Frank Moody, 37 Rustic Drive, to the Harbor Health Committee at its Monday Meeting. Moody served as an associate member to the committee for the past eight months and said he has developed a genuine interest in working with the HHC's members to continue to address the issues with Cohasset's waters.

Moody was also a Naval submariner for 20 years and has been in harbors around the world. He said he is keenly aware of the problems associated with pollutants that are dumped into harbor waters. He was also an active member in Trout's Unlimited and addressed pollution and conservation of streams throughout the northeast.

The board also appointed Pat Martin, 169 Linden Drive, and Stephen Oronte, 2 Bound Brook Lane, to the Cable Advisory Committee. Martin is the co-host of "Our Town," the town's local cable access show, and has been working with both Comcast and the town's local Comcast Access Coordinator, Evelyn Burke since May 2005. She is currently one of six people in Cohasset "certified" by Comcast to use their equipment and film events on its behalf. For the past eight years, Oronte has run organizations and worked with technologies that are at the center of IP convergence, and he is completely familiar with the business models of the telephone, cable and Internet providers. He also works with and understands the implications of Municipal Wi-Fi and various Wi-Fi, Wi-Max, ubiquitous and pervasive network technologies.

Sewer Bd. reorganizes

At its Monday, May 22 meeting, the Sewer Commission voted to reorganize. Sean Cunning will serve as chairman with John Beck as vice chairman and Ray Kasperowicz as secretary.

Town cool to National Grid's plan to boost cell reception

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cell phone reception in some areas of Cohasset is less than crystal clear. To that end, Town Manager Bill Griffin asked Mike Cooper of National Grid to come before the Board of Selectmen at its June 19 meeting to introduce the concept of a Distributed Antenna System which could help remedy the problem.

National Grid is looking to install DAS equipment on several telephone poles in the towns of Cohasset and Scituate and has already begun installation in Hull, to provide wireless telephone carriers better reception in sections of town where reception is poor, resulting in "dropped calls." National Grid already services Nantucket, Andover and Melrose with DAS technology. Cooper said DAS allows better service for multiple wireless carriers without requiring the installation of a cell tower.

"We've been approached by many (wireless) companies," said Cooper, who noted when calls are dropped in an area, it is the wireless provider that receives the complaints. He said to satisfy the carrier's coverage objectives, the companies themselves (although he is not allowed to name specific companies, he said there are four major carriers) have contacted National Grid to pursue a cost-effective DAS solution. In some areas it is very difficult to receive permission to install cell phone towers due to zoning restrictions, and DAS provides an alternative.

DAS allows wireless carriers to locate their equipment at a "hub" which is essentially a small building similar to a shed. Cohasset would likely connect to a hub already in existence in Hull. The signals are then delivered over fiber to the radio cabinets, which are posted to a telephone pole with an antenna at the top. National Grid expects it would implement about 12 nodes in Cohasset to improve cell phone service.

Cooper said currently, there is existing poor coverage between Route 3A and the waterfront. While most of the time dropped calls are a nuisance, Cooper said the town needs to think about public safety and be able to ensure a 9-1-1 call can be made anywhere in town.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said the town currently has three cell phone towers and "They cover the town fairly well." He said some of the areas which do not have good reception, such as Jerusalem Road, have underground telephone wires and no poles which could be problematic. Cooper said when there are no poles to attach an antenna to, the other option is to install a pole, which Dormitzer said would not go over well with residents.

Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St., asked whether the DAS could incorporate wireless internet as well. Cooper said while the company has been talking to a national wireless internet provider and at some point that could be an option, it is not currently.

Dormitzer said the town is interested in providing better service for its residents, but "I'm not sure we shouldn't look into other options," he said. While it seemed to him like a good place to start, he recommended the Cable Advisory Committee take up the task and report back to the board with other alternatives.

— WINDING DOWN THE RUMOR MILL —

AP classes are going strong at CHS

One of the rumors circulating around town is that there were no Advanced Placement courses offered at Cohasset High School this year, and there will not be any offered next year. Middle-high school Principal Joel Antolini said that is not true.

"This year, a total of 120 kids took AP level courses," said Antolini, adding the school offered AP English for grades 11 and 12, AP calculus, AP U.S. history, AP biology, AP Spanish and AP French. The school also accepted credits earned by one student who took an online AP physics course through the Harvard University Extension School.

Next year, the school will again offer AP English for grades 11 and 12, AP calculus, AP U.S. history and AP biology, and will be adding AP European history and AP chemistry. The school will also offer structured level five Spanish and French courses which will meet for two terms, and students will have the option to pursue the remainder of the class on their own through an independent study for AP credit during the second half of the year. Another student has signed up to participate in an independent AP government and civics course.

Antolini said currently, 142 students have signed up to take AP courses next year including 15 students who will take level five languages with the option to pursue the AP standing.

Relay, arts fest make for wonderful weekend

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WONDERFUL WEEKEND

Hello Cohasset. Well, last weekend was a very busy one indeed with the Relay For Life taking place, the Festival on the Common and Father's Day. The American Cancer Society Relay For Life of Cohasset raised over$160,000. More than 600 volunteers walked through the night to help raise funds and cancer awareness. Over 2,500 luminaria were lit to honor cancer survivors and remember those who have died of cancer.

It is amazing to see so many dedicated people come out for this important fundraising event. For more information about Relay For Life or for cancer information 24 hours a day, seven days a week, call 1.800.ACS.2345 or log onto www.cancer.org. The Festival also brings out family and friends from all over to enjoy the wonderful spirit that shines each year on the Common. The weather was beautiful and so many tents, exhibits and art lovers were able to enjoy a weekend filled with beauty. Super job.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations go out to Lindy J. Morde who made the dean's list at Coastal Carolina University for the spring 2006 semester. Super work Lindy.

ALL-STAR FUN

Congratulations to all of Cohasset's students who ended school this past Monday and Tuesday along with others who have finished as well. Let the summer begin...

It was a soggy day, but that didn't dampen the spirits of the players and spectators at the Cohasset Youth Baseball All-Star festivities on June 10th. The All-Star players competed in three challenges: The Golden Arm tested each player's throwing distance and accuracy. Each player was given three opportunities to throw from center field and hit at target at home plate. After a four-way tie and a "throw off", the winner was Christian Allard of the Rangers.

The Home Run Derby and Hitting contest drew the most excitement from the crowd when the future All-Star players ran out and line the outfield fence in hopes of catching a home-run ball! In this contest, points were given for home runs, balls hit to the outfield and against the outfield fence. Each player was pitched seven balls. Patrick Kearney, of the Cardinals, accumulated the most points earning him the Hitting contest champ.

But it was Drew Cobin, of the Mets, who hit the most home runs (a total of four) to win the Home Run Derby championship. Congratulations to these three players and to every CYBSA All-Star !

BAND VIDEO

Some wonderful news from the DeWaal Family. John DeWaal, who is a Music Ed. major and just completed his freshman year at UNH was featured in a UNH recruiting video for the marching band. To see this, go to http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=7NbADK8SuQc

Great stuff John, your family and friends are so proud.

UNITED WAY

Celebrating the civic leadership that is alive in our community, United Way recently honored individuals and corporate and community partners that are helping to make the Greater Boston metropolitan region the best place in the country for children. This year, Cohasset resident Ted Noon, a Vice President at Acadian Asset Management was among those whose leadership and dedication to improving the community was recognized by United Way. At the event, UWMB honored Ted with the 2005 Young Leaders Award for his advocacy on behalf of individuals and families in Greater Boston and bringing UWMB's mission and vision to the future leaders of Boston. This was very inspiring news to receive, keep up the wonderful work Ted.

THAYER AWARD

Thayer Academy's Headmaster Ted Koskores is proud to announce that Lindsey Allard was honored with an award at the Last Chapel and Commencement ceremonies of 2006. Congratulations Lindsey.

HOLY CROSS HONORS

Katie Roche, a third-year student at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, has been named to the dean's list for the second semester of the 2005-2006 academic year. Katie is the daughter of proud parents, Adrian and Sarah Roche of Cohasset. Katie is majoring in history, peace and conflict studies.

BLESSING OF THE FLEET

Join friends from town for the 'Blessing of the Fleet' at the Annual Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party on Saturday July 8th from 5-11p.m. All Parents and Adult Members of the CSC are invited to a New England style Lobster Bake and Silent/Live Auction to benefit the Club. The Party is BYOB and will be held at the Cohasset Sailing Club rain or shine. Tickets are $40pp payable to Cohasset Sailing Club and are available by phone from Barbara Golz at 383-1597 or mail your check to 25 Wood Way. Donations for auction items are welcome (and needed)- if you have anything you would like, contact Erik Golz 383-1597 or egolz@comcast.net!

TENNIS ANYONE?

Here is another reminder about this great event coming up in July. Good weather is finally here and now is the time to get in shape for the 17th Annual Tennis Tournament to benefit Children's Hospital. As you may or may not be aware, each year a specific area within Children's Hospital is selected to fund raise for. In the past seven years, this group has given between $15,000-$23,000 to some of the neediest areas thanks to your generosity. They have included cardiology, autism, oncology, neonatal brain injury, kidney research and this year, the monies will be donated to the pediatric AIDS program. Many players ask why Children's Hospital is chosen; in short, the tradition began here in Cohasset in the 1950's with the inception of the tournament. Jesse Cox and her neighbors organized the tournament for Children's. The committee for this event strive to continue this tradition. Children's Hospital is close to all of their hearts as we all have utilized their expertise with our families. They all feel as a community, that everyone is so fortunate to have this world renowned hospital in our backyard! Save the dates for the event, July 22nd and 23rd (Saturday and Sunday).

Wedding gown display well worth a visit

The Cohasset Historical Society has partnered with Dependable Cleaners to bring its collection of antique wedding gowns back to their original state for its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings." The exhibit opened June 8, with a "wedding luncheon." The exhibit will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the historical society, located in the Pratt building on S. Main Street, for the duration of the summer.

Right, June Withington stands next to the dress worn by her mother Margery Hamilton, which is now on display at the historical society as part of its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings." The exhibit will be open throughout the summer during historical society hours.

This dress was treated by the experts at Dependable Cleaners in Cohasset Village, which partnered with the Cohasset Historical Society for its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings."

These four ladies have been busy for months readying the Cohasset Historical Society's collection of antique wedding gowns for the society's latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings." From left to right are, Martha Hurtig, chair of the society's costume and textile department, Executive Administrator of the historical society Lynne DeGiacomo, Co-President of the historical society Kathy O'Malley, and Laura Abrams, curatorial assistant.

Many of the dresses for the historical society's latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings," were restored by Dependable Cleaners. As a member of the Association of Wedding Gown Specialists, Dependable Cleaners was able to safely bring many of the very delicate garments in the society's collection back to life.

Right, wedding dresses dating back to the 1800s are currently on display at the Cohasset Historical Society, located in the Pratt building on South Main Street. The society's latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings," will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday throughout the summer

Deer Hill students Hunter Forrer, Devin Kennedy, Anne McElgunn, Nicholas Schubert, and Danny Cronin pose with the pop art sculpture which was also on display last weekend at the Arts Festival on the Common.

A ride through American Pop Culture

The sculpture uses the style made famous by well-known sculptor, Pepon Osorio.

This pop art sculpture was designed by the Deer Hill students on Arts Night this past May. Using American Pop Culture as a theme, the children collected objects of their choice including plastic toys, sequins, logos, and other knickknacks representing our society. The children glued objects to the bicycle, also an important part of our society, to create this wonderful masterpiece.

The sculpture uses the style made famous by well-known sculptor, Pepon Osorio. An avid collector of pop cultural knickknacks, Osorio often sculpted using plastic dolls, miniature toys, beads, and game pieces, including emblems representing his Latino heritage.

The sculpture, which was on display in the Kids Tent at the Arts Festival on the Common, drew a crowd of admirers!

Fredrick Guzasky directs music school in Hingham

Conservatory Teaching in Your Community, an organization originally begun as a satellite school of the Boston Conservatory some 10 years ago, is now an independent music school opening a new location at Hingham Music at Lincoln Plaza, Route 3A, Hingham.

Still managing the school is director Dr. G. Fredrick Guzasky, along with a staff of professionals, all with master-level-plus degrees in music. Guzasky teaches at MIT in Cambridge and Bridgewater State College, and also performed and taught in Russia. He has a large private studio of students of piano, organ, harpsichord and cello.

All ages and levels of instruction are given – from the 4-year-old beginner to the 84-year-old retiree, with instruction for professional performing musicians in between. Music of all periods and styles is taught – from Bach to blues. In addition to individual instruction in piano, organ, voice, cello and flute, various seasonal classes are offered in music history, music theory, church organ for pianists, The Glory of the Arts in Russia, African drumming and Opera 101, among others.

The conservatory's staff at its various locations, includes: Guzasky, Sargis Karapetyan, Sarah Brady, Evelyn Czaja, Kathy Planeta and Maureen Connolly.

The new location is having open registration in the areas of piano, organ, voice, cello, violin, flute and one or more of the aforementioned classes. The teachers are all professionals with training in pedagogy as well as their own musical instruments. Conservatory Teaching in Your Community makes musical training available to everyone.

School buildings to be monitored 24/7 by police or it could choose to bring the item to Town Meeting in the fall and ask voters to approve having the town pay for it as a capital expense. If the town chose not to fund the project, Walsh said the Foundation Reserve funds would be used. The state gave Cohasset $21,000 in November 2004 and $205,000 in October 2005, for a total of $226,000 and so far, none of the funds have been spent.

"We have parents covering the doors and I think they're tired," said School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy. The doors at all three schools are locked during the day and Osgood does not have a buzzer which allows the main office to let people in. Parent volunteers have been staked out at the main door of the school all year long to open the door and sign guests in. MacCarthy said there would also be a cost savings to do all three projects at the same time. "In an ideal world, this shouldn't even be coming before us because this is a capital item. But, it's our students and our staff," she said.

Member Rick Flynn agreed and said if the school department waits another year to put in a new system at Osgood, it will undoubtedly cost more to do it separately. He said with the bomb threats and vandalism which have taken place at the high school this past year, "I think security is pretty important and I don't think we can count on volunteers to be our security."

"I think security is pretty important and I don't think we can count on volunteers to be our security."
— Rick Flynn, School Committee

Walsh said the new system would be "state of the art," but did not mention the police department would be able to have 24-hour monitoring of the schools. She also said Griffin put together a Request for Proposals with the Osgood Project included, to allow all three to be bid on at the same time.

In an interview after the meeting, Griffin said the town was able to bypass the RFP process. He explained after the Water Department made upgrades to the wastewater treatment plant and its water system as a whole, it decided to install cameras to monitor the new system and plant, just in case anything ever goes wrong. Those cameras are in the process of being installed as are the monitors at the police station.

Griffin said after consulting with Town Counsel, who in turn contacted the state, he was told the town could bypass the RFP process and purchase the equipment from the same provider to enable the police station to keep tabs on both the water and school department security systems using the same equipment. The only requirement is that the company that installs the equipment (as it does not have to be the company the town purchases from) is certified for installation by the state.

School Building Committee Chairman Scott Collins said his committee has had the money set aside for the Deer Hill and middle-high school portion of the project for more than one year. "This has been a long time coming," he said, adding the committee had been looking at a variety of different security systems even before the string of vandalism and bomb threats which took place this year. He said the company offered the town a great price, as all three systems together will cost roughly $230,000 and it made sense to have a system installed that would be compatible with the system at the police station. He also said there were several benefits with the system chosen which the other possibilities did not include.

Collins said the Building Committee is "very excited. This is a great system and we hope it will be able to deter any future incidents." He said the goal is to install the equipment over the summer when there aren't any children or many staff members in the building, and have it up and running in the fall.

Fees on town side of the budget ledger are going up

number of pumps that would be affected the most are the companies that pass the cost along to the larger corporation.

The sealer of weights expenses are estimated to be roughly $3,507 for fiscal 2007. Sealer permit revenues for the pas three fiscal years have been $1,335 in fiscal 2004, $1,275 for fiscal 2005 and the year to date estimate for fiscal 2006 is $1,281.

The building department has three other permitting functions which generate revenue, for which Griffin said the town is on track and should not increase fees. Building permit fees bring in the most revenue for the department, and it currently charges a fee of $10 per $1,000 of construction cost. The fee for residential building permits was increased from $6 to $10, effective July 1, 2005, while the commercial fee remained at $10.

The town has calculated the total fiscal 2007 expenses for building permit-related activities (including all direct and indirect expenses) will be $123,260. In fiscal 2004, building permit revenues were $121,090. That number increased to $200,299 in fiscal 2005. The year-to-date revenue total for fiscal 2006 is $221,980. Griffin said it is important to note, towns are not allowed to set fees to bring in more money than it costs to run the program or it is considered a tax. However, building department fees are different because "they are driven by activity in town," and it is therefore hard to gauge how much revenue will be brought in.

Griffin said both the towns of Scituate and Hingham charge $10 per $1,000 for residential construction. Scituate also charges $10 per $1,000 for commercial construction, while Hingham charges $15 per $1,000. He said Cohasset's revenue is right where it is supposed to be.

Griffin said the total fiscal 2007 expenses for wiring permit-related functions will be roughly $23,838. Revenues for the past three fiscal years have been $16,535 in fiscal 2004, $16,435 in fiscal 2005 and $22,400 for the year-to-date fiscal 2006 calculation. Griffin noted in addition to the usual wiring inspections, the wiring inspector also provides direct electrical services for the town itself.

The plumbing and gas permit expenses for fiscal 2007 are estimated to be roughly $10,000. Revenues for the past three fiscal years have been $14,964 in fiscal 2004, $14,065 in fiscal 2005 and $15,391 as a year-to-date for fiscal 2006.

Selectmen also approved Griffin's recommendation to increase the town's ambulance billing rates to 30 percent above the allowable Medicare rates and that it authorize the Town Manager to adjust ambulance billing rates in the future, based upon the recommendation of the town's ambulance service. In addition, he suggested the town contract with a third-party collection agency to pursue past due bills.

Cohasset contracts with Comstar, which handles all of the town's ambulance fee billings and collections. Comstar handles billings for more than 200 municipalities in New England. On Wednesday, June 7, Griffin met with Rick Martin, President and CEO of Comstar to better understand the town's billing rates.

Griffin said Comstar recommends billing rates for ambulance-related activities, including, but not limited to, Advanced Life Support service, Basic Life Support service, oxygen, airways, intravenous therapy, defibrillation and mileage.

When the Cohasset Fire Department transports a patient to a hospital, a report is generated and sent to Comstar which details the range of medical services provided. Comstar then bills and collects those fees, primarily from Medicare and health insurance providers, and then transfers the revenue back into the town's bank account.

Under Medicare regulations, only certain fees for services are allowed. Griffin said for example, Medicare charges $435 for ALS service, $48 for oxygen, and $146 for cardiac monitoring. It is Comstar's common practice to recommend local billing rates 30 percent above the Medicare allowed rates. Griffin said this is based on a national analysis that Medicare reimbursement rates are approximately 70 percent of the true cost of services. "At present, our rates are approximately 24.5 percent above the Medicare allowed rate," he said.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln agreed with Griffin's recommendation but said if the fees are raised too high, the town would run the risk of having residents not pay their bills. "We've been very successful at collecting," he said, adding the town is collecting roughly 91 percent of its billings.

No more free rides for some students student the school department could see $217,260 in revenue next year. However, there is no way to tell just how many students would continue to ride the bus if charged a fee.

DeGennaro said a one-day sampling of actual bus ridership showed the middle-high school has 287 riders, Deer Hill has 231 and the Osgood School has 257. Based on the sampling of actual bus ridership, the school department would more likely see around $102,780 brought in, assuming no loss of ridership.

Regardless of whether a student is bused for free or not, every child will need to have a bus pass with the exception of special needs students who attend out-of-district placements or receive special transportation in district. Applications for bus passes must be received by the school by the end of July, and will be sent to the home for parents to fill out and return. No student will be allowed to board the bus without a valid bus pass on the first day of school. Based upon income, households may be eligible for transportation fee waivers.

Students who drive themselves to school will also be charged $180 to have a parking space for the entire year. The school has 120 spaces available and parking will be granted to seniors first. A one-day sample was taken on May 16 and there were 112 total student cars parked on that day. Using that figure and assuming there are 112 students driving next year, the school could see $22,320.

But there will be administrative costs associated with the program, as billing, collecting, handling applications, generating bus passes and other tasks will need to be handled by a staff member. Total administrative costs are anticipated to be roughly $15,000.

School Committee member Jamie Williams said she was in support of implementing the fees. "We need to protect the educational environment," she said, and collecting money to take care of transportation costs will help ensure money earmarked for the classroom does not go toward paying for transportation. "My priority is to not touch the classroom," she said.

Members of the School Committee said it is important for parents to know the parking sticker for students is separate from the all-facilities stickers which are purchased for access to the RTF and parking at Government Island and Sandy Beach.

Joining the team to fight cancer

If you find yourself letting the little things in life bother you, then make it a point to either take part in, or attend next year's Cohasset Relay For Life.

The fact is those of us lucky enough to have our health really have it all. Health is a gift, one that we take for granted until a potential killer strikes like cancer.

Cancer takes so many forms and can attack and invade a person in so many different ways causing everything from very serious to not-so-serious illness. There is virtually no one on the planet who has not been touched by the disease in some way.

Harry St. Onge, the Cohasset Relay For Life chairman, notes being a cancer survivor can be a tough community to belong to. He explained the community could lose someone like Cohasset's Mardi Wood, for whom this year's Relay was dedicated. Mardi, who passed away in February, had walked the Relay for three years. This year her family and friends formed "S-Miles for Mardi" and raised more than $15,000 at the Relay.

The Relay is as uplifting and as it is sobering. Seeing 61 cancer survivors walk the track in the Survivors' Lap puts faces on the fight to find a cure for cancer and to increase awareness about early detection and treatment of the disease.

Seeing literally thousands of luminaria surround the track Friday night and the candles on the bleachers spelling out the names of Mardi Wood and Lisa Audet — a 34-year-old Hingham High teacher who passed away earlier this month – give all of us courage. However, there is also the stark realization that some have ultimately lost their battle with this dreaded disease.

Many may not realize that until the 1950s, cancer was considered such a death sentence that the disease was only discussed privately, behind closed doors. Babe Ruth, who died of complications from throat cancer in 1948, played a significant role in cancer awareness. His legions of fans were stunned when it was announced that Ruth had cancer. How could this happen to an American icon? Ruth literally brought cancer out of the closet.

We have come a long way in the past 60 years.

Another aspect of the cancer fight that the Relay brings to light is the involvement of children. Teams made up of kids have highlighted each of the 10 annual Cohasset Relays. These young people – many of whom know a family member or friend with the disease – are about the best example of really great kids that can be found anywhere.

Hingham's Katie Egan, a cancer survivor, gave the opening address on Friday night. Katie, now a senior at Hingham High School, was in the fourth grade when she was diagnosed with cancer. For two years, her elementary school classmates came together with a Relay team for her, "The Yellow Polka Dotted Penguins." Katie, who is the daughter of Cohasset Building Commissioner Bob Egan, has walked with the "Hingham Highkers" for three years.

Organizing a team and participating in the overnight event is no small feat, but the kids seem to understand their efforts pale in comparison to the courage of those with cancer.

Each year, the American Cancer Society Relay for Life is a candle of hope lighting the future for all those whose lives have been darkened by this feared and potentially deadly disease.

The Relay for Life raises funds for cancer research, memorializes the immortality of love for those who have lost their valiant battles against cancer, grants life-saving hope to those now engaged in that battle, and celebrates the lives of cancer survivors.

The Relay for Life is there for those who want to help and those who may need help.

We take our hats off to the American Cancer Society and all those involved with the Relay For Life. We thank you.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Relay raises upwards of $160K

TO THE EDITOR:

The final numbers are not in but the 2006 Relay held in Cohasset and encompasses Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate will have raised over $160,000. Our average raised per team will be around $5,000. This is a tremendous effort for all those who participated and contributed to this event.

To put this into perspective nationally there are over 4,400 Relays every year. The national average per Relay is $80,000. The national team average is over $1,800. We are a small group but we are very efficient, productive and we are making a difference.

What always amazes me about the Relay is the outpouring of community spirit and the number of youth teams that are involved. Nearly one third of out teams were youth teams. We had the "Tenacious Teens" from Hingham raising over $15,000. The combined effort of all the youth teams was $52,500. This is remarkable considering they do this all on their own. They organize their own teams, plan their own fund raising and actively participate in the event. We have to be proud of this generation because they will only be getting more active as they move through life. They have to be proud of themselves because their efforts really make a difference in the success of our event.

There are so many people and organizations to thank that have supported us thorough the year. But a few that we can always count on for support and space are Cohasset High School for the use of the library for our monthly meeting and the use on the field to hold the event, the Second Congregational Church for the use of their facilities for our team meetings, for all the business sponsors for their contributions of money, food or gifts, for all of the team captains for their support and enthusiasm and for all of the volunteers that helped make it work and we can not thank the team members enough because they are the people that raise the money.

Our four towns are great communities and we should all be proud to be part of them. The Relay is a true community event drawn together to create awareness and raise money to fight cancer. We were very successful doing both and we really enjoyed process.

Harry St.Onge
Relay For Life Chairperson

Keep positive momentum going

COMMENTARY

LAURA STONE

Even though it's summer, we still need to move ahead. Our schools, senior citizens, town projects still need to figure out how to best proceed.

We are making progress with advancing our conversations about what is possible for the future of our schools and town. We have better understanding of some of the issues and opportunities most important to the people who attended these meetings. Now we move into the strategic phase. This phase is where the Action Champions, the people who have stepped forward and are taking responsibility for topics they have passion about need to work through how to best help this work get traction and continue to make progress.

At our last meeting Rick Flynn shared that we ideally need to bring together our governing bodies and the Action Champions to continue our work. This would be a great next step if they are willing and interested in helping to create a town strategy to address the critical issues and opportunities. Let's think together now what this might look like and include.

Also, many people have been behind the scenes helping to bring this work forward.

Huge thanks goes to Sarah Porter who was willing to have the PSO sponsor these events and help get the word out to all the schools and parents. Steve Fusco created the website and continuously updated it during an extremely busy time at work. Soon Tracy Longo will be continuing this work to help keep us all updated. Lou Harvey compiled all the reports to make it easier for us to have "one stop shopping" in preparation for our second meeting. In addition Lou and Terry Green are working together to figure out how to best make the budget work more transparent. Mike Gill help set up the logistical needs at the high school during one of the busiest times of the year. Joe McElroy and Paul Carlson helped set up meeting rooms along with providing support and suggestions to move ahead. Jim Armstrong loaned us the great sound system for our first meeting. Lee Stone has helped to keep communication progressing and helping with everything else in between. And there are many people doing great work in many other areas.

Even though it's summer, we still need to move ahead. Our schools, senior citizens, town projects still need to figure out how to best proceed. As a reminder, if you are an Action Champion, please submit your session summary report to info@togethercohasset.com. We look forward to seeing what occurred!

On July 13, the Action Champions will be meeting at the Paul Pratt Library to move the work forward. All are welcomed.

Laura Stone lives at 46 Gammons Road. She served as facilitator at the recent "What's Possible" forums held at the middle-high school.

Why village work decisions were made

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Train dialog is ongoing

We'd like to make several things very clear. The MBTA, Cashman, Balfour Beatty (CBB) and the Town are in constant dialog. Yes, we do disagree on some key, and some not so key, issues. But, we do talk constantly with both of them and our dialog remains open. We also need to keep in mind that our goals are not necessarily the same. The MBTA is tasked with getting a rail system designed, constructed and running on time and on budget. At the same time, CBB, as the design build contractor, is charged with designing and then building the rail system to meet the MBTA specifications, schedule and budget. Our job as the Town's representatives for the project is to protect our residents and get the best rail system we can within Cohasset, as well as operate as an information pipeline between our residents, our Town Government and the Project. In this role, we are accountable to the Town Manager, who of course, works for the Board of Selectmen.

You might ask, why all of this detailed explanation? Simple — we don't want to leave anyone with the impression that there is not constant dialog between all parties. We do meet, we do discuss and we do solve a lot of issues, both large and small. Issues are resolved almost daily. However, there are also issues, both large and small which have not been resolved. Some of these are more difficult than others. That is why the Board of Selectmen has instituted Informal Dispute Resolution with the MBTA. Officially that process kicked off on June 21, 2006 with a meeting between the Town and the MBTA.

One last Greenbush item: We are being told that North Main Street should be open in 1 to 2 weeks.

Revitalization

There has been a lot of discussion about the Revitalization Project among various residents. We'd like to share some of the background and decisions. You may remember that this project first began in the very early 1990s with a small group of citizens who proposed a project to renew and improve the appearance of the Village. In 1996 several generous residents provided the seed money and effort to begin a study, hire a project leader to assist in the initial conceptualization among residents in order to create a vision for Revitalization.

The Cecil Group, was hired to turn the original ideas into a rough design. About the same time as the rough design was being finalized, the Town made an application for a Public Works Economic Development (PWED) grant from the Massachusetts Department of Transportation to cover the cost of this Revitalization project. This seemed like an appropriate move for the Town because in the Greenbush Section 106 Historic and Archeological Mitigation hearings the MBTA agreed that it would endorse grant applications from the five Greenbush Towns. Also, the Revitalization Committee had built a strong collection of data required to apply for a PWED grant. At the same time, the Town had hired its first Town Planner, who had the capability to pull all the data together and write a very cogent grant request. All of these things coalesced for the Town to write an excellent grant request which was well received. The grant for $1.5 million was awarded by the Secretary of Transportation, the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen at a ceremony on the Common near the duck pond.

In the fall of 2002, the Town Manager hired Waterfield Design Group to do the final design and put the project out to bid. Many meetings and hearings were held and designs were done and redone. The project finally went out to bid in summer of 2004, with a very complicated set of basic specifications, including 4 sets of addenda and 51 pages of complex drawings. The cost to the Town for the engineering design over the two-year period was slightly more than $300,000, leaving just less than $1,200,000 for the construction phase. The bid was structured as a lump sum bid. Only one bid was received in 2004 and it was for more than the amount remaining in the grant. So, here we were with not enough money to do the job.

In the winter of 2005 the Revitalization Committee was reconvened to decide how to approach this project. It was decided to:

- Simplify the project. i.e. Remove the multitude of options and drop back to a more basic design which included new storm drainage, new asphalt sidewalk and streets, upgraded crosswalks and a few small decorative touches including 11 new street trees.
- Partition the project into a series of sections, so that if the bid came in too high, the Town could select some of sections for construction assuring us of the ability to proceed with construction.
- Change the way the job was bid from "Lump Sum" to "Unit Pricing." ("Lump Sum," as the name implies, is a fixed price for a total scope of construction. "Unit Pricing" permits the Town to pay only for the actual work done. Under Lump Sum, for example the contractor assumes the risk of having to deal with the possibility of excavating buried ledge to install the new drainage pipes, while under "Unit Pricing," if the contractor does not encounter any ledge we don't pay for it.)

The results of this work were presented to the Board of Selectmen in March of 2005. They requested that a public hearing be held before proceeding. On April 7, 2005, a public hearing was held in the Selectmen's office for the public to ask questions about the new specifications and the Town's approach to Revitalization. Only, three citizens attended and very few questions were asked.

New crosswalks finally get installed in Cohasset Village.

At this point, the Town decided to put the project out to bid. By the way, the new bid package had about 50 percent fewer pages of specifications and only 31 pages of plans. The specification revisions cost the Town an additional $20,000.

This time we had three bidders and the low bidder was selected. However, due to substantially higher energy costs resulting in much higher construction costs, only the most basic portion of the project could be undertaken within our budget. There was not enough money to do Brook and Elm streets nor to do South Main Street from the Red Lion Inn to Spring Street. By carefully monitoring the actual work being done under the "Unit Pricing" method we were able to save enough money to go ahead and do Brook and Elm Street drainage. So now, when we go back to do these streets all of the underground drainage will have been done.

So, if we didn't have enough money to do South Main Street why did we do it? That's an interesting story. The Town DPW had already decided that this stretch of South Main Street was critical and needed to be repaved in 2002 and had earmarked Chapter 90 money (a special fund from the Commonwealth for road repair) for this purpose. When we compared the cost of using the standard Commonwealth pricing for the necessary South Main Street repairs the amount that was bid under Revitalization contract was less expensive and included brand-spanking new sidewalk with granite curbing. That seemed like a no brainer so we included it in the Revitalization project, but paid for it from Chapter 90 funds.

So, at this point despite three weeks of rain delays, and almost 16 years of hard work by a large number of citizens, we are finally nearing the end of a very important upgrade to our village. We've tried to keep both residents and merchants appraised throughout the project. We'll continue this until all is finished.

Getting the hang of soccer

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

If there is anything in life, outside of eating okra, that I never got the hang of it was soccer.

Oh, I played it myself. I played it for the Thomas A. Watson School team, mostly because it was the only fall sport on the curriculum and it sure beat doing pushups in the schoolyard during recess.

My graduation from the eighth grade coincided with my graduation from soccer.

I am reminded of my brief soccer career — the height of which was my dash for home from the playing field of Watson Park through wildly swaying trees as the Hurricane of 1938 approached — every four years when men who take the game much more seriously than I gather to decide who plays it better than anyone else in the world.

They're doing that right now in a number of venues in Germany and they are drawing crowds that would make the Red Sox and the Evil Empire turn green with envy. Just the other day, Portugal and Iran drew 48,000 to a World Cup game in Frankfort.

At the same time, our professional soccer team, the Revolution, was playing DC United of Washington before 16,208 in Gillette Stadium, Foxboro, where Tom Brady and the Pats pull in nearly four times that many on a Sunday afternoon with another 16,000 tailgating in the parking lot with their radios on.

Why has soccer never caught on in the United States, and don't tell me it's the okra of the sports world because it does have some good qualities that raise it to level of, say, lima beans.

For one thing, there's the scoring. Or, rather, there's the no scoring. How can you get excited over a game where a 1-0 victory is considered a rout? The latest US effort in Germany was a 1-1 tie with Italy. After two games it's one goal for, three against. Tom Brady can top that in a second with one pass.

Then there's that off side rule where a player can't take a pass if he is nearer the goal than the passer when the ball is passed to him. At least I think that's what it says. After that, there is a long list of exceptions known only to the referee and, if the crowd's reaction means anything, he won't tell.

That doesn't seem to bother soccer fans everywhere but in the United States. The record crowd is 199,854 for a World Cup game between Brazil and Uruguay in Rio in 1950. The Sox and the Evil Ones wouldn't draw that in a three game series if you counted the players and the press, too.

A soccer player named Alan Shearer signed a 15.6 million pound ($22.4 million) contract with Newcastle United in the British league in 1996. That certainly compares favorably to the paychecks of Alex Rodriguez with the Yankees and Manny Ramirez with the Sox.

Real Madrid in the Spanish league paid 13 billion pesetas ($66 million) to Juventus in 2001 for the services of Zinedine Zidine and the biography of Brazilian star Pele has been translated into more than 100 foreign languages.

That ain't okra, or even lima beans.

Personality contrasts can't hamper wedded bliss

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

You wouldn't know it by the way we dress, but my wife and I are generally very compatible. She likes to laugh at her own foibles and shortcomings and so do I. Her malapropisms alone are hilarious. She likes to sing, and I like to turn up the radio. She enjoys spending time alone, more and more as time goes on it seems, and I like to tag along when she's alone in case she needs some company. There are good reasons we've been married for 13 years. I know because I feel like I explain them to her on a weekly basis.

But I'd be lying if I said there weren't a number of things she could definitely work on. For example recently we had to replace our hamper. Now, there are two steps to replacing an object in daily use: 1) buy a new object, and 2) throw out the old object. I feel the order here is important, but my wife tends to throw out the old hamper or automobile or defibrillator first, then leisurely shop for a new one. I think she's afraid that if she doesn't chuck the old hamper swiftly, with extreme prejudice, I will intercept it on the way to the dump and use it to store rusty bolts rather than part with it, eventually suffocating my family under the weight of all this repurposed junk. Where she gets these paranoid theories, and exactly how often they've been confirmed in the past, I'd rather not say. The point is that once the children and I began tossing our dirty clothes in the hamperless corner of the upstairs hallway, it wasn't long before we felt free to toss them pretty much anywhere we pleased. The kids have even taken to tossing their used underwear on the lawn, the effect of which, when combined with an old canoe and my systematic under-fertilization of the grass, has been the decrease of property values in our neighborhood by an average of 15 percent.

In a nutshell my wife tends to act rashly and emotionally, whereas I take the more prudent approach of never acting at all. One morning as she waded through the dirty clothes in our upstairs hallway she decided on a whim that its walls needed repainting in a different color. As always I counseled patience but she ignored me and drove off to buy the paint. Then, as if just to prove me right, she got pulled over on Forest Avenue and her car was towed because I had neglected to register it that year. So you can see our different styles are often at odds.

Sometimes I wish our Catholic retreat had prepared us a little better for these personality clashes. For the non-Catholics out there, this retreat is a weekend excursion engaged couples take to monasteries or convents where you learn the ins and outs of married life from people who have taken vows of poverty just to avoid the ordeal you're facing. In truth I have very fond memories of our retreat, which took place in a hilly, secluded part of Gilroy California. As we sat with several other couples listening to a young priest talk about the various methods of birth control sanctioned by the church, the blessings of a life full of surprises, and the tax benefits of a large family, my bride-to-be took copious notes, which I thought was a great sign, while I ogled the nuns. I couldn't help it, I've always had a thing for over-dressed women. For me the more that's left to the imagination the better, because I have this unbelievable imagination. Anyway the class was going fine and I was making lots of new cloistered friends, but that night I sensed a certain distance between me and my fiancée. Then I realized that for the first time in two years we were sleeping in separate quarters. Oh I'm kidding of course! I don't really have a thing for nuns. Though I have to say I felt a strange attraction to the priest. Anyway, getting back to my betrothed, to whom I'm also strangely attracted, was difficult after spending time with those nuns. I'm sure I don't need to tell you. I was spoiled for good. But I did go through with the wedding that fall and it was a lovely, fun time. Every nun I invited showed. They even enjoyed my bachelor party. I still keep in touch with the ones who talk.

You know, when I think about how much fun my wife and I have had together it seems awfully tacky to harp on the minor differences between us. I'm going to ask her to stop doing that. And to use the old hamper I rescued from the incinerator while we wait for a neighbor to leave us a new one some night.

Recent rains caused raw sewage overflow

COMMENTARY

JIM DRYSDALE

After the recent heavy rains the Waste Water Treatment Plant was unable to deal with an increased flow, the tanks overflowed, raw sewage filled the plant and then poured into James Brook and flowed onto properties surrounding Jacobs Meadow. The situation was made worse by the tide gate which blocked flow to the sea. There have been several such incidents. These overflows raise health safety concerns that should be addressed before new sewer connections are made.

The health issues are obvious. Sewage failures also occurred in towns on the Merrimac River. In these cases, the danger was immediately reported to the media and the public repeatedly warned to avoid contact with the river and sea water on affected beaches. However, I am unaware of any such warnings to residents of Cohasset with this or previous incidents. I think the town is morally obliged to warn residents and those using the harbor or consuming possibly contaminated seafood of this problem. Without this warning the town is also exposed to potentially damaging lawsuits.

I think the town is morally obliged to warn residents and those using the harbor or consuming possibly contaminated seafood of this problem.

In dry periods, the plant usually treats about 200,000 gallons per day but this can increase several fold during floods so that much more water can enter the system from outside sources than from connected homes. The plant is therefore presently operating with only a small safety margin. This inflow problem should be corrected before the safety margin is further reduced by the proposed sewer expansion. Otherwise we can expect more discharges of raw sewage.

The tide gate adds to the problem. It is ill suited for flood control and is designed primarily to limit entry of sea water. However, most of the flooding in the downtown area comes from James Brook not the sea and the State-mandated gate settings are not appropriate for dealing with increased stream flow. The gate should be replaced with a more suitable system. Serious consideration should also be given to building a retention pond on James Brook above town centre to control floods as was recently expensively recommended by two engineering firms.

Finally, it is quite remarkable that a safety bypass was apparently not installed in the treatment plant to allow untreated sewage to be discharged through the present outlet to the sea. This would prevent further damage to the plant and serious health risks to the plant operators and residents near Jacobs Meadow.

Jim Drysdale lives at 4 Cedar Acres Lane.

HEALTH NOTES

Measles can still be dangerous

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On May 5, an outbreak of measles began in the Back Bay. By June 4, seven people had been infected. The source was a computer programmer who had flown in from India on April 24th. According to the CDC, measles is one of the most infectious diseases in the world. It occurs most often in the late winter and spring. Symptoms are a few days of fever, followed by a cough, runny nose, and conjunctivitis (pink eye). Then a rash starting on the face and upper neck, spreading down eventually covering the body. After about five days, the rash fades in the same order it appeared.

Infected people are contagious from about four days before their rash starts to four days afterwards. The measles virus resides in noses and throats of those infected. When they sneeze or cough, droplets spray into the air and the droplets remain active and contagious on infected surfaces for up to two hours.

Measles is unpleasant, but the complications are dangerous. Six to 20 percent of the people who get the disease will get an ear infection, diarrhea, or even pneumonia. One out of 1000 people with measles will develop inflammation of the brain, and about one out of 1000 of those will die. It's therefore imperative for people to get vaccinated. The measles vaccination program in the U.S. has caused a greater than 99 percent reduction in measles compared with the pre-vaccine era when approximately 450,000 cases and 450 deaths were reported each year. Now most measles cases like the Back Bay outbreak originate offshore.

The vaccine is effective. More than 95 percent of the people who receive a single dose of the so called MMR (for measles, mumps and rubella) vaccines will develop immunity to all three viruses. A second gives immunity to almost all of those who did not respond to the first dose. If you wonder whether you are immune to measles, mumps or rubella, you can have a simple blood test to measure the strength of the antibodies in your system to these illnesses. Also, if you do not wish to have the triple MMR shot for you or your children, you can receive monovalent (one vaccine at a time)shots rather than the trivalent MMR.

More than 95 percent of the people who receive a single dose of the so called MMR (for measles, mumps and rubella) vaccines will develop immunity to all three viruses.

In January, Health Notes spoke about the philosophy behind vaccination programs and the risks of thymerisol, a mercury derivative, in causing harmful side effects in some recipients. Since that time, the DPH has begun providing thymerisol free vaccines to doctors. Accordingly, there is little reason for Massachusetts doctors not to take advantage of the free vaccine provided by the State.

The most common reaction following MMR is no reaction. However, 5 to 10 percent of the people receiving the MMR vaccine experience a low grade fever and a mild rash.

Infants should be given vaccines only after their first birthday because most infants born in the United States will receive passive protection against measles, mumps, and rubella in the form of antibodies from their mothers. These antibodies can destroy the vaccine virus if they are present when the vaccine is administered and cause it to be ineffective. By 12 months of age, almost all infants have lost this passive protection.

A second dose of MMR can be given anytime, as long as the child is at least 12 months old and it has been at least a month since the first dose. However, the age at which the second dose is required is generally mandated by state school entry requirements, so contact the school nurse for advice.

Certain Adults need to receive the MMR vaccine, but many don't. You should get the measles vaccine if you are: are a college or trade school student, or other student beyond high school; work in a hospital or other medical facility; travel internationally, or are a passenger on a cruise ship; or are a woman of childbearing age.

People who received "live" measles vaccine in the 1960s do not need to be revaccinated. Those vaccinated prior to 1968 with either inactivated (killed) measles vaccine or measles vaccine of unknown type should be revaccinated with at least one dose of live attenuated measles vaccine. This recommendation is intended to protect those who may have received vaccine available in 1963-1967 which was not effective. Contact the Board of Health or your doctor if uncertain.

Most older people have already been exposed. People born before 1958 lived through years of epidemic measles before the first measles vaccine was licensed. As a result, they are very likely to have had the measles disease. Surveys suggest that 95 percent to 98 percent of those born before 1957 are immune to measles. This applies only to measles and mumps, and does not apply to rubella.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

'Certain minds are still closed to crux of crisis'

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

I applaud Laura Stone for her contribution in attempting to bring the town together. After I led a group at Session II of What's Possible and observed subsequent School Committee and Selectmen's meetings, it is obvious that there is a level of denial on the part of override proponents.

It is discouraging to hear school committee member, Rick Flynn, at a What's Possible meeting state that he does not like the "negative" tone of the name of a session that insinuates there is a problem in the system. At the same meeting, school committee chairman, Adrienne MacCarthy declared that after all the coffees and cocktail parties they conducted prior to the election, she is amazed that only 1,342 residents are educated. Coincidentally, that is the number of people who voted for the highest override.

Even with impartial investigations and misleading statements exposed, certain minds are still closed to the crux of our crisis. They are more concerned with rhetoric and absolute trust than with being intelligent leaders researching truth and substance in doing what is best for the students and residents.

Those of us who have been battling for accountability and fiscal responsibility recognize that problems in both the school and town have emanated from a cycle of poor monitoring, a lack of oversight and an acceptance of overrides to correct flawed management. On the part of the school, the 2005 School Budget Investigation Report confirmed what so many of us had been discussing for years.

There have been by-law changes made at Town Meetings over the last few years by concerned taxpayers to alleviate some of these problems. The latest by-law requires the compilation of monthly financial reports which are to be available at the library. The school reports at the library are months behind in addition to being imprecise. This situation has been consistently brought to the attention of the superintendent's office and most recently to chairman of the school committee.

In order for the public to have trust in the schools, information must be communicated and be comprehensive, transparent, up to date, accurate and readily available. The first goal of the school Strategic Plan is: "to improve communication among parents, community, staff and town government." It appears they are oblivious how to achieve this objective even though this is a long-standing dilemma. The local papers have repeatedly offered them space and the schools even have a website though it is not consistently maintained. But most importantly, the town has been requesting for years the school network their financial records and the school committees and administrations have been resisting.

We don't need officials to tell the press and the citizens what in their opinion is public information. We also don't need the chairman of the school committee informing the selectmen how they should be conducting their meetings when discussing financial aspects of the school.

Budgets must have numbers that actually add up and make sense. Fee for services should cover the actual costs and if not the taxpayers should be informed and agree to subsidize them. Programs should not be scuttled due to misleading information.

The last What's Possible session indicated by the number of attendees, the majority of whom were the override opponents, that there is a great deal of interest by at least one faction of the community to achieve solutions. Nothing can be accomplished until both sides come to the realization that money alone won't solve the crisis we face in our schools.

L.C. "Lee" Jenkins lives at 198 Jerusalem Road.

Film, reception on global warming

NATURAL VIEW

JIM SHIPSKY

"In 39 years, I have never written these words in a movie review, but here they are: You owe it to yourself to see this film. If you do not, and you have grandchildren, you should explain to them why you decided not to," wrote Roger Ebert in the Chicago Sun-times.

Ebert is referring to "An Inconvenient Truth", a documentary on global climate change. The film will be opening at Hingham's Loring Hall Theater June 30.

You are invited to a reception following the 7:30 p.m. screening June 30 and July 1. Co-sponsored by Old Ship's Green Sanctuary Team and Sustainable South Shore, the receptions will gather in Old Ship's Parish Hall, 107 Main St., diagonally across the street from Old Ship meetinghouse. It's about a one-minute walk from the theater. The "official" part of the reception will last only 30 minutes. Refreshments will be served. You will neither be inundated with information nor be asked for money.

The intention of the reception is to provide a safe container where you can voice your feelings and thoughts about the film and what is happening to Earth.

The intention of the reception is to provide a safe container where you can voice your feelings and thoughts about the film and what is happening to Earth. This will be an opportunity to listen to ourselves and others, voicing our feelings and concerns, our hopes and fears. We'd love this to be a community building experience. The purpose is not to debate the issues, not to agree on collective action. Only share our responses to the film and connect with other South Shore residents.

I encourage you not only to see this important film, but also to stretch your envelope and invite family members, friends, or neighbors to join you for the film and reception.

The film opened my eyes to the debate over whether humans are really affecting the climate. Science magazine analyzed 928 peer-reviewed scientific papers on the subject published between 1993 and 2003. Not one (zero percent) dissented from the international scientific consensus that human activity is dramatically increasing the earth's temperature, in ways that will bring severe consequences. But because of promotion by corporations like Exxon/Mobil of a handful of global warming deniers, 57 percent of the news stories during the same period presented the issue as if there were a serious scientific debate. Energy industries admitted their strategy to "reposition global warming as a debate." In other words, our mainstream medias lied to us.

A friend of mine gave me a wonderful sentence that can be applied to leaders, schools, businesses, products, you name it. Try it yourself. Here it is: "All (insert category here) must now be judged by the extent to which they ignore, inhibit, or foster a mutually enhancing relationship between Earth and humans.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Matt Mulvey kickoff at Greenbush Line site

Weymouth resident Matt Mulvey will kick off his campaign for Plymouth-Norfolk District State Senate on Tuesday, June 27, from 7 to 9 p.m., at the Jackson Square Restaurant & Tavern, 1530 Commercial St., Weymouth, next to the Commercial Street train station on the Greenbush Line. Mulvey noted, "Since one of my major campaign issues is transportation, I felt this was the perfect place to hold my campaign 'kick-off' celebration."

The Greenbush project will restore commuter rail service on the 18-mile long Greenbush rail line through Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate – towns represented in the Plymouth-Norfolk Senate District. Mulvey said he would also advocate for a cross-town bus service on the South Shore. Especially interested in transportation, education and affordable health care, the senatorial candidate has been meeting with residents and business owners to get their views on the issues.

Matt Mulvey said he would also advocate for a cross-town bus service on the South Shore.

A Massachusetts certified building commissioner, small business owner and president of the New England Building Code Association, Mulvey is a member of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and has volunteered for Father Bill's Place in Quincy and the Talking Information Center in Marshfield.

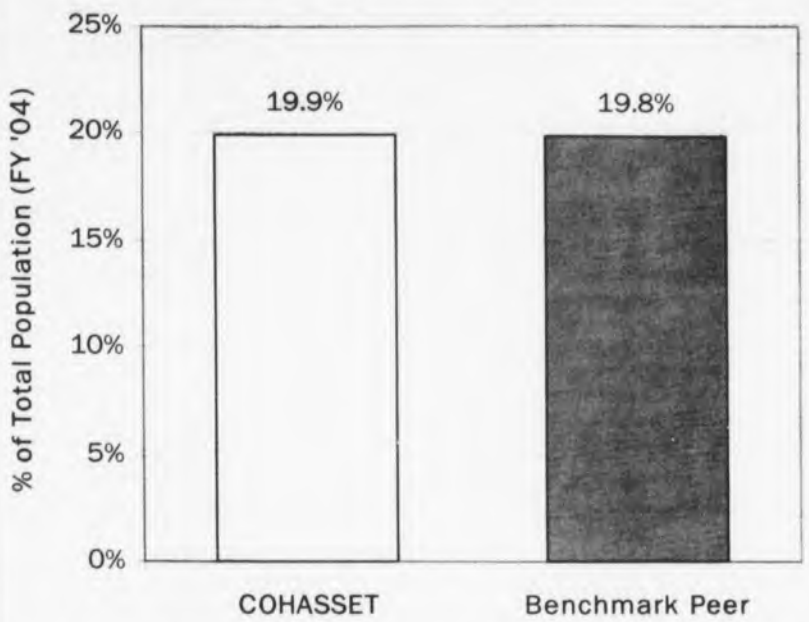
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

School Population Burden



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts.

This chart shows what percentage of Cohasset's total population is enrolled in the schools. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. The percent of the population in the schools is a demographic trait that has a large impact on education costs. All other things being equal, a community with a higher percentage of population enrolled in the schools will have to spend more on a per capita basis to achieve the same level of per pupil education spending.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-a-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

For more information about Municipal Benchmarking go to municipalbenchmarking.com

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series. Once the school benchmarks are complete, the series will feature those about general government, including the police and fire budgets.

Peace Forum supports petition to end war

Residents of the district can sign the petition on Tuesday, June 27, from 11:30 a.m. to noon, during the group's weekly Peace Vigil.

Members of the Hingham-based South Shore Peace Forum are working with the American Friends Service Committee's Cambridge office on a petition calling for state representatives to endorse a non-binding resolution that asks the President and Congress to end the war in Iraq.

Residents of the Third Plymouth District, which covers of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, are being asked to endorse the petition which reads: "Shall the representative from this district be instructed to vote in favor of a resolution calling upon the President and Congress of the United States to end the war in Iraq immediately and bring all the United States military forces home from Iraq?" The Third Plymouth District is represented by Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham.)

The petition is being circulated throughout Massachusetts by the AFSC. Residents of the district can sign the petition on Tuesday, June 27, from 11:30 a.m. to noon, during the group's weekly Peace Vigil on North Street in front of the Hingham Post Office.

Water main flushing through month of June

Cohasset Water Department will be flushing water mains during the month of June. Temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the areas to be flushed each day. Notice will also be provided on the local cable access channel, Channel 10.

"Water main flushing helps to remove the mineral deposit build up which may have accumulated in the water mains. It is an important part of our ongoing commitment to providing high quality drinking water," noted water superintendent Eileen Commane.

Schools adopt wellness policy

Junk food being expelled

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selling candy or soda on school grounds is prohibited. So is using food as a reward, unless proper approval is obtained 24 hours in advance. These are just some of the requirements set forth in the district's new Cohasset Public Schools Wellness Policy, presented to the School Committee June 15 by high school Assistant Principal Michael Gill.

The Department of Education requires all school districts adopt a wellness policy, as there is a direct relationship between student well-being and student achievement. Gill said the policy which has been drafted will be assessed at the end of one year, and includes both healthy eating and physical activity guidelines. "This is not a policy we're married to," he said, but one those on the committee are proud of.

Those who drafted the policy include: Gill, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy, Middle School Assistant Principal Beth Sternala, health teacher Maureen Duffy, Athletic Director Ron Ford, girls soccer coach Debbie Beal, wrestling and golf coach Torin Sweeney, Deer Hill Health Educator Jane Gregory, Food Services Director Bob Levy, Nurse Karen Murphy, PSO president Sarah Porter, Town Health Agent Joe Godzik and community representative Chartis Tebbetts.

Gill said there has been a national movement afoot for schools to get the junk out of the cafeteria and start offering more healthy choices. As the school's former Health Education Coordinator, he said he has been working for the past 25 years to have soda removed from the school. Today, only water, milk and fruit juices are sold. "It hasn't happened overnight," he said.

The policy states that students' lifelong eating habits are greatly influenced by the types of foods and beverages available in their daily environment. Cohasset's policy says all foods and beverages sold or served to students, including reimbursable school meals and those available outside of the school meals program, must meet at minimum, the nutritional requirements established by federal, state and local statutes and regulations. This means the schools must offer a variety of fruits and vegetables, offer low-fat and fat-free milk and nutritionally equivalent non-dairy alternatives. Half of the served grains must be whole grains. Healthy choices must be offered in any vending machines or concession stands and only water, milk and fruit juices may be sold on school grounds.

All food and beverages sold as part of a school-sponsored fundraising activity must follow the wellness policy, which means no selling of candy bars or cookies. Refreshments served at parties, celebrations and meetings during the day must also comply with the standards. "Cohasset Public Schools should limit celebrations that involve food during the school day," the policy states.

The wellness policy outlines goals for creating an environment conducive to healthy eating and being physically active. The school should be clean and safe and allow enough space and serving areas to ensure all students have access to meals with a minimum wait time. The identity of all students who eat free and reduced price meals will also be protected and the school will be sensitive to those students who have food allergies.

Nutrition education will also be offered for students in a developmentally appropriate way. They will be taught the skills they need to adopt and maintain healthy eating behaviors as well as maintain physically active lifestyles. At the elementary level, students will participate in weekly physical education classes, daily recess, and experience physical activity as combined with the curriculum when appropriate. At the middle-high school levels, students are allowed physical education opportunities as the schedule permits. All students at the middle-high school will be scheduled for instructional units in health education and/or physical education each school year.

A complete copy of the Cohasset Public Schools Wellness Policy will be posted on the district Web site at www.cohassetk12.org. A hard copy can also be obtained at the high school main office.

Improvement plan in place for high school

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As the school year comes to a close, Cohasset Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini is already thinking ahead to the next. As is done every year, Antolini presented a School Improvement Plan for the middle-high school to the School Committee at its June 15 meeting, which sets goals for the year ahead to coincide with the district's Strategic Plan.

Bringing forward the plan is the first step in building the fiscal 2008 budget, as it will help set funding priorities. Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan and Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley presented their school improvement plans to the committee at its June 1 meeting.

The middle-high school's School Improvement Council drafted the improvement plan and includes Antolini, students Nils Sceery and Brooke Allen, parents Bernadette Faulkner, Maria Kennedy, Melody Maurer and Mary Kay Richardson. Due to the fact that teachers were working without a contract for much of the school year, there was no teacher participation on the committee, Antolini said.

"It is a very ambitious plan, but certainly one we can work with to achieve the blue ribbon of excellence," said Antolini. Blue Ribbon Schools of Excellence, Inc., is a non-profit organization established to improve academic excellence for all children. BRSE uses criteria developed from 20 years of research from the United States Department of Education's former National Blue Ribbon Schools Program and has developed a Blueprint for Excellence assessment instrument that provides schools with a road map for school improvement.

The Council identified four broad areas of concentration with 14 specific areas of focus for improvement. The objective areas fell under the umbrella of: academic excellence through curriculum, instruction and assessment; a professional learning community through teacher quality, training and professional development; safe schools through discipline, leadership and governance; and aiding student preparation and needs through student support programs and services.

Goal one as set by the Council is to increase student proficiency in core subjects, preparing them for higher education, employment and responsible citizenship prior to graduating. To achieve that goal, the school will need curriculum support, which will require establishing a process for curriculum renewal in grades six through 12 to ensure currency in the curriculum at all levels. The school will also need to establish differentiated teaching methodologies and strategies to meet varied learning styles, abilities and learning needs, to enable all students to meet high standards. A measurement system to assess program effectiveness should be implemented as well.

Goal two would ensure all teachers continue to be highly qualified in the subject(s) they teach. The school will therefore need to recruit and employ qualified professional and support staff whose knowledge, skills and experience continuously improve student achievement. The school will also need to provide professional development opportunities and support teacher efforts to build professional learning communities.

Goal three is to promote a sense of social responsibility, good citizenship and life-long learning within the students. The school will strive to maintain the culture that is conducive to learning, providing all students with a safe, respectful and positive environment. The school will also continue promoting a supportive and orderly environment that facilitates the pursuit of academic achievement for all students.

Goal four is to project population growth and identify staff, program and resources needed in the next five years. To do that, the school must provide students with academic support services. Those identified as needing additional help, whether it be anything from English language services to Individual Education Plans to counseling or psychological help, will receive the appropriate assistance to make adequate progress, to achieve their learning goals including graduation. All students will also be given an understanding of the requirements of challenging career opportunities and will participate in career education activities. The school will also aim toward providing students with co-curricular activities that demonstrate talents outside the classroom.

The full Middle-High School Improvement Plan will be posted on the district Web site at www.cohassetk12.org or can be picked up as a hard copy at the high school main office.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Joint meeting

A budget meeting for the School Committee, Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee has been tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, June 28. The boards are waiting to hear what the House and Senate will decide regarding Chapter 70 funding before setting a firm meeting date, as it could be pushed back depending on whether the House and Senate have come to a decision on the funds by the meeting date. Chapter 70 is the major program of state aid given to public elementary and secondary schools. In addition to providing state aid to support school operations, it also establishes minimum spending requirements for each school district and minimum requirements for each municipality's share of school costs.

Warrant format could change

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he has been in touch with Director of Finance Michael Buckley as well as Jan Braverman, an accounting package software designer, to see if they could design a school financial report, or Warrant, to meet the needs of the School Committee. School Committee member Steve Fusco has not signed the Warrant since mid-May and did not sign the report at the committee's June 15 meeting. He said he will not sign any further Warrants until its format is changed.

Fusco would like to see more specific information provided in the Warrant, including a summary of line items, what was budgeted, what has been spent and what is left to spend. Currently, he feels he would have no idea what he is signing off on based on the information being provided by the school department.

Fusco brought up his concern at the May 19 meeting and DeGennaro said he was not sure he would be able to change the Warrant. He said he would be willing to provide copies of all invoices and receipts for Fusco to look over at every meeting, and brought that information to the board's May 25 meeting. Approving the Warrant was therefore moved to the end of the meeting to give those who wished to look at the school department's records extra time. While Fusco said he was willing to go through the records, he felt he shouldn't have to.

By working with Buckley and Braverman, DeGennaro said he is optimistic changes can be in place by August. "Whenever we have it ready, we'll submit it to the board," he said of the revised report.

School web site update

At the request of School Committee member Steve Fusco, the school district Web site will be updated to include contact information for members of the School Committee. The district Web site can be accessed at www.cohassetk12.org.

Title I school grant funding decrease

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset will see a decrease in its Title I grant funding for fiscal 2006. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the district will only receive roughly $26,000 in Title I funding, and the tutor position which had been increased from half-time to full-time will now be kept at a half-time position.

"We didn't receive it because we're not a 'needy' community," said Walsh.

According to the Department of Education, Title I is the largest federally funded education program, and it provides resources to eligible school districts. There are four grants that comprise the Title I allocation for the 2006-2007 school year, and eligibility is determined based on the percentage of students in the district who are considered to be in poverty, according to the latest census data. (The federal census poverty calculation is different than the Massachusetts low-income calculation, which means the number of students considered to be in poverty will be significantly lower than the number of low-income students reported to the Department of Education).

Under No Child Left Behind, school districts receive funding to ensure all children have a fair, equal and significant opportunity to obtain a high-quality education and reach, at minimum, proficiency on state academic standards and state academic assessments.

According to the DOE, for the 2006-2007 school year (Fiscal 2006), Title I funding will be cut overall by $28 million nationally, and Massachusetts will most likely lose almost 10 percent of its Title I funding. The projected reduction means Massachusetts would go from $230 million to roughly $207.5 million, which will affect virtually every district in the state.

Policy, standards update slated

Assessment tests under microscope

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the School Committee have formed a policies and standards sub-committee, which has been charged with delving into not only the board's policy manual, but the standards which have been set for the school district as a whole. The last time a thorough review of the schools' policies was conducted was October 2003, and members of the board felt it was time for an update.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy as well as members Jamie Williams and Alfred Slanetz met with Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh Monday, June 5 for their first discussion session. Williams gave a brief overview of the meeting to the rest of the School Committee at its June 15 meeting.

Williams said the group decided the School Committee policy manual will be split up into 10 sections and one section per month will be brought back to the committee "all marked up," with changes for the committee to approve. Williams said the group has many examples of policies given by the Massachusetts Association of School Committees which it will use to help Cohasset personalize its own policy manual.

Williams said in terms of setting standards, it will be vital for the committee to think about the principles it believes will drive the schools toward achieving and maintaining excellence. "Where do we want to be? In the top 10 of the state? In the top 100 in the country? I think these are very realistic goals for us," she said.

Williams said to help monitor student achievement, the schools should set aside proper funding to purchase assessment tools, such as standardized tests, for its students, which will allow the district to measure student progress. "I'd like the board to give the consensus to leave enough money (in the Foundation Reserve account) to provide for assessments," said Williams. The school department applied to the state and was given a Foundation Reserve Award, also known as "pothole program" funds. Cohasset was one of four communities to receive funding, based on significant reductions in state aid. Cohasset received $21,000 in November 2004 and $205,000 in October 2005, for a total of $226,000. So far, none of the funds have been spent and the School Committee is trying to decide what the best use would be.

Williams suggested bringing in a professional from one or more of the testing companies to provide an overview of what the tests assess and help the district decide which tests would be most beneficial for the district to use. Currently the schools use the Stanford Achievement tests for grades three to six and Williams suggested expanding those tests to encompass grades one through six. There is currently around $14,000 in the school budget for assessment tests. She said because Cohasset's top competitors are private schools, it would do well to look into the tests those schools use and implement those as well.

MacCarthy said she would feel uncomfortable talking about the tests and would prefer to have the professionals give a presentation to the administration which gives the tests and uses the results. "I'd prefer if they'd present to you and your staff," she said to Walsh, adding "I'd feel inadequate."

However, Williams said as members of the School Committee, "We set the vision and the standards. We need to understand." MacCarthy said, "I look to my administration to guide me in that process."

Member Steve Fusco suggested getting in touch with other school districts to see which assessment tests they use and how successful they have been, which the committee agreed to. "I'll be interested to hear what they have to say," said Williams.

All-Stars shine at skills contest

It was a soggy day, but that didn't dampen the spirits of the players and spectators at the Cohasset Youth Baseball All-Star festivities on June 10.

The All-Star players competed in three challenges: the first was the Golden Arm, which tested each player's throwing distance and accuracy. Each player was given three opportunities to throw from center field and hit at target at home plate. After a four-way tie and a "throw off," the winner was Christian Allard of the Rangers.

The Home Run Derby and Hitting contest drew the most excitement from the crowd when the future All-Star players ran out to line the outfield fence in hopes of catching a home-run ball. In this contest, points were given for home runs, balls hit to the outfield and against the outfield fence. Each player was pitched seven balls.

Patrick Kearney of the Cardinals accumulated the most points, earning him the Hitting contest champ. But it was the Mets' Drew Cobin who hit the most home runs (four) to win the Home Run Derby championship.

Congratulations to these three players and to every CYBSA All-Star. For more information about this and other baseball and softball news, go to our new web site, www.cybsa.net

Legion team 2-2-2 through first six games

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

It was an unusual first week of the season for the Cohasset American Legion baseball team, to say the least.

Post 118, which features players from both Cohasset and Scituate, won a couple of games, lost a couple of games in its first week of competition in Zone 6 East and saw it finish with a baseball rarity, back-to-back 12-12 ties.

The highlight of the week was the first of those ties with perennial power Braintree Sunday night at Braintree High School.

Greg Malley's two-run double with two outs in the top of the seventh inning allowed Post 118 to pull even with a program that had won seven straight zone titles before being ousted by Milton the last two years, and had won its first four games this season before Sunday's deadlock.

The next night saw Cohasset

The Cohasset High softball team did not go all the way to become state champions in 2006. But the players compiled a very impressive 14-7 season record which fans and players alike can feel very good about.

For the first time in Cohasset softball team history the players earned the right to a home game in the playoff opener. The Lady Skippers also received a 4-seed in the Division 3 tournament. Then, their luck ran out against the GNB Voc. Tech squad.

From the opening practice in April, head coach Deb Bostwick faced a difficult task of molding a small but strong number of upperclassmen with a plethora of sophomores and freshmen.

The end result? Impressive. In prior years, one or two dominant players carried the team. Not in 2006. The lineup this year featured more than 15 consistent, solid athletes.

In a recent interview with the Mariner, Bostwick shared an interesting perspective about her players.

"In the beginning of the season, having a lot of freshmen on the roster created some problems," admitted Bostwick. "The upperclassmen weren't used to playing with them, and the freshmen were nervous. Things began to click when everyone realized we were all playing for the same cause."

The biggest click went off on May 11th, a day the Skippers broke tradition. They earned their very first victory against Hull in Cohasset softball history. As a result of this upset victory, the Skippers gained self confidence. Then tournament

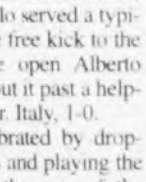
WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN



Elation, exhaustion and acute anger are all pretty strong feelings and emotions to deal with.

Try to handle them all at the same time, and, well…

The North End was the place to be Saturday, as the United States was set to take on Italy. Ghana's stunning performance in victory over the Czech Republic served as a delectable appetizer to what turned out to be a football feast that no one who watched and cared will ever forget.

Italy fans were clad in traditional blue, and there was plenty of blue winding through the narrow streets and back roads of Boston's most wondrous neighborhood. A lot of it found its way to Caffe Paradiso on Hanover Street, where the football fans in blue outnumbered those in any other color by about 2-to-1.

The place was packed, whistles were blowing, people were screaming, the bar ran out of cold beer, and everyone was sweating proverbial buckets.

Then, the game started.

Both teams missed golden chances early in the contest, with fans of both sides summarily responding with loud, bemoaning groans. "Oooooooohhhh!!!!," the most beautifully anguished sound in sport.

For Italian fans, the sorrow turned to joy in the 22nd minute, when Andrea Pirlo served a typically immaculate free kick to the head of a wide open Alberto Gilardino, who put it past a helpless Kasey Keller. Italy, 1-0.

Gilardino celebrated by dropping to his knees and playing the air violin, with the roar of the Azzurri fans around the world serving as the sound. To the American fans in Caffe Paradiso, it was an ugly cacophony.

It didn't take long for that tune to change. Five minutes later, Clint Dempsey – who played a fabulous match – lofted a cross into the area, right to the feet of Italy defender Cristian Zaccardo. Surely, this would easily be dealt with by Zaccardo, leading to a regrouped American attack, or perhaps even a corner.

And then…

Is that the ball in the back of the net? What just happened? Was it offside? Wait, are the American players celebrating? Is this really a goal? It is, it is! A goal, a blessed goal!

The fact that it was an own goal did not matter, we were tied with the Italians. Only once before in my life have I hugged complete strangers: when the Red Sox won the World Series.

Make it twice.

It didn't take long for the mood to shift again, thanks to Daniele De Rossi spilling Brian McBride's blood with a ghastly elbow to the face. Fittingly, De Rossi received a red card, and the players in the blue shirts turned from tough, respected opponents to vile, wicked enemies that needed to be punished.

The Italians did not do themselves any favors with American fans by proceeding to flop at every given opportunity. By this time, I had lost any and all touch with reality, and began hurling my disgust through the television screen and into Kaiserslautern with words unfit for print in these pages.

I did, however, bestow a bit of admiration on Italy's band of divers by informing many of them that they were, in fact, number-1. The ones that I revered less were given the number-11 salute.

And if I had three hands, rest assured that referee Jorge

Larrionda would have been ranked 111th in my book after his dastardly wretched decision to send off Pablo Mastroeni with a straight red on what was clearly a yellow card offense.

After many of us stepped outside in the 95-degree weather to cool off, we came back in and were immediately treated to Act 2 of the Larrionda Circus. A most unjust comedy of errors continued when the Uruguayan gave Eddie Pope his second yellow card.

Traditionally, a referee would have called a foul and administered a warning, particularly given the stage and importance of this particular game. Not Larrionda, however, who was determined to make himself The Show. May he be banned from the sport for the remainder of eternity.

Following Larrionda's latest atrocity against the game were the longest 45 minutes of my life. It was right around this time that I said out loud Italy could very well win on a Pirlo free kick; he is the best in the world at this particular skill, and very much in detriment to my mental well being, he had two such opportunities within five minutes of Pope's sending off. He missed on both, barely.

In the 65th, DaMarcus Beasley, who has otherwise provided nothing for the Yanks, sent American fans into a frenzy with what appeared to be a go-ahead goal. More jumping, more hugging, and then more disdain as the goal was called back for offsides. It was the proper call, though that didn't stop Larrionda and his henchmen from receiving a few more words of scorn.

The U.S. fans in attendance then had to sweat out the last 25 minutes, quite literally, as the Yanks were done attacking and valiantly defended against the burgeoning Italian onslaught. Keller came up with the biggest save of his life on Alessandro Del Piero, and there was more rejoicing.

By the 85th, I was in full Jerry Tarkanian mode, biting my perspiration soaked red t-shirt while my nerves were worked like a speed bag. After a couple more near misses from the Italians, Larrionda made one of his few good decisions all day by blowing his whistle to end the match.

By this point, no one in Caffe Paradiso had anything left. Least of all me, as I was a shell of my usual self. Numb and utterly useless, I hugged my friends, milled about the place for 10 minutes, and sauntered off.

The U.S. had lived to see another day.

Thursday afternoon saw England take on Trinidad and Tobago, with the first 80 minutes serving as a complete debacle against the sport, unless you were rooting for our Caribbean friends.

At Bad Abbot's in Quincy, there were a few of us doing just that. After their draw with Sweden, the Soca Warriors became the darlings of the tournament. A team from a nation of 1.3 million improved its fan base tenfold in the span of 90 improbable minutes.

With England misfiring on all cylinders, it looked as though Trinidad would pull off the impossible yet again. With each clumsy attempt at goal by the overwhelming favorites, the English fans grew more and more tense and troubled, while those pulling for T&T began to see the light at the end of the tunnel.

It was not meant to be, as in the 83rd a cross from David Beckham found Peter Crouch, a tall, gangly, freakish-looking football player, who for once put his 6-foot-7 frame to good use to head it past Shaka Hislop and into the net.

Bullies that they are, the English put one more on the board, thanks to a splendid strike from Steven Gerrard.

For England, another horrid victory. For Trinidad and Tobago, a dream deferred. For fans at Bad Abbot's, another round, please.

The first half of Sunday's Brazil-Australia match was a bleak picture of blunt obduracy, save for a marvelous back-to-his-target, over-the-head pass from Ronaldo to Kaka, whose shot whistled just inches wide of glory for the Brazilians.

The near 100 patrons at Terra Brasili's in Quincy were ready to shake the very foundation of the building with excitement, but had to wait until the 49th minute when Adriano scored on a marvelous left-footed strike.

The Brazilians up to that point had not looked very, well, Brazilian. But, it didn't matter when that ball hit the back of the net, as those in attendance let loose a roar that may very well have reverberated back to the streets of Rio de Janeiro.

The people were singing, the Brahma was flowing, and the Brazilian colors formed a cascading sea of yellow and green within the restaurant.

The Socceroos controlled the next 40 minutes of the match, time and again piercing an at times overmatched Brazilian defense. Only mediocre finishing and two wonderful saves from Dida kept a zero next to Australia's name on the scoreboard.

And once again, that was of little consequence when Brazil scored, this time in the 90th minute on a goal from Fred. The celebratory singing was just a little louder this time, as the final whistle blew and Brazil was on to the second round.

Another less-than-spectacular showing from the five-time champions, but try telling that to the fans who wore their yellow and green shirts and wove their flags with pride.

Mark Goodman, a CNC regional sports editor, will write a weekly World Cup column until the competition's conclusion on July 9. He can be reached at mgoodman@cnc-.com. Also, be sure to check out his World Cup blog at www.futbolguy22.blogspot.com.

After an undefeated season, the Cohasset Blue Jays softball team last weekend walked away with the 2006 Cohasset Major League Softball Championship title. The coveted honor entitles the girls to ride the fire truck next spring during the annual CYBSA Memorial Day parade. A Blue Jays flag will be raised during the ceremony and will be displayed throughout the 2007 softball season.

fever began to spread through the dugout.

Day after day the rains came down, but the weather never dampened player enthusiasm.

"The team chemistry really clicked near the end of the season," explained senior co-captain Melissa Crowley-Buck. "It would have been nice to have this earlier in the season, but it definitely helped us out later on."

The Skippers' defense proved important in their 14 victories over the season. With the senior leadership of captains Katie James, Erin Liddell, and Crowley-Buck, along with Emily Nash and Emily Savage, the Lady Skippers mounted a defense lethal to their South Shore League opponents.

Bostwick said Liddell was "solid as a rock" in controlling the infield. Sophomore Anna Haggerty also stood her ground very well at third base. In the outfield, Crowley-Buck's high level of communication tied everything together.

Juniors Christina Pinkus and Virginia Spofford teamed up on the mound to create an intimidating pitching staff. Kristin Monaco turned heads with her consistent play behind the plate.

So what finally led to the team's downfall? Simply, a lack of hitting. There were a few exceptions. Crowley-Buck finished the season with two doubles, two triples, two home runs, and 16 RBI. Monaco got on base an impressive 23 times, with her quickness leading to 17 stolen bases.

"We just had trouble connecting," explained Bostwick. "If we can improve our hitting and work on increasing our intensity, we will be a force to reckon with."

Bostwick's comment raised the key question: can the Skippers match this or beat it next year? The graduation of the "fab five," as Bostwick likes to call them, will certainly leave holes in the lineup.

Yet, the younger players and their skills should fill the graduation void. This year's juniors, along with Haggerty, will provide plenty of experience for the '07 squad. Additionally, the undefeated JV team will give Bostwick additional depth in her selection of the 2007 varsity roster.

Cohasset will certainly need another strong lineup next year to contend with the highly competitive SSL. Along with strongholds like Abington, the Skippers will face East Bridgewater at least twice. The Vikings will move from the larger Patriot League to the SSL next year. The Vikings will certainly be a team to watch.

Bostwick summed up the season with some very positive words.

"I'm extremely proud of all the girls," she said. "We created a lot of firsts. The upperclassmen have established a strong program, and we will continue to build into next year."

Cohasset's Mike Grimm unloads a shot that found the back of the net during the Skippers' 13-11 win over Scituate in the Division 3 state semifinals, a big part of a memorable year for the Skippers. Next week, the Mariner looks back on the boys' championship season.

have to settle for a 12-12 tie in its home opener with Holbrook, who came from behind in the late going after trailing by seven runs at one point. Cohasset is now 2-2-2 and in the chase for a playoff berth.

"We've played well at times and we're off to a pretty decent start," said Post 118 head coach Fred Caffrey. "We do need to tighten up defensively. In our losses, we have given up some unearned runs, and I believe six of the runs we allowed against Braintree were unearned. Still, we finally broke loose with the bats against a very good Braintree team and we seem to be hitting right now."

It looked like Cohasset might have squandered a chance for a big early-season upset when Braintree rallied from deficits of 3-0 and 10-5 to take a 12-10 lead into the seventh inning. But reliever Ryan Ferriter stranded two more runners in scoring position, and Cody Morgan got things going in the seventh for Post 118 when he reached on an error.

Morgan was forced at second on Rob Dongara's grounder, but a wild throw on the double play attempt moved Dongara to second. Kevin Signorelli drew a walk, and both runners moved up on Shane Caffrey's grounder to first base.

Up stepped Malley, and he delivered the biggest hit of the Cohasset season so far when he lined his game-tying double a few feet fair down the first base line. Signorelli went to the mound to pitch the bottom of the seventh, and allowed only an infield hit to Tom Huddleston as the game ended after seven innings because Braintree had another game to play against undefeated Milton.

"That was a huge hit by Malley and we had some big hits in the game," said Caffrey. "I really like the way we swung the bats. Our pitchers really battled, starting with (starter) Chris Bryan)." Post 118 struck first with three runs in the second. Ryan Ferriter reached on an error to lead off the inning, but was out when Marcus Joyce's ground ball hit him. Joyce was safe at first, Bryan walked and Kyle Pinkus singled to load the bases with one out.

Dongara was hit by a pitch to force home the game's first run, and Signorelli followed with a single to chase home two more runs and give Cohasset a quick 3-0 lead.

That first lead didn't last long as Braintree answered with five runs in an inning that started when the first two batters reached on errors and the first run was forced home on a bases loaded walk. Post 118 got back to within 5-4 in the third when Malley led off with a single, went to second on a single by Joyce and scored on a single to left by Pinkus.

Cohasset then erupted for six runs in the fourth to go up, 10-5. It looked like the inning would produce nothing when the first two batters struck out, but Signorelli and Caffrey drew walks and Malley reached on an error to load the bases.

Walks to Ferriter and Joyce forced home two runs to give Post 118 a 6-5 lead, Bryan followed with a three-run double to put the visitors up, 9-5, and Pinkus capped the inning with a run-scoring double, and Cohasset suddenly had a commanding five-run lead.

Braintree, however, grabbed a pair of runs in each of the next two innings to close the gap to 10-9, and then took the lead with three more in the sixth to take that 12-10 advantage into the seventh inning.

"I liked the way we answered back the two times they took the lead," said Caffrey. "We kept swinging the bats and some good things happened for us."

Cohasset's week began in an uneventful manner, but a win nonetheless when Post 118 was awarded a forfeit victory over West Roxbury. A 4-1 loss to last year's Zone 6 East runnerup Weymouth followed on Wednesday, and then an agonizing 6-5 loss to Morrisette at Adams Field in which Post 118 took the lead with three runs in the top of the seventh only to see Morrisette respond with three runs in the bottom of the seventh for the win.

Post 118 got back on track Friday night with a 3-1 win at Stoughton as Greg Ouellette pitched a nifty three-hitter backed by strong defense, and Caffrey and Tim McGrath each went 2-for-3 at the plate. Then came the back-to-back ties as the first six games have truly produced a little bit of everything.

Cohasset played Quincy yesterday and will host unbeaten zone leader Milton on Friday, and after a road game Sunday at Canton at 5 p.m., Post 118 hosts Weymouth, Quincy and Braintree next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively. All home games are at Scituate High School at 5:45 p.m.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Recreation offers sports clinics

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer the following clinics. For more information or to register, call the Recreation Department, 41 Highland Ave., at 781-383-4109.

South Shore Basketball School – The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with South Shore Basketball School, is accepting applications for a summer basketball clinic, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two sessions will be available during the week of Monday. July 10, through Friday, July 14, at Cohasset High School gymnasium. Session I is for boys and girls, ages 7 through 11, and will be from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Session II is for boys and girls, ages 12 through 15, and will be noon to 3 p.m. The fee for the five-day program is $125. This year's sessions will be led by Dorian Bryant, current coach at Cohasset High School.

Brochures and registration forms are available at Cohasset Town Hall in the Recreation Department office.

South Shore Soccer Camp and Squirts Camp – Cohasset Recreation Department has announced that registrations are being accepted for South Shore Soccer Camp's summer clinics, which take place for one week only, Monday, July 31, through Friday, Aug. 4. Jon Anderson will direct the camp again this year at Milliken Field, Cohasset.

There are two camps offered this summer for two different age groups. For boys and girls, ages 7 to 14, the SSSC will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The boys and girls camps are operated separately. The one-week session is $255 per participant, with a $20 discount for a second child. The fee includes a shirt and a ball for each participant, available the first day of camp. For boys and girls ages 4 to 6, the Soccer Squirts Camp will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m., each day. The price is $90 per Squirt, with no discount for a second child.

Complete the application form in the brochure at the Cohasset Recreation Department office to register. Space is limited – early registration is advised.

Youth Lacrosse Clinic – This one-week clinic is for boys and girls entering grades three through six in the fall. While the program is run by the Cohasset Recreation Department, it's open to players from other communities. Brothers Jamie and Ronan Buick will direct the program.

The clinic will take place the week of July 17 to 21, from 8 to 10 a.m., at Milliken Field. Sessions take place rain or shine – in all conditions except lightning. Players need full equipment. For girls, this means a stick, goggles and a mouth guard. For boys, it includes a helmet, including mouthpiece, gloves, arm and shoulder pads and a stick.

Players should also bring their own water, juice or sports drink to each day's sessions. The fee for the lacrosse clinic is $85. Call the Recreation Department to register.

SSBC Summer Baseball Camps upcoming

Cohasset, Hingham & Braintree

HINGHAM- The South Shore Baseball Club's popular summer camps will soon hit fields in Cohasset, Hingham and Braintree.

"All of our campers will enjoy a valuable and rewarding experience at any of these SSBC summer camps," SSBC president/director Frank Niles Jr. said. "Cohasset, Hingham and Braintree are all great baseball towns and we really enjoy having our camps there every summer. Our expert staff of qualified professionals will help kids to improve their skills and enjoy the great game of baseball at the same time."

All campers are grouped according to age, ability, physical maturity and previous experience. Instructions will range from basic fundamentals to advanced skills. Each will play a minimum of one game per day.

Individual attention will be emphasized in all aspects of baseball. Pitching, catching, defense, base running, and hitting will be featured in special sessions and lectures. Any camper needing specific areas of improvement will receive special attention from SSBC's expert staff of qualified professional coaches.

The Cohasset camp for youngsters 5-12 will be held June 26-30 at Milliken Field.

The annual Hingham Summer Baseball Camp, offering four one-week sessions for players 5 to 15, is scheduled July 10-August 4 at Hingham High School. The camp is not restricted to Hingham residents.

The Braintree camp returns August 7-11, but shifts to Watson Field this year, for campers 5 through 15.

Sessions at all three camps will be held Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Half-day sessions also will be available for 5 through 7 year olds from 8:30-11:30 a.m.

SSBC is a full service, year-round club and training facility for baseball and softball players, ages 5 and older, in Hingham. For more information about SSBC or any of its summer camps call 1-800-GO4-HITS/(781) 749-6466 or visit SSBC's Web site at www.ssbc.com

Boys State turned out to be a blast

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Forget about tardies and final exams, it's Summer! There is no news for this week, because school is (finally) over. However, last week Charles Miller and I were at the American Legion's Boys State conference at Stonehill College. We didn't really know what to expect, but it turned out to be a blast. Both of us are extremely grateful that we went, because we learned got to meet new people and learn about government.

As chance would have it, Charles and I were separated into separate political parties but remained members of the same county. This meant that although we could not participate in the same pre-primary and primary elections, we played on the same sports teams. Charles was elected Town Moderator, and I was elected to the Board of Selectmen. Town Moderator is a position much like Cohasset's Town Manager; the moderator ran all the municipal meetings. The Selectman voted on decisions for the town and also helped appoint positions for the municipality. I also wrote for the Boys' State Newspaper, The Citizen.

As a Federalist I decided to run for Lieutenant Governor. Throughout the week I gave speeches to my party. Ms. Berman's Public Speaking class paid off — my party saw fit to elect me as their candidate. After the final round of speeches, the opposition won the gubernatorial election. However, the two elected U.S. Senators were from the Federalist Party, and they will represent Massachusetts Boys' State at the Boys' Nation conference in Washington, D.C. this July. I have the utmost confidence in these two, and know Massachusetts will be represented extremely well.

Boys' State has provided us with a slew of new friends and an experience we will not forget.

Boys' State has provided us with a slew of new friends and an experience we will not forget. The American Legion is truly doing this country a service by educating young men about government while keeping a fun atmosphere. We would like to sincerely thank Tom Wigmore and the American Legion for sponsoring our week at Boys' State. I hope Cohasset's Legionnaires will continue to send representatives in the future. Charles and I plan on remaining involved with the program and may even apply for Staff positions next year.

If you would like to know more about Boys' State feel free to ask one of either Charles or myself about it. Enjoy the summer, Cohasset, and stay out of trouble.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Deer Hill Student Council members Jenna O'Brien, Valerie Farren, Cassandra Lieberman, Ian Kennedy, and Tanner Gildea helped organize the "Hoops for Heart" event.

Deer Hill students have big hearts

On May 12th, Deer Hill Elementary School students helped fight heart disease and stroke by participating in Hoops For Heart. This first-time event was open to the entire school with the participants raising $7,620 for the American Heart Association.

Hoops For Heart is a program designed to promote physical fitness and heart health through the fun activity of playing basketball. The event is co-sponsored by the American Heart Association and the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

"The student's were excited about learning how much they had raised from the event" said Deer Hill physical education teacher and Hoops for Heart coordinator Mike Weydt.

On Weydt's leadership, Carrie Fortino, senior director of Youth Markets for the American Heart Association said, "It is obvious that Mike is very proud of the students at Deer Hill, and they all looked like they had a lot of fun."

Funds raised in Hoops For Heart help fight heart disease and stroke, the nation's number one and number three killers.

RECREATION NOTES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold a dance for students entering grade six through eight at Midnight Blue, the new Teen Center, on Friday, July 7, from 7 to 10 p.m. Billy Carbone will DJ the event. Snacks and drinks will be on sale. Admission is $5 per person. Once registered, guests may not leave the Teen Center until picked up by an adult.

Late registration

Anyone wanting to register for the seven-week Summer Playground program, youth tennis lessons, or drama, should call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 for late registration times and dates.

Residents may continue to register for various Sport Camps programs at the Recreation Department office. Each program has a separate brochure and registration form available in the foyer of the Town Hall outside the Recreation office. Some Sports programs are nearing the limit in numbers, so early registration is advised.

IT'S HAPPENING

Band concert set for July 11

During the past 11 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. Each June, the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus take under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission for concert funding, hence, certainty of concerts are not absolute until mid-June each season. The SSMC donations are matched by a grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 2006 season is as follows:

Tuesday, July 11, 7:30 p.m., on the Town Common.

The performance will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts take place on the Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellant is a good item to have available.

Call the Recreation office at 383-4109 to check on the status of concerts if there is double about weather conditions.

Launch party for Cohasset author

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A will host the launch party for Cohasset resident David Hosp, to celebrate the release of his new book, "The Betrayed," on Thursday, July 6, at 7 p.m.

His first book, "Dark Harbor," was a fast-paced mystery placed in Boston. "The Betrayed" introduces a new set of characters, and the venue is Washington. The District of Columbia is no stranger to cover ups, and the answer to why a young woman is brutally murdered is buried deep under many layers of influence and power.

Hosp has a gift for characterization. He creates likeable, multi-dimensional characters who quickly become favorites. His new detectives, Cassian and Train, will join Scott Finn and Tigh McCluen from "Dark Harbor" in the gallery of favorite Hosp characters.

Hosp will talk about, read from and answer questions about "The Betrayed." He is a Boston attorney who received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Dartmouth College and his Juris Doctor degree from George Washington University.

Refreshments will be served.

This is a free event, however reservations are appreciated. Anyone unable to attend that would like to purchase a signed book, can call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com.

Register for 'healing lunch'

Aglow International Lighthouse (non-denominational) will hold a luncheon at the Cohasset Golf Club in Cohasset on Saturday, July 22, at 11 a.m. Keynote speaker is Forshia Ross, noted author and authority on emotional healing. Cost is $25. Registration and payment by July 12. For more information call Karen at 781-383-0026. All are welcome!

Date changed for Hingham fireworks

Due to unforeseen events, the date for the Hingham Lions Club annual fireworks display at Hingham Harbor has been changed to Friday, June 30. Club members understand that this may inconvenience some residents who have already made plans, and truly apologize for this inconvenience, as the Lions Club relies on the support of the town to fund the event.

The Hingham Lions Club is a nonprofit, philanthropic organization. All proceeds are used for various charities and scholarship funds. Club members are looking forward to an enjoyable, safe celebration with the community.

CHS grad joins brother as Thoreau Scholar

Growing up in Cohasset, Mia Lieb-Lappen recalls her early experiments with "kitchen chemistry." She and her older brother, Ross, would mix fluids of different densities and colors – for instance, apple juice and milk – and watch them separate.

Later, frequent philosophic discourse went on between them. "He was never too shy to show me the opposite side of global issues, thus fostering some heated debates," she said.

"Throughout my life, Ross has been a source of inspiration, competition and motivation. Today, his respect and concern for the environment has grown contiguous to mine. Watching him take action has motivated me in a similar fashion. I can definitely picture us working hand in hand for a safer world," Mia said.

In the fall, Ross will be a senior at Middlebury College, where he is majoring in chemistry. Mia will enroll in the freshman class at Middlebury, starting in the winter term. They are the first siblings in the history of the Henry David Thoreau Scholars program to receive that honor. Their parents, Dr. Helene Lieb and Ed Lappen, couldn't be happier about it.

Three years ago, upon graduating from Cohasset High School, Ross received a $30,000 four-year grant from the Henry David Thoreau Foundation. This Somerville-based nonprofit organization recognizes the outstanding leadership potential of Massachusetts high school seniors – in 2006, a select annual group of 11 – who plan to pursue environmental studies at many of the nation's top-ranking colleges and universities. Recipients bear the designation "Henry David Thoreau Scholar," an honor that may open doors of opportunity to them. A profile of Ross appears on the Thoreau Foundation Web site, www.thoreauscholar.org.

After an Earth Watch expedition to study dolphins and whales in the Bahamas, Mia came back with renewed inspiration to pursue her own environmental studies in college. Earlier, she had taken part in a Cohasset High School ecology field trip to the rainforests and coral reefs of Belize. She also spent summers collaborating with CHS science teachers on salinity studies of Cohasset Harbor, conducted through the town's Student Center for Coastal Research.

With encouragement from her family, teachers and friends, Mia applied for a Thoreau Scholarship. Cohasset has strong representation among Henry David Thoreau Scholar high schools, as five of its graduates have earned the honor during the past six years. Besides the Lieb-Lappens, other Thoreau Scholars from CHS are Christopher Golden, Harvard '05; Charles Anderson, Bowdoin '06; and Brittany Novak, Harvard '08.

The result? Mia was welcomed as a Thoreau Scholar at the organization's luncheon on May 20 at the Museum of Science, Boston. John R. Galvin, the foundation's president, served as host, along with members of the organization's governing board.

In addition, CHS Science Department chairman David Magnussen was on hand to offer his congratulations. He has actively encouraged all five Scholars from Cohasset to apply for the grant and was thanked by the organization for his efforts.

Mia's high school record – of academic excellence, athletics and community involvement – speaks for itself. A high honor student, she completed five Advanced Placement classes and graduates near the top of her class. Besides serving as editor in chief of The Spinnaker at CHS, she earned varsity letters in basketball, lacrosse and field hockey. She has held offices in CHS student government and tutors both classmates and private clients.

During all four years of high school, Mia participated in the American Cancer Society Relay for Life, a 24-hour charity walk that she organized. She has also volunteered for building and repair assignments in West Virginia and Virginia for the Appalachian Service Project and the METCO program (as a hosting sister since the third grade). One of her CHS teachers describes her perfectly: "Mia has learned that to care is to act, and [she] lives her life accordingly."

Fighting cancer is a team effort

tic and that is absolutely fabulous to see," he said. "It's great to see the kids all walking the track, it's a positive message.

"And then there is the sense of community — we all get together for a cause."

St. Onge said planning starts six months before the event. "We have a great committee, and when you have a great committee — while it's still a lot of work to plan the event — they make it easy," he said.

St. Onge, who is a cancer survivor, noted the community of survivors can be a hard one to belong to. He explained that the community could lose someone, as was the case this year with the loss of Mardi Wood, who walked the Relay for three years.

This year's Relay was dedicated to Mardi Wood, a Cohasset resident, who passed away in February. Mardi's daughter, Lauren Luscombe, said she had hoped for maybe eight participants on the "S-Miles for Mardi" team with the possibility of raising $1,000. She was overwhelmed to have the team burgeon to 36 people raising more than $15,000.

"In our small community, we are really making a difference."
—Harry St. Onge,
Cohasset Relay For Life

Friday night during the luminary ceremony Mardi's name was lit up with lights on the bleachers, along with that of Lisa Audet, a Hingham High teacher who succumbed to cancer earlier this month at the age of 34.

In the months leading up to the Relay, participants collect pledges. The event itself revolves around team members taking turns walking laps for 24 hours. Luminaries — bags inscribed with a personal message and containing a candle — are available to the entire community to purchase. The event also "Taste of the Relay" in which includes the area restaurants donate their time and food for the event.

Patrick Connors of the American Cancer Society, which sponsors the event, said there were 61 cancer survivors who participated in the Relay. The Survivor's Lap is one of the Relay traditions.

"It was very touching and emotional for all of us," Connors said. "I am very proud of the hard work and dedication of everyone who helped make this Relay such a successful event."

Just before Saturday's closing ceremonies, a group of students from Foster School arrived along with some parents and staff to honor sixth-grader, Maddie Dillon, a tough cancer fighter. The students had just learned that Maddie's cancer had returned.

"The students wanted to do it," said Principal Betsy Connolly. "They wanted to honor Maddie and tell everyone to keep her in their prayers."

DESTINATIONS

'Pride' of the Islands

Hawaiian cruise adventure shines, even when the sun doesn't

By FELICITY LONG
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

ABOARD THE PRIDE OF AMERICA -- Nothing tests the merits of a cruise more thoroughly than bad weather. Faced with a series of rained-out shore excursions and curtailed poolside fun, can the ship still deliver a vacation experience that isn't -- for want of a better expression -- all washed up?

Though answering this question was not the reason I yanked my 13-year-old daughter and her friend out of school for a recent seven-night Hawaii cruise, we nonetheless had occasion to put the question to the test.

Our cruise -- roundtrip to the four major Hawaiian islands from Oahu -- happened to coincide with a freak springtime weather pattern that left the state saturated.

We got rain. But what we also got was a chance to experience this ship, which is often unfairly upstaged by the beauty of the destination it serves.

One of the fun kids' areas on the ship

The year-old, 2,000-passenger Pride of America boasts a fun theme that is a salute to all 50 states. From the White House ambience of the atrium, the Aloha Cafe buffet area and the South Beach swimming area to the Newbury Street shopping area (a nod to Boston), you are constantly reminded this is an American ship. (In fact, when the Pride of America debuted it was the first brand new U.S.-flagged cruise ship in nearly 50 years.)

In keeping with Norwegian Cruise Line's Freestyle Dining concept, the ship offers eight restaurants and you can eat anywhere you like -- no rigid cruise dining here. To help keep things moving, the ship has computers guests can check to see which restaurants are open and what the wait time is likely to be.

Complimentary dining is available at the buffet, the New York-themed Skyline Restaurant and Colonial-themed Liberty Restaurant (here we dined on menu choices that ranged from steak and vegetarian options to mahi-mahi and pasta). Burgers at the '50s-themed Cadillac Cafe were a hit with the teenagers (you pay extra just for the milkshakes).

Specialty restaurants (meaning you pay a service charge) include our favorite, the Teppanyaki room, a kind of theatrical dining experience with a performing chef who sets a volcano of onion rings ablaze and slices and flips the meat and vegetables. Italian, steakhouse and French are among the other restaurant offerings.

The girls and I spent some happy afternoon hours on the ship making kukui nut and ribbon-weave leis and other Hawaiian crafts, and watching a group of spirited passengers attempt to learn the hula.

We also caught screenings of "Walk the Line" and "Mr. and Mrs. Smith." And I dropped a staggering $80 at the spa getting daughter Chloe's hair braided.

Had I any willpower, I would have shed pounds at the ship's fitness center doing Pilates, jogging on the treadmill or attending seminars on dieting.

I chose to watch as Chloe and her friend, Alex, defied gravity at the bungee-jumping station and turned upside down on the ship's gyroscope.

One of the nightly shows proved a big hit -- "America's Beat," a dance review that showcased U.S. history through dance and song. And we found unexpectedly charming a crew show, complete with robust singing, comedy and a surprise ending.

The Pride of America ship

Though NCL is family-friendly fleetwide, the Pride of America offers even more for parents cruising with young children. The kids center for children ages 2 to 12 features computer terminals, a movie room, a jungle gym and a play area with an animal decor. There is also a kids' pool and video arcade with all the latest games.

Chloe and her friend checked out the Connections Teen Club with its video jukebox and juice bar -- shyly at first, then with increasing enthusiasm.

Families can book one of eight Family Suites that sleep five in three separate areas.

We stayed instead in one of the standard balcony cabins, with beds dressed in bright colors and plenty of storage space even for teenage girls.

The charms of the ship notwithstanding, a huge appeal of the Pride of America voyage is the destination itself.

The itinerary offers a day each in Hilo and Kona, both on the big island, two days in Maui and two in Kauai.

The shore excursions are some of the best in the business and range from strictly sightseeing to more adventurous.

Our weather held just long enough for Captain Zodiac's snorkel tour in Kona. Here, up to 16 passengers cling to a speedy Zodiac past frolicking spinner dolphins and, in winter, the occasional spouting whale. After an hour's stop for snorkeling, our Zodiac hugged the coast, nearly grazing the lava caves with their mysterious striations and water spouts.

Another success was the kayak waterfall tour in Hilo, where we embarked in double kayaks from a bay, bobbing over waves until we reached a series of waterfalls just past the junction of the river.

After scanning the clouds, we took a chance on a Ka'anapali Beach Day excursion. Sure enough, the heavens opened just as we arrived at the white-sand beach, so we whiled away the hours at Whalers Cove, a nearby outdoor shopping and dining area.

We explored Lahaina on Maui, a touristy but attractive town with shops and pricey restaurants -- an excursion that worked despite the rain.

But after driving about 20 minutes in the rain to scenic Poipu on Kauai's scenic north shore in the hope of riding horses along the beach, we were given the option to don ponchos and ride in the muck or go shopping and receive a full no-hassle refund. We picked the shopping.

On disembarkation day -- when, as luck would have it, the sun finally poked through -- the girls listed all the things they had done, seen and tasted. Dodging raindrops never even made their list.

Prices in August start from $1,099; $999 in September. Also beginning inter-island service in Hawaii this month is Norwegian Cruise Line's new and larger Pride of Hawaii -- which carries 2,400 passengers and has 10 restaurants. For reservations, go to www.ncl.com or call 800-327-7030.

OBITUARIES

Anne Signorelli

Co-founder of Signorelli's Restaurant

Anne Signorelli, 95, of Cohasset, died June 17, 2006, peacefully at home, surrounded by her family.

A lifelong Cohasset resident, she helped to establish and manage Signorelli's Restaurant on Route 3A in Cohasset, through the 50s, 60s, and 70s.

Wife of the late Salvatore Signorelli, she leaves her children, Mary R. Green of Cohasset, William S. Signorelli of Cohasset, Vito J. Signorelli of Quincy, Ann M. Percy of Cohasset, and Barbara J. Gunville of Norwell; 17 grandchildren; 30 great-grandchildren, and a sister, Philomena Colello of Readville. She was the mother of the late Theresa M. Signorelli, and Katherine E. Igo.

Anne Signorelli

A funeral Mass was held on June 21, in St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Paul M. Donovan

Life-long educator

Paul M. Donovan, 82, of Cohasset, died at his home on Monday, June 19, 2006, after a long illness.

Born and raised in Boston, he graduated from Boston English High School. As a member of the U.S. Marine Corps, he entered the Navy's V-12 officer training program at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire, and attended officer training school in Quantico, Va., while serving in Washington D.C. He received a master's degree in English from Middlebury College in Vermont, where he became good friends with the poet Robert Frost.

Mr. Donovan had a life-long career as an educator. During the 1940s and 50s, he assisted World War II refugees, including many survivors of Nazi Concentration Camps, by teaching them English. He later became an English teacher in the Boston Public School system and eventually the principal at William Barton Rogers Junior High School in Hyde Park. This led to his appointment as district principal, overseeing several elementary schools in Hyde Park. After his retirement in 1988, he worked as a professor of education at Boston College in Chestnut Hill.

Outside of work, his life revolved around his family and his love of the sea and sailing. Mr. Donovan was a member of the Cohasset Sailing Club since its founding in 1962, and took his family on many sailing trips, including Acadia National Park in Maine as well as charted sailing trips throughout the Caribbean. He loved dogs, and could often be found sailing with his dogs. An accomplished gardener, he kept many gardens at his home in Cohasset. An avid reader, he had a life-long love of language and literature.

He leaves his beloved wife, Mary (Sullivan) Donovan; a daughter, Ann Donovan of Newton; a son, Paul Donovan II and his wife Dr. Elena Toschi of Brookline; a grandson, Michael Paul Donovan of Newton; and two sisters, Marie Donovan and Claire Donovan, both of Cohasset.

A Memorial Mass will be held on Friday, June 23, at 11 a.m., in St. Anthony Church, Summer St., Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Summer Carillon Recitals start Sunday

The 82nd annual series of Summer Carillon Recitals will be given on the 57-bell Cohasset Carillon in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on eight successive Sunday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., beginning June 25, and continuing through Aug. 13. The public is invited to attend free of charge, and may bring picnic suppers, lawn chairs and blankets to Cohasset Common or to the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension. Printed programs will be available in both locations. The concerts will take place rain or shine, and in case of bad weather, listen from parked cars.

Following this and every recital in the series, there will be an open tower tour for all who are interested in climbing the 45 stairs to see how the instrument is played.

The first program on June 25 will be performed by Roy Lee, carillonneur of the University of Toronto. Lee will play a varied program including arrangements of hymns and spirituals, original carillon compositions by Matthias Van den Gheyn, Jos D'hollander, Terry Vaughn, Ronald Barnes and John Knox, European folksongs, and "Ol' Man River" by Jerome Kern. Following this and every recital in the series, there will be an open tower tour for all who are interested in climbing the 45 stairs to see how the instrument is played.

On July 2, the carillonneur will be Ellen Dickinson from Stamford, Conn. The guest artists for the following Sundays are: July 9, Amy Johansen from the University of Sydney, Australia; July 16, Marcel Siebers, carillonneur of Cuyk, The Netherlands; July 23, Dave Johnson, carillonneur of House of Hope Presbyterian Church, St. Paul, Minn.; July 30, Daniel Kehoe, carillonneur of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.; Aug. 6, Margaret Angelini, coordinator of the Guild of Carillonneurs of Wellesley College; and Aug. 13, Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083, Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599 or Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur, at 781-383-9599.

Taylor-made for performing

Livingston live at Company Theatre June 23

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

From coffeehouses and clubs to college campuses, Livingston Taylor will tell you that wherever he's playing that night is his favorite place to perform.

That being said, the beloved singer/ songwriter and younger brother to James Taylor, quickly notes how much he enjoys playing Norwell's Company Theatre where he will perform this Friday, June 23.

"I love playing in Norwell and at that venue. I never have a better time," he said en route from his teaching gig at Berkley College.

Professor Taylor teaches a course titled "Stage Performance" something he's spent the last 40 or so years perfecting while doing what he loves best.

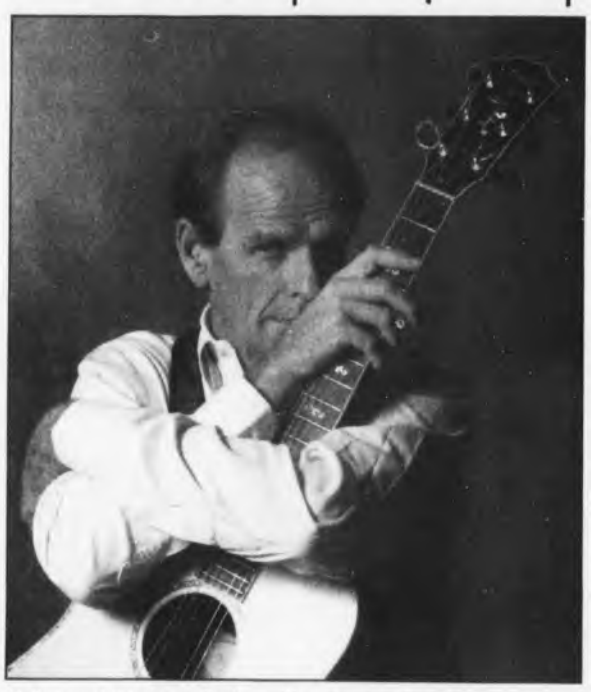
Born in Boston, the fourth of five children of Isaac, a doctor, and Trudy Taylor, a homemaker, Livingston describes his upbringing in Chapel Hill, SC as "musical." Alex, the oldest of the close knit Taylor kids, was first to form a band — The Corsairs — in which younger brother, James also played.

"I remember Alex playing and the band got paid something like $25 at the time. It was a revelation to me, that you could play music, and get paid — that music was viable career."

That was music to Livingston's ears, as a youngster who didn't much care for school and describes his academic performance as "spotty."

"It's weird that I wind up as a full professor at Berkeley," notes Taylor, who is a popular draw at colleges all over the Commonwealth and says he really loves performing for and interacting with young people.

Livingston started playing and performing at a young age, picking up guitar at about 12 and starting a little singing duo with pal, Carly Simon who his family came to know summering on Martha's Vineyard. And at home in Chapel Hill, Livingston was a member of a folk trio as a teen, before coming back to Boston where he decided to finish high school. It was during those years back in Boston on the coffeehouse circuit that Livingston met Jon Landau (later producer to Bruce Springsteen) who produced his first recording in Macon Georgia. Since then, Livingston has produced 13 albums, including top 40 hits such as "I Will be in Love with You" and "I'll Come Running" and written songs recorded by brother James, "I Can Dream of You," "Going Round One More Time," and "Boatman."



Folk icon Livingston Taylor will appear at the Company Theatre in Norwell June 23.

"I love playing in Norwell and at that venue. I never have a better time."
Livingston Taylor

Livingston Taylor during a recording session in Nashville.

While generally regarded as a folk musician — he received a BMA (Boston Music Award) as outstanding Folk Artist in 1988 — Livingston said he considers himself a pop musician who has been influenced musically by other pop musicians.

"Pop music is integral to what I'm about," he said. "I'm shaped by what I hear on the radio." When asked to name names of influential artists, Livingston mentions Burt Bacharach, Dionne Warwick and the Beatles.

Broadway music is the other big influence in Livingston's life. "I listened to a lot of Broadway music when I was young," he said, noting many of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical scores as his favorites. "I loved Carousel, Showboat, My Fair Lady, and I learned the full score to Oklahoma. I was very taken with and influenced by the lyrical work of Oscar Hammerstein."

While fans can expect to hear many of Livingston's popular tunes during Friday's concert performance, he's also promoting his new album "There You Are Again," which he recorded in Nashville, alongside world class musicians. Livingston said he's particularly proud of the record for both the quality of the material — he wrote all the songs — and the greatness of the musicians playing on it.

He'll be highlighting his new work as he tours this summer. Next up he'll be heading west to Seattle out on tour with Linda Ronstadt, an artist he loves working with. "I have a wonderful time working with Linda. We blend well together and we admired each other," he said.

In addition to touring — about 75 days each year, and writing new music, Livingston has also published two children's books "Pajamas" based on one of his popular tunes, and "Can I be Good." He also penned the text "Stage Performance" from which he teaches at Berkeley.

To quote the title of his 1988 album release, "Life is Good" for Livingston who has happily made making music his life's work, and has no plans to slow down anytime soon.

Livingston Taylor will perform at Norwell's Company Theatre Friday, June 23 at 8 p.m. Tickets for the show are $25 and can be purchased at the Company Theatre Box office at 30 Accord Park Drive, by phone at 781-871-2787 and online at www.companytheatre.com. For more information on Livingston Taylor visit www.livtaylor.com.

Movie review

'Home' sweet home

A Prairie Home Companion (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

An instant cult film, the charming if surprisingly toothless "A Prairie Home Companion" takes Garrison Keillor's enduringly popular Minnesota-based National Public Radio program and transforms it into a Robert Altman film. It's no "Nashville." It may even be hard to recognize as "A Prairie Home Companion" to the 4 million fans who listen to the distinctive NPR program every week. But it has its charms.

Keillor plays himself, a kind of all-purpose singer/host/master of ceremonies on an old-timey radio program with musical guests and advertisements for imaginary products. Keillor also supplied the script. But instead of his stock company, he's joined on stage — and for the most part upstaged — by Altman's cast, including most notably Meryl Streep and Altman favorite Lily Tomlin as singing sisters Yolanda and Rhonda Johnson, respectively, who've been sharing a dressing room for too many years. Also on board are Woody Harrelson and John C. Reilly as a couple of seriously amusing singing cowpokes.

Lindsay Lohan is Lola, Yolanda's insolent 20-something daughter and assistant. As Keillor's imaginary private detective Guy Noir, a role Keillor himself plays on the airwaves, Kevin Kline is in for some rough sledding. A radiant Virginia Madsen is a ghostly mystery woman who may be the Angel of Death.

Altman's artistic vision is perfectly suited to this backstage comic fable with its ensemble cast of quirky showbiz characters. But the film is uninspired and conceptually flawed, which is too bad given its genuinely moving valedictory tone.

Instead of being a film-noir character who has a series of imaginary comic misadventures, for example, Kline's Noir has been reimagined as the flesh-and-blood, albeit sartorially retrograde, head of security for St. Paul's venerable Fitzgerald Theater, where the radio program is being taped.

Frankly, this reconfigured Noir doesn't fly, even with Kline's trademark Buster Keaton-esque pratfalls.

Lefty and Dusty (Woody Harrelson and John C. Reilly) sing up a storm of goofy cowboy music at a radio broadcast.

As a philistine, Clear Channel-like executive planning to pull the plug on the show, Tommy Lee Jones is persuasively slimy. The Edward Hopper-ish visuals are also neat.

But while Streep and Tomlin can carry a tune, I wouldn't pay to hear them sing. Lohan's big moment in the sun will not require ultraviolet protection. She looks as if she whirls around too abruptly, her hair will break off.

Keillor, who resembles the love child of Stephen King and David Letterman, oddly makes scant impression on screen. He really has a face for radio, and, more importantly, a voice.

On the whole, "Prairie" is Altman lite. But it's impossible not to be deeply affected when we hear "Light from the Lighthouse" sung in honor of a beloved veteran member of the ensemble who dies suddenly backstage (in accepting a life achievement Academy Award last winter, 81-year-old Altman revealed he has had heart transplant surgery). Death haunts this "Companion," especially in final scenes featuring a cover of the old spiritual "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" that will open some viewers' tear ducts like floodgates.

New Releases

CLEAN (A-)

After a fight on the road, washed-up rock star Lee Hauser (James Johnston) overdoses, and his wife, Emily Wang (Maggie Cheung) is arrested for possession and imprisoned. Upon her release, her weary American father-in-law, Albrecht, (Nick Nolte) persuades Emily to stay out of her son's life; he's been living happily with his grandparents anyway. Beautifully shot and marvelously acted, "Clean" traces Emily's attempts, many of them half-hearted and cynical, to get clean and be reunited with the boy. You'll find yourself swept up in its admittedly soap-operaish story line and carried along for the distance. In English, French and Cantonese with subtitles. (Rated R)

GIULIANI TIME (B+)

Love him or hate him, Rudy Giuliani gets your attention. The once-mayor of the Big Apple is the subject of Kevin Keating's "Giuliani Time," a well-crafted documentary that spits fire in Giuliani's face and chuckles as he goes up in smoke. This two hour film delves into Giuliani's eight-year stint as New York City's head honcho and warns us about the politician with one eye on the White House and the other on the stars. Some good points are made in "Giuliani Time." But when all is said and done, some may find it hard to take "Giuliani Time" as the authority on Giuliani, a guy whose comb-over hairdo and sweet-talking lisp came to be loved in a post-9/11 world. (Not rated) -Chelsea Bain

LADY VENGEANCE (A-)

"Lady Vengeance" is the third installment in the acclaimed "Vengeance" trilogy by Korean auteur and master of gory lyricism, Park Chan-wook. The film's heroine, Lee Geum-ja (Lee Young-ae), is released from prison after serving time for a crime she didn't commit. She hatches a complex plot for revenge against Mr. Baek (Choi Min-sik), the true culprit and the person who caused her to lose her infant daughter. Toting a primitive double-barreled pistol, she wades into her task with determination and guts, leaving a trail of brains and dead assassins. But the mystery at the heart of "Lady Vengeance" is Geum-ja herself. Is she an angel or a devil? Mary Poppins or Lizzie Borden? (In Korean with subtitles. (Rated R)

Ongoing

AKEELAH AND THE BEE (A)

How do you spell winner? "Akeelah and the Bee." Superbly cast and smartly written, "Akeelah" tells a familiar story of 11-year-old Akeelah Anderson's (Keke Palmer) road to self-worth as she discovers her talent for spelling and works to place in the national spelling bee in Washington D.C. (Rated PG) -Stephen Schaefer

THE BREAK-UP (C+)

Oversized, overaged frat boy Gary (Vince Vaughn) and his art dealer girlfriend Brooke (Jennifer Aniston) break up but continue to share a condo. In this anti-romantic comedy, tabloid-linked stars Vaughn and Aniston have nowhere to display their chemistry, except in anger. Between the hijinks that ensue as Gary and Brooke try their best to hurt one another, you end up sitting back and checking off the product placements or trying to figure out how many endings the director shot. (Rated PG-13)

BRICK (D)

In this oddball teen noir about a high school drug ring, Brendan Frye (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) is determined to oust head drug pusher, The Pin (Lukas Haas), from his throne after Brandan discovers the body of his ex-girlfriend Emily (Emilie de Ravin) in a gully. Intriguing as the mystery may be, this film leaves something to be desired. "Brick's" cryptic content, jargon-filled speech and visually bland ambience will leave viewers with a sinking feeling. (Rated R) -Tenley Woodman

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

THE DA VINCI CODE (C+)

"The Da Vinci Code," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. The key elements of Dan Brown's fabulously fun novel are all here: Harvard symbologist Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) investigating a 2,000-year-old conspiracy concerning Jesus' true nature; a murder plot involving a psychopathic, albino monk (Paul Bettany); and clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces. But director Ron Howard's film is too long and too stuffed with scholarly pedantry. "The Da Vinci Code" comes off as a book, rather than a movie, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book, at that. (Rated PG-13)

DEEP SEA 3D (C+)

Giant squid, sand sharks and moon jellyfish frolic in 3-D in this escapade narrated by Johnny Depp and Kate Winslet. During the hour, viewers traverse coral reefs, shipwrecks and kelp forests to glimpse the day-to-day life of creatures we normally see on dinner plates laced with bread crumbs, lemon and butter. The film's message — preserve these submerged communities — is important, if a little bland to watch. (Not rated) -Tenley Woodman

DISTRICT B13 (B+)

In this French action flick, street vigilante Leito (David Belle) reluctantly teams up with cop Damien (Cyril Raffaelli) to save Leito's younger sister Lola (Dany Verissimo) from tres bad guy Taha (Bibi Naceri), a drug dealer who has kidnapped Lola and plans to bomb the blighted District 13 neighborhood. Set to an incendiary French hip-hop soundtrack, "District 13" features fight scenes with furiously flying fists, dizzying acrobatics and bizarrely colorful criminal bystanders. This film makes most other American action films look even dumber and less hip than they already did. (Not Rated.)

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

KEEPING UP WITH THE STEINS (C+)

It's the battle of the bar mitzvahs in "Keeping Up with the Steins," as the Fielder family wages war to outdo their rivals, the Stein family, and throw a more lavish party for their son. Filled with mawkish sentimentality, antediluvian Borscht Belt jokes, and a cast of TV actors, "Keeping Up with the Steins" often feels like a lame, big-screen sitcom. (Rated PG-13)

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE III (B-)

Tom Cruise reprises his role as IMF agent Ethan Hunt, this time mounting a rouge mission to the Vatican to impersonate psychopathic arms dealer Owen Davian (Philip Seymour Hoffman) who is trying to sell a doomsday weapon to terrorists. As a summer-season action film, "M:I:III" delivers the goods with the requisite shoot-outs, explosions and some nice location photography in Rome and Shanghai. (Rated PG-13)

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT (A-)

Mrs. Palfrey (Joan Plowright) moves to London to be near her 26-year-old grandson, who, oddly, doesn't show up. Instead, Mrs. Palfrey persuades aspiring young writer Ludovic Meyer (Rupert Friend) to impersonate her grandson to deflect the attention of busybody hotel residents. A rare friendship develops between the lonely widow and young artist. Brimming with warmth and intelligence, "Mrs. Palfrey" is small film, yet completely delightful. (Not rated)

Fire budget is under scrutiny

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The failed overrides have led to budget scrutiny like never before. To ensure the town is getting the most bang for its buck, spending versus services will be analyzed and the fire budget will be the first to go under the microscope.

"This will be the first department to be focused on, but certainly not the last," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

To help in the analysis, Griffin has suggested forming a Fire Services Task Force which would spearhead an analysis of the fire department's budget versus the services it provides. He believes the task force should look into the existing structure, service level, expenses and revenues of the department; the results of the municipal benchmarking study and subsequent detailed analysis of the peer communities; identify options for alternative means of delivering fire and emergency medical services, including projected impacts on the level of service, expenses and revenues, and Downtown Cohasset is starting to come together. Parking spaces are being painted, trees have been planted and some businesses are reporting customers are slowly beginning to return to the area in the wake of the Downtown Revitalization project.

With the finishing touches taking place over the course of this week and next, Village business owners say they are glad to see the worst is over and hope with the dust settling, it will encourage more residents to patronize their shops. It seems there is an overall positive feeling with the changes that have been made, and shop owners like the looks of their new surroundings.

"Get on with it and leave the negativity in the rear-view mirror."
— James Watson, Cohasset Hardware

Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan have been working with the Village shop owners throughout construction. "The overwhelming response has been positive," said Brennan, adding many of the merchants have told him they are glad to see the Village looking much better than it did three months ago and glad the construction phase is over.

"The weather has been extremely unkind," said Brennan, adding the project hasn't been pushed back too far, thanks to the work done by Northern Construction. Brennan said supervisor Jack Graves has been very cooperative with the King Street home is a dream

William Otis Souther would be proud of the changes which have taken place at his house. While the home he knew back in the late 1800s was a small Victorian farm house located on Lily Pond — a perfect base for his lucrative ice business — today it is being recognized by New England Cable News as a "New England Dream House."

Located at 433 King St., Souther's home still boasts the same Victorian charm, thanks to its current owner Barbara Russell. For the past two years, she and her business partner, engineer Sid Sheps, have worked together to transform the house. Previously converted into a three-family home, the two have brought it back to a true Victorian style single-family home. In light of the extensive renovations, the home caught the eye of producers at NECN, and will be the first Cohasset residence to be featured on the show.

"It was certainly not anything I expected," said Russell, adding this is her [illegible] Victorian home renovations, many of which took place in her native Canada, and none before had ever received this kind of attention. However

Spate of accidents prompts 3A crash study

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"There are spots where the speed limit is 50 M.P.H., which may need to be changed."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Police Chief James Hussey has asked one of his sergeants to pull together accident reports from crashes along Route 3A from this time last year to see if there is a trend developing.

"We need to devise a strategy," Hussey said, about the recent spate of accidents along the corridor.

At about 9 a.m., Tuesday (June 27) there was yet another "rear-end" accident along the King Street section of Route 3A that extends from Stop & Shop to lower King Street. Tuesday's accident occurred opposite one of the curb cuts to Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square and had southbound traffic backed up to the future MBTA train station (former Graham Waste site).

Hussey explained a woman driving a brown 1998 Toyota Camry said her foot slipped off the brake and hit the gas causing her to drive into the 2005 Honda Pilot in front of her. The front end of the Toyota, which sustained considerable damage, actually went under the back of the Honda. The driver of the Toyota was cited for failure to use care when stopping.

"Route 3A is a major thoroughfare," Hussey said, explaining the State Police have given up jurisdiction over many secondary roads like 3A, so Cohasset police are charged with handling all the calls.

He said police need to study the accident trends along the entire highway in Cohasset and therefore, has asked Sgt. Bill Quigley to compile the reports.

"We need to look at the bigger picture," Hussey said. "There are spots where the speed limit is 50 M.P.H., which may need to be changed. Also, we need to look at whether to allow left-hand turns and discuss the effect of proposed traffic lights at lower King and the new train station."

On Friday (June 23) at about 5:30 p.m., a rear-end collision occurred at the light at 3A and Pond Street. Hussey said in that mishap the operator of a 2001 Volvo V70 was cited for failure to use care when stopping after hitting a 2001 Mazda Miata convertible that had stopped at the light.

In another accident Tuesday (June 20), a driver was cited for failure to use care when entering a roadway after the 2001 Nissan Maxima the operator was driving apparently pulled out of the Mobil Station on Sohier Street hitting a 1994 Dodge van. Both drivers were treated at the scene for what appeared to be minor injuries, Hussey said.

Three teens arrested

Three Cohasset teenage boys were arrested at about 1 a.m., Saturday (June 23) on alcohol charges. Two of the youths were also charged with possession of marijuana.

Chief James Hussey said police had been patrolling the Summer Street area because of an ongoing domestic situation in the vicinity.

The officer on patrol observed the teens go into a driveway and get into a vehicle. He went over to check out the vehicle and observed beer and hard liquor in both closed and open containers and some marijuana.

Hussey said in some cases, the officers will call the parents of youths who are minors in possession of alcohol, but even though no one was driving – the fact that a vehicle was involved – is "an accident waiting to happen." Therefore, the officer made the arrests, he said.

Stolen laptop, jewelry recovered

Three Cohasset teens believed responsible

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"They closed this case in less than 24 hours of receiving the tip. Fantastic work."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Thanks to good detective work and an anonymous tip, police located the laptop stolen from a car on Beach Street last week and jewelry that was taken overnight Friday (June 16) from numerous tents at the Arts Festival.

"We received a tip from a person who pointed us in the right direction," Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said.

He explained based on that tip, detectives developed further sources that led them to the individuals who are believed responsible for the offenses.

Police will be summonsing three male, Cohasset juveniles to court on larceny charges. The names of the three subjects have not been released because they are under 17 years of age.

Lennon said the boys were apparently out roaming the streets on foot and are believed to be responsible for jewelry thefts from the Arts Festival and entering at least four cars, two of which police know items were stolen from. The laptop was stolen from one car and a computer docking station, which was subsequently discarded, was stolen from another.

Lennon said the subject, who had the computer in his possession, said he felt bad after reading the story in last week's Mariner and intended to return it.

A security guard said he saw three youths on the common in the wee hours of Saturday morning (June 17) but did not immediately report it to police.

Chief James Hussey said the solving of these crimes (laptop and jewelry thefts) are wonderful examples of the community working with their police.

"Sgt. Det. Lennon and Det. (Garrett) Hunt did a great job following up on a lead provided by an anonymous caller and developing further information that led them to the suspects," he said. "They closed this case in less than 24 hours of receiving the tip. Fantastic work."

In the hopes of getting his laptop returned, Paul Tedeschi of Beach Street notified the Mariner last week after his laptop containing priceless family photos was stolen from his unlocked car in his driveway. In a telephone interview Tuesday, he said police were able to instruct him on ways to keep the password from being changed to prevent the subjects from logging on.

Tedeschi praised the police for their professionalism and quick action. "They were fantastic," he said. "They were able to find the person and get the computer back."

"It has been a good lesson for me," said Tedeschi, adding he is locking his car and has backed up his files twice already.

Former handyman Adams sentenced in Logan robbery

Gets two years in state prison

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Throughout the investigation, Cohasset Police detectives had been keeping track of Adams' whereabouts since he left Massachusetts shortly after the crime occurred.

The persistence of the detective division at the Cohasset Police Department — that relentlessly pursued clues and leads over several years into a home invasion that left a Nichols Road resident tied up in sweltering heat — has resulted in a prison sentence.

Dan Adams, a former Cohasset handyman who worked for Polly Logan of Nichols Road and other residents in town, will be spending the next two years in the state penitentiary.

Adams essentially pled "no contest" to three felony charges of receiving stolen property: jewelry, silver and the victim's car meaning, although he did not admit guilt, he understood the state had evidence against him. The judge then found Adams guilty and sentenced him to prison, said David Traub, spokesman for the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office.

The state had asked for 2-1/2 years in the county jail but the defense asked for the two years in state prison, stating Adams would get better medical care there. According to previous published reports, Adams is believed to have AIDS.

Cohasset Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon said should anyone come forward with more information, the case has not been closed. "However, we are happy with what we have been able to accomplish," he said.

Nearly four years ago Logan, then 77, — who stands roughly five feet tall and weighs less than 100 pounds — was the victim of a home invasion and robbery. The perpetrators allegedly took the rings off her fingers and pendant off her neck before binding her with duct tape and leaving her in a sweltering upstairs bedroom where attic-like temperatures were in excess of 100 degrees. They stole upwards of $500,000 of her jewelry.

They also stole family heirloom silver and drove off in Logan's Ford Escort wagon.

At the time of the robbery in July 2002, Adams was staying in Logan's home in the loggia off the living room. He found the severely dehydrated Logan, some 36 hours after the robbery, and called 9-1-1. He told police he had been away on a camping trip.

Adams' arrest last August on receiving stolen property followed on the heels of the indictment of Kevin Gunter, then 22, of Roxbury, on a similar charge. When indicted, Gunter was serving time at the Massachusetts Correctional Institution in Shirley on a firearms violations.

According to the District Attorney's Office, Gunter allegedly received multiple expensive rings taken from Polly Logan, in exchange for a small amount of crack cocaine. He subsequently fenced the rings to a crack dealer for $700.

Cohasset police said Adams, now 36, sold a portion of Logan's jewelry to Gunter, who gave crack cocaine to Adams in exchange for the rings.

Throughout the investigation, Cohasset Police detectives had been keeping track of Adams' whereabouts since he left Massachusetts shortly after the crime occurred. Detectives tracked him to Florida and last summer learned he was working for a carnival operator that was providing the entertainment for numerous carnivals and fairs across the eastern seaboard. Last August, Cohasset detectives tracked Adams to the Ohio State Fair in Columbus, Ohio. Adams did not resist arrest or extradition.

Lennon said the case has been a challenging one because the victim was unable to identify her attackers and there was not a lot of physical evidence. He said he and Det. Garrett Hunt had to build sources and follow leads. "It took persistence to get some of the sources to cooperate with us," he said. "We conducted interviews with dozens of people and evaluated and combed through bits of information that pointed us in the right direction.

"This was the most complex investigation ever undertaken by the Cohasset Police Department," said Lennon, adding the time he and Hunt spent on the investigation would not have been possible without the support of the entire department.

Chief James Hussey said he didn't think people realize the work Lennon and Hunt put into solving the Logan robbery.

"They spent many hours on the streets of Boston seeking evidence of this crime," Hussey said. "They were able to put the case together, track Adams from Florida to Ohio and have him brought back to face justice. These are just two of many dedicated employees we have in our department."

Kids' beef investigated

Police have left the door open for a potential victim to file a complaint about an alleged assault last Wednesday (June 21) on Doane Street.

Police say the youths, who all know each other, said they were having an argument over one of them owing another one some money. Reports to dispatch indicated one of the youths was being chased by others, one of whom was wielding a baseball bat.

Chief James Hussey said police did not find evidence of an assault. They took a report of the incident. "However, if the youth feels threatened in any way and wants to seek a complaint, we will gladly take the case to court," he said.

Party prevented

Teens headed to Bassing Beach last Wednesday (June 21) after 9:30 p.m. with a backpack were sent on their way, Chief James Hussey said. The teens were headed to the beach for a supposed party. No alcohol was found and the kids were sent on their way before the party started. Hussey said the harbormaster alerted the police and he cited this as a good example of the two departments working well together.

Teen repairs mulch area

At just past 8 p.m., last Wednesday (June 21), dispatch received a call about kids in the back of Deer Hill School tearing up the lawn and being loud. Police Chief James Hussey said there was some damage to the mulch and the teen subject who drove a truck over the area subsequently raked and cleaned up the damage. "The damage was fixable and we contacted the parents," Hussey said. The other kids in the area at the time were on skateboards.

Animal suspected in break-in

After investigating a report of a broken window at a house on King Street given by a neighbor last Friday, police believe a squirrel or other animal may have broken in. Chief James Hussey said the way items were knocked around and off the shelves — but nothing was taken — means the perpetrator could have been a squirrel or even a bird.

Party dispersed

A teen house party on Forest Avenue at about 12:20 a.m. Saturday dispersed prior to the arrival of police. However, the owner of a car that was stuck on a rock at that location was contacted to remove the vehicle. Apparently the car owner's child had the vehicle that night. No arrests were made and although there had apparently been a large number of kids at the house, there was no evidence of alcohol, Hussey said.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HAPPY FOURTH!

Happy 4th of July to the town of Cohasset! Enjoy the super long weekend for so many and the actual 4th for others. Make sure to stay safe and have fun.

ASP RETURNS

Anyone who is around on Sunday evening may want to come down to St. Anthony's parking lot to welcome back the group of over 125 Cohasset students, adults and friends who are returning from their week working with Cohasset's Appalachia Service Project.(ASP)

This group of dedicated people have been gone for a week and will be returning around 7 p.m. A warm and heartfelt welcome would be so wonderful from as many of us who can attend. I know as a mom of one of the young people who is coming home, I am so proud of this group. To read more about this program, go to www.cohasse-tasp.org

Come on down and help to welcome them all home!

THAYER HONORS

The following Cohasset residents were recognized for their hard work at Thayer Academy in Braintree. Christian W. Allard, in grade 6, earned Honors for Academic Achievement; Lindsey E. Allard, in grade 8, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and High Honors for Effort; Leigh C. Collins, in grade 8, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and Honors for Effort; Anna E. Blanken, a Freshman, earned High Honors for Term 3 and High Honors for Semester 2; Sarah Bookstein, a Junior, earned Honors for Term 3 and Honors for Semester 2; Catherine M. Ernst, a Senior, earned Honors for Term 3 and Honors for Semester 2; Claire E. Oswald, in grade 6, earned Honors for Academic Achievement and Honors for Effort; and Joseph M. Rosano, a Senior who earned Honors for Term 3 and Honors for Semester 2. Enjoy your summer, you earned it!

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations to J. Morgan Bigley who has just received notice that he has made the dean's list at Harvard Extension. Morgan's parents are David Bigley and Alix White of Cohasset. Morgan is working as a chef in Cambridge at Central Kitchen while earning a degree in journalism at Harvard University Extension School. In his "spare time" he is actively helping to plan his wedding which will take place on Sept. 30.

Morgan, great job and your parents are so happy and proud of you.

SPECIAL AMBASSADOR

Cohasset resident and three time cancer survivor, Harry St. Onge, was recently selected as an Ambassador to represent his community at Celebration on the Hill 2006, a nationwide event to be held in Washington, D.C., Sept. 19-20 that will engage Members of Congress in the fight against cancer.

Harry was recently the head of the Relay For Life held at Cohasset Middle/High School and is truly a man to look up to. We are all so proud of you Harry, thank you for being you.

AWARD WINNER

Cassandra Becker Mahar was awarded the Bradford Yaggy, Jr. Prize for the sixth grade at Thayer Academy, Braintree on June 8, 2006. The Yaggy Prize is awarded to that student, selected by the faculty, who has achieved effort honors for at least 2 terms in the current year, and who has also demonstrated superior effort in Middle School activities and athletics. Cassandra also achieved Honors in Academics and High Honors in Effort during her 3rd trimester at Thayer. Cassandra is the daughter of James Mahar and Paula Becker of Cohasset. Super work, Cassandra.

MUSEUM DIRECTOR TO BID ADIEU

This is a special goodbye to a lady who has made a difference to so many families. A Cookies & Juice goodbye is happening at the Our World museum for Museum Director, Michelle Golduc. As many of you know, Michelle has a special place in her heart for all of the museums young visitors, and hopes to have a chance to say goodbye to all of them personally.

Drop in times are Wed., June 28, from 10 a.m. to noon; Thus., June 29, from 3 to 5 p.m. and Fri., June 30, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Michelle has worked over the last three years to bring the dream of Our World into reality for the South Shore. She will be moving onto the next chapter in her life and entering graduate school at Tufts University. She will be joining the Board of Directors and staying as active as possible with the museum.

Cohasset attorney awaits release of second novel

Writes while commuting on the boat

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This one is a little bit more of a political thriller."
— David Hosp, "The Betrayed"

Old Pasture Road resident Dave Hosp has always liked to write. In high school and during his college years, he would often put pen to paper as a creative outlet, never once expecting his work would ever be published.

But next week, Hosp, an attorney with Goodwin Procter, LLP, will celebrate the release of his second novel titled, "The Betrayed," at a launch party held at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Shaw's Plaza on Rte. 3A. Hosp will be on hand to answer questions about the book during the event, which will begin at 7 p.m.

"It's all very surreal," said Hosp of his somewhat new second profession, as he literally became an author by accident. When he and his wife Joanie moved to Cohasset just over five years ago, he suddenly found himself with a chunk of time all to himself while riding the commuter boat into Boston to his office. The trip back and forth on the water inspired his first release, "Dark Harbor," a fast-paced mystery set in Boston, which was published in 2005.

"It was fun to start writing again," said Hosp, adding he never planned on doing anything with his story aside from perhaps taking it over to Copy Cop during his lunch break and making a few copies for family members. He designed his own cover and turned it into a paperback and sure enough, gave a copy to his parents.

"My father said, 'This isn't bad'," and soon suggested Hosp let him forward the book on to one of his neighbors, who is a literary agent. Hosp said if his father felt comfortable doing that, it was fine with him, but never expected the sequence of events that unfolded.

Hosp said after the book was submitted, he found out the literary agent his father knew was Aaron Priest, a very well-known and respected agent based in New York City. He said after hearing the name, he went home and looked Priest up on Google, and was absolutely stunned. "I felt like a complete idiot," he said, but hoped if nothing else, Priest would say the manuscript wasn't terrible.

Priest receives thousands of submissions every month and at first, Hosp said Priest wasn't enthused about reading the book. However, one night coming home on the train, he picked up the book and read five pages, just in case Hosp's parents ever asked if he had taken a look at it. After reading the first five pages, he read five more. One week later, Hosp received the call Priest's company would like to represent him.

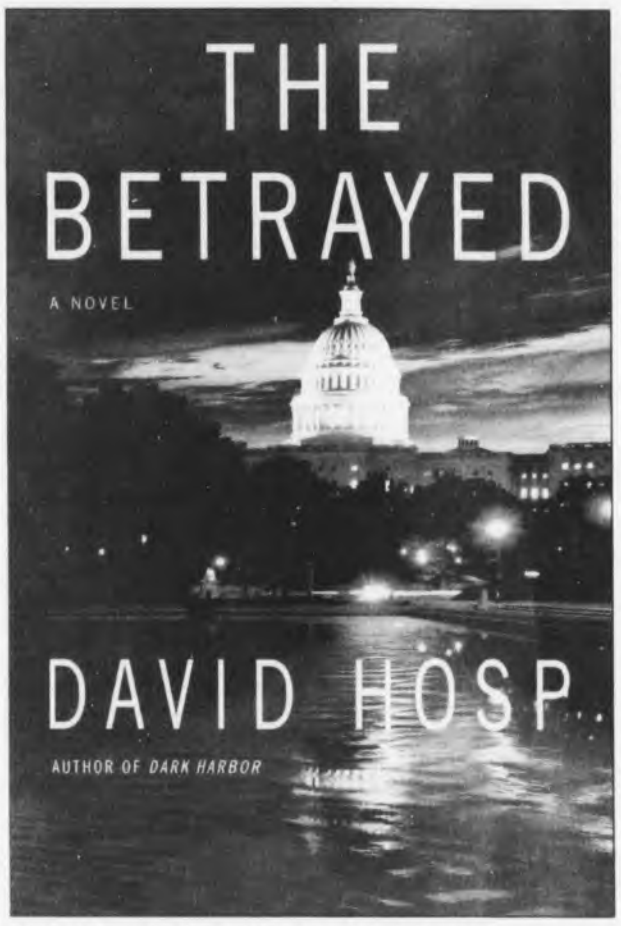
"It was a very weird moment. One of those you know you'll always remember. I would have been happy to just have him not laugh at my story," he said.

The release of the first book went very well and Hosp began working on his second. Commuting to Boston every day, the setting for "Dark Harbor" was natural. For "The Betrayed" he decided to go back to the place he called home while attending law school at George Washington University — Washington, D.C.

"This one is a little bit more of a political thriller," he said, and therefore, setting it in Washington made perfect sense. "It's a fun place to write about. I like to write about cities that can become characters in and of themselves," he said.

With the formal release date set for July 5, Hosp said he has already started seeing displays popping up in Borders and Barnes and Nobles. "It's very weird, but at the same time, it's a lot of fun," he said. He said he hasn't had much free time in which to anticipate the release, as things at work have been fairly hectic as well, and said his wife Joanie has been supportive on all fronts.

Hosp is a copyright and trademark attorney and he is in preparation to go to trial on a case in which five major Hollywood studios (20th Century Fox, Universal City Studios, Paramount Pictures, Disney Enterprises, CBS Broadcasting, American Broadcasting and NBC Studios) are suing Cablevision, the fifth largest cable provider in the United States over its digital video recorder (DVR) service that allows subscribers to record and store their favorite television shows and movies on an Internet server, bypassing commercials. Hosp and fellow Cohasset resident John Englander are representing Cablevision in the case.



With the formal release date set for July 5, David Hosp, a Cohasset resident, said he has already started seeing displays popping up in Borders and Barnes and Nobles.

Deirdre Bigley works on the mural at her dad's health food store, "All The Best" on Pleasant Street. Dierdre's mural is similar to the ones she had been painting for the past four months in Costa Rica. The mural is full of vibrant colors and reflects the organic produce in her father's store.

Costa Rican adventure inspires mural at All the Best

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When customers enter All the Best natural food store on Pleasant Street, they are greeted with a splash of color. With rolling hills, a bubbling brook and plants and trees which produce many of the products sold in the store, the new mural dressing up its walls takes customers back to where it all began in nature.

This month, shop owner David Bigley was not only delighted to have his daughter Deirdre home for a visit, he was thrilled when she agreed to paint a mural on his wall, similar to the ones she had been painting for the past four months in Costa Rica. Full of vibrant colors, her mural reflects the organic produce in her father's store.

The mural includes everything from lemongrass, flax and Echinacea flowers, to mango, noni and almond trees and raspberry and blueberry bushes. "There's lots of stuff from different climates, but they're going to grow together," in the mural, Deirdre Bigley said, which will somewhat mimic her experiences over the past year.

Deirdre Bigley is a graduate of the Cohasset High School Class of 2003. She graduated from the Delaware College of Art and Design in 2005 with an associate's degree in fine arts and illustration. After college, she took a year off to travel, working for the first half of the year to support living in Costa Rica from February to the end of May.

During high school, Deirdre Bigley took a trip to Costa Rica with a group of students led by science teacher David Magnussen. "I knew I had to go back," she said, which is exactly what she did. She signed up to be an intern at the Punta Mona Center for Sustainable Living and Education, an 85-acre organic farm and educational retreat center located on the southern Caribbean coast of Costa Rica. Eventually, she began trade work, painting murals to earn her keep.

Located on the southern border of Panama on the Caribbean coast, Punta Mona, is "where the jungle meets the beach," Deirdre Bigley said. After living in the rainforest for the past four months, the recent bouts of rain in New England have had no affect on her, as she got used to living in a soggy climate. "Everything is damp and biodegrades quickly," she said, adding the cycles of life are really obvious as decomposition happens much faster and plants grow back much more rapidly. She said the plants which grow are very different from those found in the United States due to the moisture, and many are very good for the body. In fact, numerous things grown in the rainforest can be found at All the Best.

able ways of living and the housing is built from local, fallen trees, not trees which were cut down. Drinking water is mostly processed rainwater and the homes use solar energy. The food eaten is organic and primarily grown on the farm, which has an extensive variety of tropical fruits, nuts and spices as well as medicinal plants. Deirdre Bigley said there were more than 100 different varieties of bananas at her disposal while in Costa Rica which she ate constantly. She said they are much different and much tastier than the bananas which are shipped up to the states. "There were all kinds of exotic fruits you can't get here," she said.

During Deridre Bigley's stay in Costa Rica, her father and brother Aaron, a member of the Cohasset High School Class of 2006, traveled to visit her. "I thought, 'When am I ever going to have someone in Costa Rica to go visit again,' so we took a week and went out," David Bigley said.

In Spanish, Punta Mona means "monkey point," which the Bigleys can attest to. "We'd wake up at 4:30 every morning to the screeches of the howler monkeys," David Bigley said. But the monkeys were easy to deal with compared to the bugs.

Deirdre Bigley said every night, she would sleep with mosquito netting around her and in the morning when she would get dressed, she would have to shake off her clothes to make sure there were no creepy crawlers tucked inside. However, one morning, she didn't shake hard enough and was stung on the leg. "I had a scorpion in my shorts," which had made a home out of her back pocket.

But living in the jungle got her creative juices flowing and she painted many murals throughout her stay which featured jungle flowers and vines. The bright colors she used are akin to the work done by her mother, Alix White, whom David Bigley says his daughter takes after. White's paintings can be found at All the Best, and David Bigley said there is no question where his daughter gets her talent. "It's probably genetic, I guess. With a little training added in," David Bigley joked.

In the future, Deirdre Bigley said she would like to go back to school to study art therapy or possibly elementary education to become an art teacher. She said she practices her Spanish every chance she gets, so as not to lose the skill. The next time she goes back, Deirdre Bigley said she would like to travel through Central America painting murals the whole way in exchange for food or a place to stay. "It is a really amazing way to see the world," she said.

All the Best beats downtown traffic

Greenbush and Village Revitalization construction have taken their toll on downtown businesses. For shops in James Brook Crossing, located on Pleasant Street, which experienced frequent closures during construction but has recently reopened, the last few months have been especially difficult, as residents may still not be used to the building's being converted into retail space. The building formerly served as the site of ABB Optical and now houses a variety of shops.

"Things have been slow, but good. I have a core group of customers who come in on a regular basis," said David Bigley, owner of All the Best natural food store, adding after coming back from a week-long trip visiting his daughter Deirdre in Costa Rica not too long ago, he was joking with another village merchant he thought the roads there were better than in Cohasset Village. Fortunately with the end of the project near, the village streets are smooth again, which will hopefully spur on more business.

"We're trying to get people used to seeing this as a retail building. Hardly a day goes by that someone doesn't say to me, 'How long have you been here?' and I've been here for a year-and-a-half. Even some people who live in town don't know we're here," Bigley said.

Today the whole first floor of the James Brook Crossing shops has been completely renovated and includes the Windsor Tea Shop, the Platinum Spike, Cohasset Greenery, Emporium Naturals, Crazy Paws veterinary hospital and All the Best. "There's beginning to be some cross-pollination," said Bigley, with businesses sending business to their neighbors.

When the train comes, Bigley said he and the other tenants know their situation is going to change as the tracks run right next to the building. However, he said he feels as a small business owner, he can provide much more than larger retailers at different locations. "At Whole Foods, you can go in and find anything you want — except me. As an owner, I have a 100 percent vested interest in customer satisfaction. I hope people like that personal service," he said.

Retrace Thoreau's steps through Hull and Cohasset

"In the Footsteps of Henry David Thoreau" is a Mass Audubon Van With a View Tour, costing $13, or $10 for a member of Mass Audubon.

In July 1851, Concord naturalist, Henry David Thoreau visited Hull and Cohasset on his way southeast to Cape Cod. He noted observations in his journal of both the natural and human worlds around him, leaving historians with a literary snapshot of life in those communities in the mid-19th Century.

Join Mass Audubon's John Galluzzo on Sunday, July 9, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., as he retraces the steps of Thoreau and recounts his observations in the author's own words, from Stony Beach to Straits Pond to Little Harbor, as documented in the naturalist's posthumously published Cape Cod.

"In the Footsteps of Henry David Thoreau" is a Mass Audubon Van With a View Tour, costing $13, or $10 for a member of Mass Audubon. Pre-registration is required. The van will leave from Mass Audubon's South Shore Regional Office in Marshfield at 9 a.m., with a secondary pick-up spot at Fort Revere Park in Hull. Attendees are asked to dress accordingly for the weather. For more information, contact 781-837-9400.

IT'S HAPPENING

Municipal lot reconstruction to start

Beginning Wednesday, July 5, contractors from Cashman Balfour Beatty, the company building the Greenbush line, will begin reconstructing the municipal parking lot. Prior to the start of construction, the parking lot on Pleasant Street, next to the James Brook Crossing shops, will be available as an alternative parking location.

While the construction will be undertaken in phases, crews will occupy a considerable portion of the lot installing drainage, regrading and paving the parking lot. It is anticipated the project will take most of the summer.

For a complete schedule of the work to be done, please check the CBB Web site at www.cbb-greenbush.com for posted updates and outlooks. Residents with questions and concerns may also call the 24-hour hotline at (781) 682-6350.

Register for 'healing lunch'

Aglow International Lighthouse (non-denominational) will hold a luncheon at the Cohasset Golf Club in Cohasset on Saturday, July 22, at 11 a.m. Keynote speaker is Forshia Ross, noted author and authority on emotional healing. Cost is $25. Registration and payment by July 12. For more information call Karen at 781-383-0026. All are welcome!

Water Safety Instructor course offered

Anyone that enjoys swimming and working with children can become a certified Water Safety Instructor. The class will take place on Monday, July 17, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Tuesday, July 18, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Wednesday, July 19, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Thursday, July 20, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Friday, July 21, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the Cohasset Swim Center. All classes, without exception, are mandatory.

There has been an overwhelming response for this program and limited class space. Presently, applicants will have to be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis. Registration must be accompanied with payment for the course. Replies must be dropped off at the Swim Center or postmarked by July 8.

For more information about the course, send contact information to: cohassetswimcenter@comcast.net or ask to speak to a supervisor at the Cohasset Swim Center by calling 781-383-9463.

Cohasset fire department services budget under scrutiny opportunities and obstacles for change. Griffin would like the report of findings and recommendations presented to the Board of Selectmen no later than Dec. 30, 2006.

Griffin's suggestion comes as a result of questions being brought up in the community. At the June 19 Board of Selectmen's meeting, he said some residents have commented at public meetings the money currently budgeted for public safety and public works services should be allocated to the school department. He said residents have also noted the municipal benchmarking study compiled for the town revealed per capita expenses for the town's fire department greatly exceed the mean of the town's peer group, which has led some to question whether more is being spent than is necessary.

Cohasset has paid $7,500 to Municipal Benchmarking, LLC — a Waltham company that analyzes town spending and prepares reports to aid in the budget process — for a 150-page report called "The Municipal Yardstick." The report compares Cohasset against 19 other municipalities with similar attributes. Since receiving the data, Griffin has been in touch with members of other fire departments to see if Cohasset's fire budget is in fact "way off," in terms of spending, as the report might suggest.

Griffin sent out a survey to all 19 if the town's peer communities and 17 responded. The towns of Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham and Westwood responded while Newbury and Southborough did not. Griffin said he has found the benchmarking analysis measures Cohasset against communities which are not in fact "apples to apples" comparisons as Cohasset does not have a strong "call force" or volunteer fire fighters that respond during an emergency, when many of the peer towns do. All of Cohasset's fire department members are paid staff which greatly affects its budget. When compared with other paid departments, Cohasset's fire budget is actually lower than the average.

"We are the experts, we know how we compare to other towns because we have mutual aid agreements with them."
—Union President Paul Bilodeau

Members of the fire department attended the meeting and welcomed the formation of the task force. They said it is healthy to inspect the budget, but reminded the board this is a task that has been done twice before and it should not reinvent the wheel.

Fire Capt. Bob Silvia said many of the questions currently being asked have been asked, and answered, before. "We need to go back to those committees and ask what they did then and what they wished they had asked," he said to be sure the questions are answered to everyone's satisfaction this time around. He reminded the board there have always been suggestions from the public as well as private analysis firms, as to how the department should be run and at one point 25 years ago, someone said the town needed three or four stations because response time was too slow to certain areas of town, "and that was before the train."

Fire Union President Paul Bilodeau said members of the fire department would be happy to participate in the task force and also suggested having one of the town's four call firefighters participate as well. "We are the experts, we know how we compare to other towns because we have mutual aid agreements with them," he said. In fact, Bilodeau said in order to take advantage of mutual aid, the town must provide certain services and "There's a certain cost associated with bringing the apparatus out the door."

Bilodeau also acknowledged the fact that the fire budget currently has high costs associated with overtime, but that will decrease as members of the department retire. Right now, roughly one-third of the department is over 50 years old and has accrued a good amount of vacation time, and every time someone is out, someone needs to come in and replace that person which results in paying overtime.

Residents interested in participating on the Fire Services Task Force, or those who have previously served on fire budget committees and have information to share, are encouraged to contact Town Manager Bill Griffin at (781) 383-4105 or via e-mail at wgriffin@townofcohasset.org. Interested task force candidates may send a letter of interest to Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Could movie-plex hurt the Loring?

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

An eight-screen "Hingham Playhouse" cinema complex is part of the mixed-use lifestyle center planned for the former Hingham Shipyard off Route 3A.

But the Hingham Planning Board and Selectmen have reservations about adding such a complex to the mix. There are also concerns about how doing so would affect the quintessential Loring Hall Theatre in Hingham Square.

Leslie Cohen of Samuels & Associates, which plans to transform 27.5 acres of the western portion of the property into a premier residential and retail "destination," presented a conceptual modification to the original plan to Hingham selectmen last week. The board shared the Hingham Planning Board's concerns about the magnitude of the changes and the fact that a theater complex is now being proposed.

"I understand your frustrations [about delays in the project over the past several years], but I think there's a better way to attract people than by building a theater complex," said Hingham Selectman John Riley, who sat on the Hingham Planning Board for 20 years and was actively involved in many Shipyard redevelopment hearings over the years.

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Philip Edmundson and Riley both wondered how this might affect the future of the popular Loring Hall Theatre.

Warren Baker, attorney for Patriot Cinemas, which owns Loring Hall, the Cameo Theatre in South Weymouth, and theater complexes in Scituate and Hanover, announced that the company is interested in building the Shipyard cinema complex. With regard to concerns about the size, Patriot Cinema representatives explained that eight screens are needed to get the right mix of genres.

"That's why the Loring Hall Theatre works – because we have other theaters to support it," Baker said. Besides, this local theater has a loyal customer base.

While assurances were given that the Scott family, which owns Patriot Cinemas and has strong ties to Hingham, is dedicated to keeping the Loring Hall Theatre open, Edmundson was not convinced. "There's no guarantee at this time that Patriot Cinemas will run the Shipyard theater complex, which could have a negative effect on the Loring Hall Theatre," he said.

In fact, overall, Edmundson has "deep reservations about the modifications being sought to the original plan. This is a big change," he said. "I don't like the movie complex or the growth in the restaurant component. I encourage continued communication with this board, although the Selectmen don't have any direct control over the project."

More restaurants are included in the new plan, with an increase of 8,000 square feet allocated to food uses, ranging from ice cream shops to sit-down restaurants – 10 in all.

Selectman Riley was not alone in expressing his concern about the number of liquor licenses that might be requested for these eating establishments. "We have some work to do here," he said, and Edmundson agreed.

Cohen said that Samuels believes "restaurant, cinema, and retail uses are complementary."

Riley also wonders what happened to the original intent "to create a Newburyport look. This architecture doesn't look like Newburyport at all," he said.

A mix of residential, retail, and commercial spaces, public open space, a waterfront park and walking path as well as 500 residential units, improved commuter boat and marina facilities, office space, restaurants, a health club, and a day-care center are all included in the overall plan to redevelop the 130-acre site. The history of the site will be reflected in the architecture and in other ways as well.

SeaChain, LLC, which previously owned the entire property and obtained the master permits needed to move forward with the development, recently finalized agreements with three other real estate developers who now own separate parcels within the redevelopment area. SeaChain will continue to operate, making minor improvements to its marina.

AvalonBay will construct 250 rental units adjacent to the commuter lot and retail portion of the project, and Roseland Property Company will build about 150 manor homes and townhouses on the eastern portion of the site.

Go downtown

The lights are much brighter there
You can forget all your troubles, forget all your cares
So go downtown, things'll be great when you're Downtown no finer place, for sure Downtown everything's waiting for you...
(Tony Hatch - as recorded in 1964 by Petula Clark)

Although we will admit we are old enough to remember the Petula Clark song "Downtown" — we hope those of all generations will be humming that tune when thinking about downtown Cohasset this summer.

We are biased because we love Cohasset Village; it is where we shop, walk, and have dinner or coffee with friends.

It is no secret the village area has been under siege with the revitalization project and will now face further challenges as MBTA work on the Municipal Parking Lot is poised to start.

Nevertheless, businesses, shops and restaurants in the village are operating at full tilt and need your support despite the inconvenience.

In the early 1990s, Cohasset Village was a different place. With a faltering economy, the loss of Cohasset Pharmacy, Cohasset Savings Bank, and a viable Red Lion Inn, "beleaguered" is the adjective that comes to mind to describe the village.

At the time the realization that Cohasset could lose a real treasure – the true heart of the community – propelled caring people and organizations into action. Efforts to find money and a vision for revitalizing the Village began.

The "project" has taken many twists and turns over the years. A lot of money, time and effort have been spent. Not everyone is thrilled with the asphalt sidewalks or the fact utility poles are still up and so are wires overhead.

But with that being said, a lot has been accomplished and the Village is looking better than it has in many years.

(On a side note relating to sidewalks, the Cohasset Mariner office is in Hingham Square, which has concrete sidewalks. The Mariner staff has taken a careful look at those and concrete sidewalks do show stains more easily; they also crack and need to be replaced. We are not professionals in the area of sidewalk surfaces, but after our informal study – we are not big fans of concrete either.)

However, despite whether you like asphalt or concrete – or would have preferred brick sidewalks throughout – now the important step is for everyone to support the Village. Our merchants and businesses have tried to hang in there for us because they believe in the place. We should support them. That means we need to be regular customers and patronize those businesses.

So maybe I'll see you there
We can forget all our troubles, forget all our cares
So go downtown, things'll be great when you're Downtown - don't wait a minute for Downtown — everything's waiting for you

Library Trustees, July 12, 6:30 p.m. at the library.
School Committee with Mass. Assoc. of School Committees, July 11, 7 p.m. at the high school.
Selectmen, July 10, 7 p.m.
Sewer Commission, July 31, 6 p.m.
Water Commission, July 5, 7:30 p.m.
Zoning Board of Appeals, July 6, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

School Committee changes meetings

Beginning in September, the School Committee said it will meet on the first and third Wednesdays of the month instead of Thursdays. The change of day is an effort on the committee's part to increase communication between the school department and the community, by allowing more timely coverage in the Mariner.

Currently, with meetings on Thursdays, the paper has already been sent off to press and school news is one week late by the time it is printed. By moving meetings to Wednesdays, some of the information from the meeting will be in the paper that Friday.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Can't we work this out?'

TO THE EDITOR:

So let me get this straight. I have to pay $180 each for my kids to take the bus to our "public" schools while the seniors in town receive a 70 percent discount on their beach and dump stickers ($15 rather than $50)?

Perhaps Cohasset's NO!-bility will get a grasp of reality when folks begin choking on the exhaust fumes from the convoy of minivans and SUVs making their way to and from school — 180 days each year.

I am kidding — but can't we all come together and work this out?

Arts Festival support is appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The South Shore Art Center extends its appreciation to the many Cohasset residents and businesses for their support of its 51st annual Arts Festival. We were a bit nervous heading into the Arts Festival because of all the road construction, but like the home getting readied for a family event, everything came together in the days before Festival and the village looked great.

Many thanks to our South Shore sponsors: Dean & Hamilton Realtors, Image Resolutions, South Shore Music Circus, Party by Design, Kitchen Concepts, Adrian Morris Salon, Kinnealey Meats, Lower Mills Seafood, Scituate Rotary, Hingham Institution for Savings, Members of the SSAC Board of Advisors, Strekalovsky Architecture, Cold well Banker, Granite City Electric, Peacock Press, Smith Print, Conway Insurance, Cohasset Collision, Hassan Sign Company, L.P. Carpenter Interiors, Inc., Graham Waste Services and Atlantic Bagel.

We are grateful for the support of the Plymouth County Development Council, the local cultural councils of Abington, Braintree, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, and, our friends at the Cohasset Cultural Council who understand the importance of the arts in shaping a community. The cultural councils are all local agencies supported by the Mass Cultural Council, a state agency.

A very special debt of gratitude is owed to the neighbors of the Common who are inconvenienced by the traffic and the crowds and to all at the Town Hall who help to make our job a bit easier. Our volunteers happily held things together during the weekend and we very much appreciate their being a part of the Arts Festival. Finally, an enormous thank you to Carl Sestito and everyone at the Department of Public Works for tending to the Common and making it look spectacular.

The Art Center relies on the Arts Festival as its major fundraiser each year and we sincerely appreciate being able to host the event on the Common. Our exhibiting artists/artisans always use the term "beautiful show" to describe the Arts Festival and we are extremely proud of being able to offer one of the nicest art shows in such a special place.

Giving arts a boost!

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the students, faculty, administration and parents at Cohasset Middle High School, the Arts Boosters would like to acknowledge the South Shore Play House Associates (Music Circus) for so generously supporting a grant for the 2006-2007 school year. This contribution will allow the Arts Departments to further enrich the creative studies of their students.

Once again, thank you for giving the Arts a Boost!

Restoring faith in the budget process

NOTES FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT

DENISE WALSH

Two years ago the Cohasset School Committee and this Superintendent of Schools embarked on a journey. We developed, along with over a dozen other community members, a five-year Strategic Plan and established a mission to "Continue the Commitment to Excellence".

With building projects complete, there were two primary goals for the district. The first goal was to expand program offerings at all levels while we reduce class size, and the second goal was to get our financial house in order.

We see great progress in student results from the full-day Kindergarten program as well as our new Reading program at the Osgood School. Despite difficult fiscal times, the accomplishments for the school department have been many.

The biggest challenge we face moving forward seems to be restoring faith in the budget process. During the recent "What's Possible for Schools and Town" forum, it became apparent to me that much of the mistrust and cynicism in the town around the school department budget process seems to stem from misinformation taken for fact, a grounding in perceived flawed past practices, and no clear understanding of the fiscal responsibilities, under the law, of the Superintendent of Schools and the Cohasset School Committee.

I have been asked by participants at the forum to provide you with the information necessary for you to make difficult decisions moving forward. I will attempt to clarify misinformation, separate fact from fiction, and clearly define the unique role of the Superintendent and School Committee within the town government structure.

We appreciate the many suggestions made by town citizens to cut costs or increase revenue. Some we will take under advisement, some we have already implemented, others may not be as cost effective as they may appear.

Non-resident tuition

I have been asked lately why we do not charge tuition/fees for non-resident students? There are 11 students (not 25 or 65 as some may have heard) of staff members currently enrolled in the Cohasset Public Schools. This is a long-standing benefit established to attract and retain the best faculty and staff possible. It has been suggested to increase revenue for non-resident students that the school committee votes to become a "School Choice" district. However, school districts of "Choice" cannot select who is enrolled. It must be an open application process with random selection. There is also a per pupil cap of $5,000 reimbursement for each student accepted for "School Choice". This amount is far below the per-pupil expended currently in Cohasset. Because of class size concerns, the need to increase staff and program offerings for the current student population, and the fact that the per pupil reimbursement rate is far less than what is currently expended on average each year, the school committee voted at its May 25, 2006 meeting, not to be a "Choice" community.

Regionalization

Another question I am asked regularly is about regionalization of the school district. There was a day when the state offered fiscal incentives to regional school districts. Unfortunately, that is no longer the case. Smaller districts that have surveyed larger communities to see if there was any interest in regionalization, have found no takers. The loss of autonomy for any school district as well as the legislative action that is required, do not make it an attractive venture.

Be assured the school department does share costs with surrounding communities in many ways — collaborative purchasing for utilities (gas and electricity), special education transportation, special education programs through the South Shore Educational Collaborative, to name just a few.

Fiscal responsibilities

Finally, the fiscal responsibilities of the Superintendent of Schools as Chief Financial Officer of the department as well as the Cohasset School Committee as outlined in the Education Reform Law, create operational systems unlike any other town department. The legislature has created it that way.

A line-item budget is developed annually. The format for school budget development is not the same as other town departments. The required school format is in the same function code model that is used for reporting end of year expenditures to the Department of Education, Department of Revenue and the audit report.

Additional revenue is received beyond the operational budget to offset expenses throughout the year. For example, reimbursement from the state is received for a percentage of out-of-district tuition for our special needs population. This revenue is maintained outside of the operational budget, but calculated as part of total expenditures. For forecasting purposes, this anticipated reimbursement is deducted from the out-of-district line item during the budget building process.

The school committee may decide at anytime to utilize this revenue for unanticipated (non-budgeted) tuitions or to prepay tuitions and avoid deficits at the end of the next fiscal year. These are fiscal obligations that are ever changing and require very different fiscal controls. For the second year in a row, due to sound fiscal management, the school department will close at the end of the fiscal year without an operational deficit.

In conclusion, I hope this has answered your questions. Please check our website at www.cohassetk12.org to view up to date budget information or to follow up with more specific information regarding each building/grade level.

Wine and lamb can be the perfect pair

WHICH WINE

AMYRA O'CONNELL & BRIAN HOULIHAN

At the end of the night, after I clear the last of the wine tasting and Brian finishes his last entrée, we meet at his bistro and compare our evening over a glass of wine. Our friendship and our conversations are rooted in a very symbiotic relationship. Brian runs a bistro and I sell wine. Our conversations are almost never linear. We both share a passion for food, wine, and our clientele. And from our vantage point, we have watched our worlds defined by the people that cross our thresholds. Whether our nights are marked by a celebration, a business meeting, a sorrow, an escape from a winter storm, or a simple night out, our job is to provide food and wine within a warm ambience. The outside world, for better or worse always dictates our business and in return we sometimes influence the outside. At best it makes for some very interesting times and at the end of the day we both agree it is not a bad way to make a living.

One very distinct way our passions have fused is through the ubiquitous Wine Dinner. For many of our clients this is a night of pure hedonistic pleasure — a five-course meal exquisitely paired with five wines. There were times that even I would groan momentarily under the culinary weight of food and wine, but only until the next course. The Wine Dinner, given the context of a warm bistro, Brian's meticulous attention to detail, the passion of a particular winemaker's presentation, and the swirl of lively conversations, was a perfect marriage between food and grape. The most frequently asked question in my store, "What wine goes with this food?" was sometimes a direct result of the Wine Dinner. Over the years it became apparent that the level of sophistication among our clients grew alongside the attendance of my Friday night wine tastings and Brian's Wine Dinners.

And so it makes sense to begin our first column with wine-food pairing. Brian's philosophy is tradition based. "When I think about wine and food I mainly think of terroir," he says. "The idea of terroir is basic to the way I cook. In Europe terroir is about native wine vines growing alongside native food. It's a natural pairing." While listening to Brian explain his approach, it occurs to me that the idea of wine-food pairing could be a New World concept. In Europe drinking a Chablis with oysters or a Chianti with prosciutto, is not the result of a scientific sensory study, it sprang organically from the soil. There is no doubt that wine and food do accentuate each other, but a meal is also enhanced by conversation, music, and friendship. Brian's philosophy that wine exists for food, but that food does not exist for wine, may have some validity. Maybe wine's role is to enhance a meal. Perhaps our New World approach of 101 rules to wine-food pairing is a bit over the top. Maybe the answer is to drink your favorite wine with your favorite food or if you're worried about creating the perfect wine-food pairing, stop worrying. Instead let pleasure and surprise be your guidelines.

No chef can help loving a traditional roasted lamb accompanied with seasonal vegetables as a way to welcome the spring. In bistro fashion Brian believes the simplicity and freshness is what makes this meal special. "I like the idea of a roasted lamb with potatoes simply studded with rosemary and garlic and served in its own juices," Brian says. "When pairing the wine to lamb, I don't think about the lamb, I think about the accompaniments. It's the garlic and rosemary that's my link to the wine. And because it's a simple meal — and bistro cooking is about simple food —I am not looking to crack open an Opus One. I want a wine that is simple and inexpensive, like a Barbera. It is an easy, drinkable wine."

Barbera is indeed a simple wine. It is indigenous to the Piedmont region in Italy and it is by no means a thoroughbred; in fact it is one of the world's most widely planted grape varieties. For many it is a thrilling new find with its combination of "pricklingly" high acid, mouth-filling fruit, and a bone dry finish.

But since we have adopted a laissez-faire attitude to wine-food pairing, I would like to increase the complexity just a notch and suggest a Cotes-du-Rhone Village from the Rhone Valley in France. Still a simple wine, Cotes-du-Rhone, is a blend of syrah, grenache, mourvedre. What attracts me to this combination is the rich, herbal, "garliclyness" of the lamb, tied to the rich, spicy juiciness of the wine.

And so to answer the question: "Which wine goes best with lamb?" you will find that whichever vine grows alongside the lamb, is your wine. Historically the relationship between lamb and wine in such places as Bordeaux, Greece, northern Spain, northern Italy, and southern France is centuries old. So when it comes to wine-food pairing, there are no absolutes, only endless variations of pleasure!

HEALTH NOTES

Rain, runoff, water and our health

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

I would guess that you're tired of the subject of water by now; at least in the quantities we've been experiencing, but just in case you're not, we'll give you a brief overview of the health implications of the extraordinary amount of rain we've been having. In many ways, last week's rain was unique for Cohasset. It occurred at exactly the time that many State, Federal and local water quality people were doing measurements in Town.

The EPA was here from their lab in Chelmsford; representatives for Mass Dept. of Environmental Protection were here, and under the leadership Jack Buckley and his indispensable staff at the Center for Student Coastal Research, students from the High School were taking data in Town for the Board of Health under sponsorship of the Department of Coastal Zone Management of the Executive Office of Environmental affairs.

The researchers caught one of the most prodigious releases of pollution into the Town's waters that has ever been recorded. Throughout the system, bacteria levels reached over a hundred times the safe limit for several hours. Ponds of polluted water covered streets, lawns, cellars. Virtually every bit of data indicated levels of bacteria above safe limits. Such levels are present at isolated locations in Town during every rain event, but never before have we had people collecting data from critical locations all over the Downtown area. And only now, do we know what happens in Cohasset during a deluge such as we saw last week.

It speaks volumes for contractors, volunteers and town employees who did the planning, sampling and data analysis. There were examples of enormous dedication and real commitment on the part of students and supervisors. Some students braved downpours and lightning. Some stayed up well into the night, analyzing data, and all, though wet, tired and harried, demonstrated that volunteers working for a cause can bring enormous value to their community. And now the Town has something no other town has: a method for collecting information on the performance of our stormwater system at a time when it is most important: during a rain event under first flush conditions when the pollution collected along our streets our parking lots and our back yards is being scoured and washed into our drain system. At long last, there's a method by which towns can know by direct measurement how well their drainage systems operate and where the weaknesses lie.

Last week's rains created pollution over much of the eastern seaboard. Cohasset was not alone, and from an environmental degradation standpoint, the last 12 months have been one of the most damaging that the nation has ever witnessed. And finally, the experts all now agree: storms are more violent and frequent and that's just the beginning. We can no longer ignore the changing climate. Moreover, the teachers and students of this little coastal town have a gift to give which, with all our help, can be brought to all communities along the South Shore.

It's about the water we drink, and it's all connected. Water from your tap comes through pumps, pipes and valves that control its flow from a pond which is connected to a stream to the harbor to the bay to the ocean where it evaporates in a continuous cycle. Myriad materials go into water and just as many purifying steps remove them; some natural; some artificial. The baseline purification is evaporation. Surface water evaporates relatively quickly depending on temperature, eventually ending up in the air we breathe. Increasingly, fresh drinking water is becoming scarce; frequently, it's more expensive than soft drinks or beer. And drinking water has flavor. If you don't believe it; try drinking distilled water; not deionized water, but distilled water. Pond water is different from well water and water from springs tastes differently with location. There are so many things added to water as it makes its way from clouds to lakes to earth to ocean that a big part of determining water's influence on health is finding what's in the water we drink and filtering out what we don't want.

For home use, the rule of thumb is to compare the water you are interested in drinking to water from the same source which has been processed by a filter using activated charcoal. One web page for water filter information with a list of suppliers may be found at http://www.heartspring.net/water_filters_guide.html . A simple way to ensure the water you drink meets minimum taste requirements is to ask your favorite appliance store to tell you what they have in the way of activated charcoal household water filters and obtain one which fits your needs. We can assume the Water Department knows what it's doing and provides generally safe water meeting all relevant standards.

So we know that our drinking water's safe, but what can we do, practically, to protect ourselves and our loved ones from the ever present threat of illness from contamination of places and things we once considered safe. The threat of bacterial contamination has always been with us and fortunately, we have learned to live with it. We wipe our children's noses and wash our hands before dinner because we've learned that we can reduce the risk of illness by so doing. The difference now is that contamination may reside in places we hereto considered clean and harmless. Dogs drinking or walking through, and children playing in, seemingly harmless puddles may now be at risk. Just as we've become more suspicious and protective in our personal relationships, we have to become more vigilant in our hygiene.

But even more important, now our student volunteers from the CSCR have given us an important tool to tell us how bad things really are.

Wars over the 'Fluffernutter'

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

At least it got those illegal immigrants off the front pages, for a day or so, anyway.

I'm talking about the Great Fluffernutter Controversy that pitted Jarrett Barrios, the elected senator from Cambridge, against Kathi-Anne Reinstein, the elected state representative from Revere, while their Democratic colleagues chose up sides and Republicans blamed Ted Kennedy.

I hasten to point out that both Barrios and Reinstein were "elected" to those positions in case this column happens to be read by someone from outside New England who gets the idea that we allow children as young as 12 to vote for our Great and General Court. Sometimes even I wonder.

Living in Cambridge where they serve tofu steaks at cookouts, Barrios was aghast at this violation of nutrition standards...

The whole thing started when Barrios's son, Nathaniel, came home from the King Open School and announced that his third-grade class had been served fluffernutter sandwiches, that is, peanut butter and marshmallow fluff between two slices of bread, as the main meal of the day.

Living in Cambridge where they serve tofu steaks at cookouts, Barrios was aghast at this violation of nutrition standards so he announced plans to file an amendment to a pending school junk-food bill that would ban the serving of fluffernutters more often than one day a week in the public schools of Massachusetts.

This brought Reinstein into the action since her district is near Lynn where the Durkee-Mower plant has produced marshmallow fluff for more than 80 years. "I'm going to fight to the death for Fluff," she said but, failing that, she proposed that the fluffernutter be named the office state sandwich.

Stay tuned.

Incidentally, if it is made the official state sandwich it will become the 50th official state thing-a-ma-jig to be duly so noted by our legislature — our "elected" legislature, I might add, for the benefit of those from out of state. In fact, you could put together a pretty tasty meal from our official state foods.

Let's see, we can start of with an official drink (cranberry juice) followed up by an official muffin (corn), an official game bird (wild turkey, the bird not the booze), an official bean (navy) and an official dessert (Boston cream pie). If you're still hungry, you can scarf down an official state doughnut.

I hate to admit it but I have never knowingly eaten a fluffernutter sandwich, I say "knowingly" because there were times in the dim past when I wasn't sure I had eaten at all or if I ever would eat again. My exotic sandwich of choice was peanut butter and sliced gherkins, which I ate with my back to my classmates lest someone see me.

In order to end this effort on a happy note, while Barrios and Reinstein were fighting over fluffernutters, the school committee in my own town of Braintree was approving guidelines that would allow school groups to sell junk food like candy bars and cookies to raise funds and permit teachers to reward students with candy.

Tune-in to Village talk

Our Town discussion continues about Cohasset's Downtown Revitalization Project.

Former Selectman Ronnie McMorris joins co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin to raise questions on whether the project has followed the original plans voted in by the town.

Political activist Nancy Garrison takes the position that the project is in line with the town's wishes and provides her understanding of the goals and outcomes of the current project.

Be sure to tune in at OUR TOWN's new times of 9p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays all on Comcast channel 10.

Merchants like the new look in the village

town and has ensured his crew has been working diligently to complete the project as soon as possible. "It's looking good," he said.

James Watson, owner of Cohasset Hardware, 40 S. Main St., said he thinks the Village project turned out "Just fine." He said it is time for the town to "Get on with it and leave the negativity in the rear-view mirror," as he has heard some are still upset about the material chosen for the sidewalks.

"Asphalt ages better than concrete," he said. When the sidewalks need mending down the road, he said it will be much easier to fix asphalt than it would be to have to cut up big pieces of concrete and replace it. He said concrete stains more easily and in his opinion, with the time and resources the town had, he feels the right decision was made to go with asphalt. "You have to look at the big picture," he said.

Watson said just having the Village open full-time again is wonderful as his business was affected "Big time." He said he probably had a decrease in sales of about 30 percent during construction, and fortunately business is starting to pick up again now that construction is nearing its end.

Frank Smith, owner of Flemings, 24 Elm St., said he is just glad to see something being done as he has owned his shop for 23 years and the entire time, there has been talk about the project but no action. "I think it looks better, but I know a lot of people weren't ready for the black top," he said. He added while he isn't looking forward to the construction that will ensue on his street when and if grant funding is secured to complete its streetscape project, the drainage improvements which have taken place will be a real improvement.

"They are an accident waiting to happen," Smith said of the sidewalks on Elm Street, adding this winter, water was not draining properly and was pooling and icing up. "It is going to be a much safer situation," this year, he said.

Smith noted while the process has been tough for those who live and work in the Village, it is time to move forward. "We hoped they would have finished earlier," he said, but with the summer season in full swing, business at his shop has been on a slow uphill climb.

But for Bia Bistro, 35 S. Main St., which opened its doors in December 2003, the transition has not been as smooth. Tristen Houlihan, who owns the restaurant with her husband, executive chef Brian Houlihan, said while communication was open during construction and they were kept up-to-date with the project, business was significantly affected. "Our business was cut in half," she said, adding while the restaurant had been receiving great exposure through various media outlets and business had been booming, once construction began, people stopped coming. "We couldn't even open for lunch until two weeks ago," she said, as many customers said it was just too much of a hassle to come down to the Village with the construction going on.

Houlihan said Wild Plums, which used to be located in the Independence Building, across the street from the restaurant, was so affected it had to close. She said she recently went into the South Boston Wild Plums store and business was booming, which indicates to her it is not the market for the business, but the surroundings it had in Cohasset that caused it to fail.

But now that the project is finishing up, Houlihan said she is optimistic with the Farmer's Market on the Common every week and the Music Circus bringing people to the area, more people will begin filtering into the Village and give a boost to all the downtown shops and restaurants. "It's such a shame, last night was such a beautiful night and there should have been people all over," she said of Tuesday night, but the streets were fairly empty.

Wayne Sawchuk, owner of the buildings at 35 to 39 South Main St., said he is "Thrilled with how the Village is turning out. I like the job they've done with the crosswalks," he said, which are lined with granite pavers. However, he explained he had his heart set on brick sidewalks and had even approached the Board of Selectmen to see if it would approve allowing him to pay to install brick in front of his property. He had asked other downtown property owners if they would be willing to do the same, and they said yes.

"I hope the asphalt surface will only be temporary," he said, adding there are bricks being installed at the corner of South Main Street and Depot Court in front of Farsh Oriental Rugs and Antiques and he thinks it looks wonderful. "I am thrilled for the corner merchant who will have a delightful appearance. I know it will give a boost to his business, and he's a first-class merchant. Unfortunately, the rest of the town is going to have to be happy with asphalt," he said.

Village revitalization timeline

• Early 1990s: a small group of citizens proposes a project to renew and improve the appearance of the Village

• 1996: several residents provide the seed money and effort to begin a study and hire a project leader to come up with a concept for the Village revitalization.

• The Cecil Group is hired to turn the ideas into a rough design. The town applies for a Public Works Economic Development grant from the state Department of Transportation to cover the cost of the project.

• Fall, 2001: PWED grant is awarded by the Secretary of Transportation to the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen at a ceremony on the Common.

• Fall, 2002: Town Manager Mark Haddad hires the Waterfield Design Group to do the final design for the project and puts it out to bid. Many meetings and hearings were held and designs were done and redone.

• Summer, 2004: The project goes out to bid. Over the course of the previous two years, the town spent roughly $300,000 for engineering and design work, leaving roughly $1.2 million for the construction phase of the project. One bid was received for the project, but it was more money than the town had left to spend.

• Winter, 2005: the Downtown Revitalization Committee reconvenes to decide how to approach the project. It decides to recommend simplifying the project including partitioning the project to allow the town to select certain sections for construction, allowing some work to be done with the money available, and changing the way the project was bid from lump sum to unit pricing (lump sum is a fixed price for the total scope of construction while unit pricing permits the town to pay for work done).

• Results of the Downtown Revitalization Committee were presented to the Board of Selectmen in March 2005. The following month, a public hearing was held and three citizens attended. The project was put back out to bid and the revisions cost the town $20,000.

• Three bidders responded and the low bidder, Northern Construction, was awarded the contract. With higher energy costs resulting in higher construction costs, only the most basic portion of the project could be completed within the town's budget. South Main Street by the Red Lion Inn is being paid for using state funding, and streetscape improvements for Elm and Brook streets will have to wait until the town has more money. For now, only drainage work has been completed on those streets.

Asphalt sidewalks disappointing to some

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We spent so much time on this, I'm really disappointed. We don't have the sidewalks we voted to have."
— Ronnie McMorris, Doane Street

While most everyone in town will agree it was great to finally see something done in the Village after more than 20 years of talking about it, there are still mixed emotions about the project's outcome. Some are unhappy to see asphalt sidewalks when they had expected concrete.

Former Selectman Ronnie McMorris, who also works at Rooms in Bloom, 64 S. Main St., which is owned by her friend Darilynn Evans, said she has spoken with many residents regarding the outcome of the project. "People are disappointed with the look. We voted for concrete sidewalks," she said.

"I was never a fan of the asphalt and I was never a fan of the brick, but I am a fan of Town Meeting and I think people should respect the vote of the people," she said.

At the time of the November 2003 fall Special Town Meeting, there were essentially two sidewalk materials on the table: brick and concrete. The first order of business for the town during the meeting was to vote on whether it wanted to see the wires buried downtown. The vote was cast knowing if it passed, the town could only afford to have concrete sidewalks, not brick. Brick could only be afforded on its own.

The town voted down burying the wires, and in turn was asked to vote on whether it would "approve a concept for improvements to the sidewalks and streets in...the Downtown Business District. Said improvements to include concrete sidewalks, more or less as shown on plans on file in the office of the Town Clerk."

McMorris said it has been said the town ended up with asphalt due to its lack of funding. She said if cost was an issue, the crosswalks should not have been upgraded. She said the money saved could have been put into the sidewalks which were people's number-one priority. "We spent so much time on this, I'm really disappointed. We don't have the sidewalks we voted to have."

McMorris said it has also been suggested she voted as a member of the board in favor of some of the changes which have been made. "This wasn't my plan," she said, adding she has always been in favor of concrete sidewalks.

However, Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said residents actually had three opportunities to voice their opinions. He said at one point, the James Brook walkway had sidewalk options laid out for people to vote on and of the roughly 244 people who voted, 240 voted in favor of brick pavers.

After the vote, a petition circulated which asked residents to weigh in on whether they opposed the proposed bumpouts, or extended sidewalks, and concrete as the sidewalk material. Dormitzer said 750 were opposed to both. Following that petition, he said the Board of Selectmen brought forward the concept including concrete sidewalks to Town Meeting. Dormitzer said the town has since been advised by Town Counsel the vote taken on the article for concrete sidewalks was a vote for a concept and not an actual binding vote of the town.

Dormitzer said in his opinion, the project as it has been done looks great. "I have had nothing but compliments coming back. We have a few more trees to go, but everything is looking attractive. We're lucky to have gotten as much as we did," he said.

Dormitzer said he really likes the look of the crosswalks as well as the asphalt sidewalks. He said concrete to him is a more urban material and Cohasset has always had asphalt. "Why should we change it?" he said.

After the project is complete in roughly one week, Dormitzer said he thinks residents will be pleased with the results. He said the park at the end of Elm Street will have its brick laid and there will be three planters installed at the end of Depot Court. There will also be granite sets installed around the trees which will be a nice decorative touch and three more trees will be planted on the Cohasset Hardware side of South Main Street. "We didn't plan on planting them, but the rest of the trees looked so nice, we decided to keep going," he said.

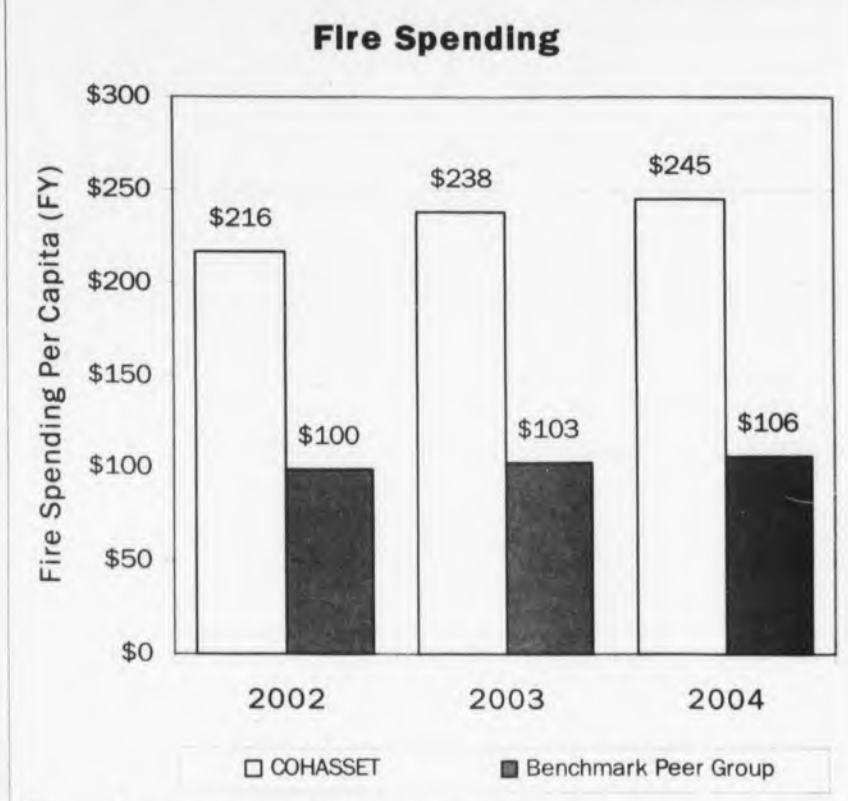
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com).

This chart shows how much Cohasset spent per capita on fire in 2002, 2003 and 2004. By looking at spending on a per capita basis, one can address the cost of fire services for each resident. Fire spending often varies based on the level and type of services that the department offers. A department may be call/volunteer, full time or a combination of both. In addition, a department may offer EMT or ambulance service. All other things being equal, a full time department that offers the advanced life support services will cost more than a call department that offers basic services. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group, which gives a sense for how other, similar communities have allocated their resources to fire safety.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series. This is the first of six benchmarks about the fire department.

MATT DUNNING

Part one of two)

There's an old saying in the concert business that goes, "Early is on time, on time is late, and late is you're fired." On Saturday morning two weeks ago, by concert standards, I was late.

Between 2000 and 2005, I spent a total of five summers working at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, the last two (2004 and 2005) as the Lighting Director. Earlier this year, I was called in to help train the new LD on the Circus' lighting rig. When that LD didn't work out, I was called in again earlier this month to work a one-off show with 70s rock favorites the Doobie Brothers.

What follows is an account of one day on the job as a 'Circus tech, a behind-the-scenes look at how big-name talents manage to squeeze into the friendly confines of the Cohasset big top.

11 a.m. Load in:

I pulled in to the 'Circus parking lot about one minute before 11 to find the other 'Circus techs milling around the front of the production shop, waiting for the Doobie Brothers' tour crew to finish breakfast. One by one, the Doobies' boys filed out of Hospitality and led us up to the waiting 18-wheeler.

Before I get too far into this, it's worth mentioning that a big part of working on the production crew at the Music Circus is learning the terminology. In the concert business, everything has a name, and if one expects to be able to function as a tech, one had better learn the language. But fret not, dear reader, for I am not Anthony Burgess, and this is not "A Clockwork Orange." I'll do my best to refrain from inundating you with jargon and slang without ample definition.

Even after seven years in concert production, I still can't help feeling a twinge of dread in the moment before the trailer doors swing open. I always think back to one of the first shows I worked on, country giants Brooks and Dunn in 2000. When we opened their first truck (they had two), the first thing we saw was a 60-foot steel-truss longhorn cattle skull. In my naiveté, I remember asking if we were going to use it.

Where production is concerned, the Music Circus is divided into three key locations. There's the orchestra pit behind the stage, where the monitor rig (that is, the console for mixing all speakers not pointed at the audience) and instrument techs will be housed; the stage (often referred to as the deck), where the band is typically put; and front-of-house, the area from which the house audio will be mixed.

The nice thing about returning acts like the Doobie Brothers is they generally have a good understanding of what equipment they will or won't use, given the size and nature of our venue, so they pack their truck accordingly. This year, we had the added fortune of seeing the Doobies after they already played our sister venue, the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis, which meant that their trailer had been packed specifically to suit our venue's constraints. This makes the unloading of the trailer worlds easier, as everything the tour crew knows it's going to need is packed ahead of the things they know they won't. Case by case, we roll the gear out of the trailer, down the steel ramp, and set off to the side of the trailer. The system is such that we have two cells of kids working on "the dump," one cell rolling the cases off the truck, and the other moving them to the various locations mentioned a paragraph ago. Occasionally, the entire crew (or most of it, anyway) is needed to move the heavier cases off the truck, lest no one die. All told, the process of emptying the truck typically takes about 45 minutes.

11:45 a.m., Basic cable:

As you can probably imagine, putting a concert in the round carries with is a unique set of challenges.

One such challenge is that of getting cable (power, signal, etc.) from the amplifiers and power supplies in the pit to the gear on stage, which wouldn't be such a hard task to negotiate if our stage didn't spin 360 degrees during the shows. In the old days of the Circus, two techs would be relegated to the pit during shows, one to operate the stage's motor control and the other to page a massive loom of speaker, microphone, and power cables on and off the stage as it spun. It was a good workout, but wholly inefficient.

Thankfully, in 2002, when Dave Wentling signed on as the Production Manager, a new system was implemented. Nowadays, any cable that needs to go from the pit to the stage is pulled through a 10-foot tube and laid in a circular trough under the center of the stage. With enough slack underneath, the stage can make a full 360- degree turn. For you physicists reading, yes, the stage could make two full rotations in the opposite direction of the loom's lay, but the strain on the cables as the stage pulls them over themselves would be too great to chance even a single chord being yanked out of its socket.

Again, following the Cape on the Doobies' tour worked in our favor, as they had pre-loomed their cables to fit the Melody Tent's trough system. (To give credit where credit is due, it was their idea first.) Having the cables pre-measured and pre-loomed cut down the time it took to lay them in the trough by at least half.

Justin Dunk, a member of the crew at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, pushes a storage case onto center state in preparation for a recent show.

12:30 p.m., What, no key-tar:

Setting up the instruments generally doesn't take long, at least not where the local crew is concerned.

Mostly, the tour crew will ask us to unpack the instruments, and simply place them in the area on stage the musician will likely call home for the night. In some cases, such as keyboard and bass rigs, the local crew is asked to physically set up the gear. However, especially where drum kits, amplifiers, and guitars are involved, the tour crew does a great deal of the work themselves, including all of the tuning. After all, the talent would probably prefer their instruments, which have a tendency to be worth more than a Circus tech will make all summer, not spend too much time in the hands of the local grunts.

Once the band gear is set, most of the local crew is let go until 6 p.m., when they're needed back for parking and last minute clean-ups. Stage Manager Tim Berry and I, however, are typically asked to stay the whole day to attend to specific lighting (me) and sound issues (him) as they arise.

(This column will be continued next week.)

Summer Institute kicks off season of maritime study

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the eighth consecutive year in a row, students participating in the Summer Institute will gather data for the town to better assess the health of its waters.

At the June 15 School Committee meeting, teacher and Summer Institute coordinator Jack Buckley came before the board and received resounding approval for the program, which provides students with summer coursework for credit, or for fun, during their summer vacation. Operating out of the Center for Student Coastal Research in Mariner's Park on Parker Avenue, the Summer Institute will offer six courses this summer, covering everything from the town's marshes to the harbor to dealing with stormwater management.

The CSCR offers programs for students year-round. The Summer Institute is one of the longest-running programs, as it has grown out of a professional development program which was sponsored by the school department, and took place over the course of 16 Saturdays in 1998 and 1999. Teachers who participated, including Buckley, David Magnussen, Patti McGrail, Jody Wood and Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey, created a maritime studies pilot program which worked cooperatively with the Board of Health to test fecal coliform levels in the harbor. That project began with roughly 15 students and has grown to the roughly 50 students who have signed up for this summer's program, which Buckley said is an all-time high in terms of participation.

"It gives students opportunities to become engaged in science and produce data that can withstand the rigors of professional review," said Buckley, adding students gain real practical experience which provides data for the town. In fact, he said for five consecutive years, students who have participated in the Summer Institute have won the prestigious Henry David Thoreau Scholarship for outstanding work in science.

This year, the Summer Institute is offering courses dealing with Gulf River non-point source pollution, wetland monitoring, Cohasset Harbor bacteria monitoring, James Brook non-point source pollution and storm drain analysis, and is also working cooperatively with the Mariner to open up its pages to students interested in producing a weekly column detailing the efforts of those doing field work with the Summer Institute. "The schools, non-profit organizations and the community are working together to create opportunities that do not normally exist during the school year," Buckley said.

The Gulf River non-point source pollution study will focus on collecting and analyzing water quality data in the upper reaches of the Gulf River, a tidal river which significantly influences the health of Cohasset Harbor. The study will benefit the towns of Cohasset and Scituate, and is important to Coastal Zone Management and the Gulf Association, a watershed protection organization that has been active in environmental stewardship since the 1960s. Students entering grades nine through 12 will conduct water quality field and lab analysis, complete a computer mapping project, meet with Scituate and Cohasset officials, analyze data and compile a report for submission to state and local officials.

"It gives students opportunities to become engaged in science and produce data that can withstand the rigors of professional review."
— Jack Buckley, Summer Insitute

Wetland monitoring will be done by students entering grades eight through 12. Students will work with CZM officials as that office monitors wetlands throughout the state to determine how well it is managing its estuaries. Students will monitor one of five salt marshes on the South Shore and will learn how to collect pore-water salinity in salt marshes, identify vegetation and collect, quantify, and identify little fish that live in and around salt marshes. All data collected by students will be submitted to CZM.

The EPA's Cohasset Harbor bacteria monitoring project is for students entering grades eight through 12. The EPA has selected Cohasset Harbor as a sampling site to address bacterial pollution at Bassing Beach. Students will work with the Harbor Health Committee to help collect and publish data, giving the community a "report card" on the health of the harbor.

The James Brook non-point source pollution project is already underway and will continue with students entering grades eight through 12 during the summer. The current grant-funded assessment of the waterway is nearing completion and aspects of the project which are not completed will be the focus of the summer work. Storm drain inspections and recording will be a significant part of the project, and students will work with other students participating in a storm drain analysis and stenciling project.

Those participating in the storm drain analysis and stenciling project will help the town complete its storm drain data collection and mapping project. Stormwater management is one of the most important components to managing a healthy harbor and marine ecosystem, and the EPA mandates all cities and towns have stormwater management plans in place to minimize the amount of pollution entering harbors through storm drain pipes. With supervision from members of the Department of Public Works, students will go into the streets of Cohasset to measure and record information about storm drains. Students will identify those drains that lead directly to the harbor outfall and stencil on the pavement educational notices to the public, such as letting people know the water which enters the drain flows to a stream and waste should not be dumped down the drain.

Students entering grades 11 and 12 may serve as a student correspondent to the Mariner, producing a weekly column for the paper which includes photographs. The course is an independent study project and columns published would inform the public about the projects being completed by the students and adults who work for the Summer Institute, and the importance of the work being done.

Buckley said by participating in the classes, students can receive course credits, although not everyone participates to that extent. In order to receive credit, a student must have 54 hours of work completed, submit a journal and have it reviewed by the chair of the science department.

Steve Bobo of the Board of Health was also present at the meeting and spoke to the importance of the Summer Institute. Over the years he has worked very closely with the CSCR to collect data for the town, and he said the students are providing very useful information which is being utilized by a number of organizations in town. "The water supply, estuaries, parks, playing fields, marshes, they're all being monitored by volunteer students," said Bobo, adding the scholarships the students receive as a result of their work is just the icing on the cake. "They receive an enormous amount of recognition and it provides credentials for beginning résumés," he said.

Bobo said the students are able to learn by doing during the summer months, and expand on what the schools are able to offer during the school year. "The curriculum can't cover all the scientific fields, but the students are able to practice all summer," he said. The Summer Institute is also not at the mercy of a budget, as it receives grants from CZM, the EPA, the Cohasset Education Foundation, the Gulf Association and the Lighthouse Keepers.

Bobo said currently, the CSCR is working on obtaining a grant that would be able to pay the salaries for four or five teachers which would teach at the schools during the school year and at the CSCR over the summer. "If we can do this right, we can offer classes all year round," said Bobo.

Legion has sights set on playoffs

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset American Legion Post 118 baseball team continued its quest for a spot in the Zone 6 American Legion playoffs by picking up a pair of victories during the past week to take a 4-2-2 record into its game on Tuesday against winless Quincy.

A win there set up a showdown on Wednesday against Braintree with second place in the zone at stake.

Cohasset surprised then-unbeaten Braintree by rallying for a 12-12 tie in the team's first meeting, and surprised another of the zone's perennial powerhouses by coming from behind to pick up a 7-4 victory over Weymouth Monday night.

That win came after three days off because of rain and moved Cohasset into third place in the zone, and Post 118 was only three points behind second-place Braintree with a game in hand going into Wednesday's matchup between the two at Scituate High.

"Beating Weymouth was big for us," said Post 118 manager Fred Caffrey. "We were down in the game early and we came back. We got some big hits and Chris Bryan was very strong on the mound after we gave them a couple of unearned runs in the first inning. This has to be as big a win as we have had so far this season."

It didn't look promising for Cohasset when Post 79 jumped on Bryan for three runs in the top of the first inning, but Bryan shut the door on last year's Zone 6 East runnerup the rest of the way, limiting Weymouth to just one run and three hits over the final six innings.

Bryan, who graduated from Cohasset High School earlier this month, pitched a complete-

Spofford offers plenty to CHS softball team

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Virginia Spofford was a third grader when she picked up a softball for the first time in her life.

Little did she know that, eight years later, her softball coach would ask her to serve as a co-captain for the 2007 varsity softball team.

Head coach Deb Bostwick quickly pointed out how much Spofford earned this leadership position.

"Virginia never gets rattled," Bostwick said. "She stays very composed in tight situations and she always has lots of intensity. She just loves the game."

Her teammates see her as a born leader.

"Virginia gets along with everybody," said Alida Tangherlini. "She always shows a very positive attitude. We find Virginia really easy to talk to. She'll make a great co-captain."

Spofford's intensity and love for the game becomes evident when one takes a close look at Spofford's 2006 statistics. She finished the season in Manny Ramirez territory with a .329 batting average. She also punched in 17 RBIs and stole 14 stolen bases. No one blinked an eye when Spofford's name popped up on the South Shore League All-Star team.

She also pitched with a high level of skill. Starting last year as a sophomore, Virginia completely transformed her little league pitching style. Both Spofford and teammate Christina Pinkus (also a newly named co-captain) intimidated many of their SSL batting opponents.

As the '05 season progressed, Spofford matched her strikeout count with an equally impressive batting average. She ended up winning the Skippers' 2005 Best Offensive Player award.

When the 2006 softball season drew near, it became very obvious Spofford's pitching and offensive production would prove crucial to the team's success. That's exactly what happened.

Still, Spofford comes across as caring less about her personal stats and more about her team's success.

"The 2006 season has been a really positive experience," she said. "Everyone knew each other really well. The team atmosphere was great. We all worked well together. We did everything as a team."

So how did Spofford accomplish so much by the end of her junior year? The answer lies in a combination of personal perseverance and good family softball genes.

Behind the scenes Spofford trains regularly with a pitching coach. During softball season you can find her next at the high school, throwing pitches both before and after practice.

Spofford keeps on throwing even when the regular season ends. On her Braintree summer-league team she loves to rattle opposing batters.

The rest of the Spofford family shares Virginia's passion for softball. Her father, Rob, directs the Softball Boosters Club. When Virginia graduates after the 2007 season, keep an eye out for her three younger sisters. They all are Little League prodigies who will likely follow in her talented footsteps.

In fact, softball represents only a small part of Spofford's life. This fall, once again Spofford will play an important role on the field hockey team, a squad also coached by Bostwick.

At school Spofford maintains a GPA that blows her batting average out of the water. Her subject of choice? French. When not in class or on the ball field, Spofford can be found leading the clarinet section in the concert band.

We're not done yet. In her free time, Spofford enthusiastically participates in community service through the Girl Scouts. She has already earned the Silver Award. Spofford hopes to earn the coveted Gold Award in the next few years.

So, no matter what way the cookies crumble, we can count on Virginia Spofford to provide excitement on the athletic fields, in school and with the Girl Scouts.

Reasons aplenty for laxers' success

Forecast for '07 looks good, too

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Looking at its roster, it's not hard to see why the Cohasset High boys lacrosse won a state title this spring.

There is an abundance of talent at every position, and it all came together to form a cohesive unit that could win any type of game.

Never was that more evident than during the Skippers' state tournament run. After a couple laughers against South Shore Voc. Tech and Nantucket, Cohasset ran into archrival Scituate, and it was a game for the ages. Cohasset came out on top, 13-11, setting the stage for the state championship game at Alumni Field against Dover-Sherborn.

Unlike the Scituate game, the contest with D-S was a low-scoring affair that needed to be won in the midfield and in defense. Not a problem; Cohasset 8, D-S 3, and a state title trophy for the Skippers.

Starting up front, senior Aidan Buick ended his high school career in style, scoring seven goals against Scituate

I got your red card right here

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

In his masterpiece on the beautiful game, Soccer in Sun and Shadow, Uruguayan historian and author Eduardo Galeano describes the referee thusly:

"An abominable tyrant who runs his dictatorship without opposition, a pompous executioner who exercises his absolute power with an operatic flourish."

The book was written in 1998, but at no time have Galeano's words rung more true than during this 2006 World Cup. Or, shall we call it now, the Cup of the Referees.

Galeano goes on to say, "Card in hand, he raises the colors of doom: yellow to punish the sinner and oblige him to repent, and red to force him to exile."

Well, there have been far too much repenting and exiling in this tournament, at least until Monday's Ukraine-Switzerland match, where apparently nothing short of bone protruding from the flesh was going to draw a card from the pocket of referee Armundo Archundia.

What in the name of Pierluigi Collina is going on here?

It has been ignored, if not forgotten, that the marvelous, wildly underrated Maniche scored another cracker of a goal in Portugal's 1-0 victory over Holland on Sunday. That strike is not the topic of discussion upon review of the match, of course, due to the sheer lunacy surrounding referee Valentin Ivanov.

There has been enough Ivanov-bashing in the football world to last us two lifetimes, so we'll keep it to a minimum here. It has to be said, however, that the Russian dug his own grave barely a minute into the match when he gave Dutchman Mark van Bommel a foolish yellow card for a tackle that was a simple foul, and nothing more.

If Ivanov is to be commended for one thing, it should be for his consistency, because the silly bookings kept coming, and in various ways. How does Gio van Bronckhorst earn that second yellow? How is Luis Figo, that inglorious weasel, still on the field to flop around after he headbutted van Bommel? Why does Khalid Boulahrouz get his second yellow for barely touching Figo?

The lasting image of this game – save for the redundancy of Ivanov showing off his card collection – came in the closing seconds, with the surreal sight of Portugal's Deco and Holland's van Bronckhorst in the Cohasset's Mike Bunstein raises his arms in triumph after scoring a critical fourth period goal in the Skippers' state semifinal win over Scituate. Bunstein was one of Cohasset's top playmakers this season, and will again be a big part of the Skippers' attack in 2007.

Reasons aplenty for laxers' success

and another four against D-S. Late in the regular season, Buick broke the program's all-time scoring record, set just last year by Jake Previte.

Sophomores Mark Flibotte and Mike Bunstein were also critical parts of the attack. Flibotte finished as Cohasset's second-leading scorer, and went on a tear while Buick was injured midseason, scoring as many as seven goals in one game. Bunstein was a solid goal-scorer himself, but his superb playmaking abilities gave the Cohasset attack another great dimension.

The Skippers were buoyed in the postseason by the return of sophomore Michael Grimm, who had missed the entire regular season while recovering from surgery. Grimm came up with a few key goals, and will be counted on for a lot of scoring next year, as will junior Chris Davis, who had several three- and four-goal games during the year. Peter Ernst will also likely figure in the attack picture as well.

Senior Trevor Brady and junior Dan Trendowicz led a dominant midfield that consistently controlled games in that part of the field. Both played good defense, were tremendous on ground balls, and often led attacks either down the wing or at the top of the zone.

Sophomores Chuck Czerkawski and P.J. McCaw performed well as the team's face-off specialists, and did a lot of the grunt work in the middle of the field. Junior Ryan Kucinski stepped up in a major way this season as a long-stick middy.

Defensively, junior Jeff Brown further established himself as one of the region's top talents at that position. A phenomenal athlete, Brown was more than happy to throw his weight around, create turnovers, and then blow by opponents down the field to create goals.

Sophomore Jake Cuneo was an absolute force for Cohasset, intimidating opposing attackers with his size and strength and often flattening those who dared to venture near the net. Juniors Conor Holway and Anthony DePaolo were also big parts of the defense, and freshman Bobby Meiklehamm played a great state championship game when pressed into starting duty.

Senior Ben Libby was usually there with the save whenever opponents got off a shot. Libby made a couple huge stops in the fourth period against Scituate in the playoffs, when the Sailors were pressing to gain the lead that they were never able to take.

Sophomore Nate Porter served as a more than capable backup in net, making a few starts late in the regular season and contributing to Cohasset wins. With Libby graduating, the Cohasset goaltending situation remains in good hands with Porter.

Joining Libby as graduates from the program are Buick, Brady and Zack Etkind. Those losses create some holes to fill, but with all of the talent coming back, 2007 could be another banner year for the Skippers.

game five-hitter, walked just one and struck out seven to pick up the win. He got offensive support from second baseman Tom Chase, a junior-to-be at Boston College High School, who went 3-for-4 and drove in a pair of runs, and third baseman Marcus Joyce, who went 2-for-4.

"We played a solid all-around game once we got past that first inning," said Caffrey. "Chris Bryan gave us the kind of game we needed on the mound, and we backed him with some good defense and we got the big hits when we needed them."

Post 118 was coming off successive 12-12 ties against Braintree and Holbrook when it went to Quincy last Thursday to face Post 95 as it tried to get over the .500 mark. Post 95 was winless going into Tuesday night's game against Cohasset at Scituate, but four of its losses have been by one run.

As was the case Monday night against Weymouth, Cohasset also received a complete-game pitching performance that night in Cohasset's exciting 5-4 victory over Post 95 at Quincy's Adams Field.

Greg Ouellette, a graduated senior at Scituate High School, went all seven innings and allowed seven hits in picking up his second win of the season.

Post 118 trailed during the early innings, but finally tied the game in the fifth inning on a run-scoring triple by Tim McGrath, and grabbed the lead an inning later as first baseman Shane Caffrey drove home the go-ahead run.

The schedule gets even more hectic for Post 118 as it tries to land a playoff spot and also shoots for one of the top three spots in a zone where the top five teams make the playoffs. Those five qualifiers then cross over to face a team from Zone 6 West in the zone playoffs that begin on July 14.

After Wednesday's home game with Braintree, Cohasset goes to Catholic Memorial High School tonight to take on West Roxbury at 5:45. Cohasset will host unbeaten defending zone champion Milton on Saturday, and Morrisette on Sunday, but as of press time, Caffrey still wasn't sure of the time or site for either game.

Things have gotten hectic for all Legion teams because of the rain, perhaps none more so than Post 118. And as of right now, Cohasset is tentatively scheduled to host Stoughton on Monday.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Recreation offers sports clinics

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer the following clinics. For more information or to register, call the Recreation Department, 41 Highland Ave., at 781-383-4109.

South Shore Basketball School – The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with South Shore Basketball School, is accepting applications for a summer basketball clinic, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two sessions will be available during the week of Monday, July 10, through Friday, July 14, at Cohasset High School gymnasium. Session I is for boys and girls, ages 7 through 11, and will be from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Session II is for boys and girls, ages 12 through 15, and will be noon to 3 p.m. The fee for the five-day program is $125. This year's sessions will be led by Dorian Bryant, current coach at Cohasset High School.

Brochures and registration forms are available at Cohasset Town Hall in the Recreation Department office.

South Shore Soccer Camp and Squirts Camp – Cohasset Recreation Department has announced that registrations are being accepted for South Shore Soccer Camp's summer clinics, which take place for one week only, Monday, July 31, through Friday, Aug. 4. Jon Anderson will direct the camp again this year at Milliken Field, Cohasset.

There are two camps offered this summer for two different age groups. For boys and girls, ages 7 to 14, the SSSC will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The boys and girls camps are operated separately. The one-week session is $255 per participant, with a $20 discount for a second. child. The fee includes a shirt and a ball for each participant, available the first day of camp. For boys and girls ages 4 to 6, the Soccer Squirts Camp will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m., each day. The price is $90 per Squirt, with no discount for a second child.

Complete the application form in the brochure at the Cohasset Recreation Department office to register. Space is limited – early registration is advised.

Youth Lacrosse Clinic – This one-week clinic is for boys and girls entering grades three through six in the fall. While the program is run by the Cohasset Recreation Department, it's open to players from other communities. Brothers Jamie and Ronan Buick will direct the program.

The clinic will take place the week of July 17 to 21, from 8 to 10 a.m., at Milliken Field. Sessions take place rain or shine – in all conditions except lightning. Players need full equipment. For girls, this means a stick, goggles and a mouth guard. For boys, it includes a helmet, including mouthpiece, gloves, arm and shoulder pads and a stick.

Players should also bring their own water, juice or sports drink to each day's sessions. The fee for the lacrosse clinic is $85. Call the Recreation Department to register.

Hingham July 4 race

The Hingham Recreation Department is finalizing plans for the 48th Annual Hingham 4th of July Road Race 2006. Volunteers are still needed for road guards, water stations and other positions. Please contact the Recreation Department at 781-741-1464 if you are willing to volunteer.

Registration and early T-shirt pick up continues at the Recreation Department from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. through June 30 and from 9 a.m. to noon July 1-3 (cash only). Register online at www.signmeup.com through June 30. Race day registrations (cash only) will be accepted from 5:30 a.m. until 6:30 a.m. T-shirts are guaranteed to pre-registered runners only.

The race will start at 7 a.m. from the Middle School at 1103 Main Street in Hingham. The field of approximately 1700 participants will run the 4.6-mile course. The award ceremony will follow the race at the finish line in Hingham Square. Return transportation will be provided back to the Middle School.

Please call the Recreation Department at 781-741-1464 for registration and additional information.

midst of discussion on a set of steps just off the pitch. The Barcelona teammates, opponents on this day, sat together as bystanders, seemingly remarking to one another on the chaos that had befallen this much anticipated match.

Ivanov deserves his fair share of criticism, to be sure, but the players must take responsibility as well. All of the diving and acting like they have been shot after they were barely touched is threatening to make a shambolic farce of the sport.

It seems as though referees not named Markus Merk are now afraid to call penalties, operating under the assumption that players are diving to get the call. Which produces situations like we saw last Monday, when a Swiss defender reached his leg back behind him to trip up Togo's Emmanuel Adebayor in the penalty box, and there is no call made.

FIFA, the game's governing body, has not acquitted itself well in this mess either. In no sport is there more gray area in terms of officiating than in soccer, and the idiotic braintrust of FIFA expanded that area exponentially with its list of edicts prior to the start of the Cup, my favorite of which being a mandatory booking for "time wasting."

It was for that very infraction that Deco picked up his second yellow card against the Dutch. In fact, one could legitimately make the point that Ivanov was merely following the letter of FIFA's ever-changing laws (although obdurately so).

FIFA President Sepp Blatter, wretched leader that he is, predictably threw Ivanov under the bus in the aftermath of the Portugal-Holland debacle, saying, "There could have been a yellow card for the referee." And how about a red card for you, Mr. Blatter?

The 2002 Cup also produced its share of diabolical decisions, with one key difference. Most of those calls in the '02 competition were made by second-rate referees from third-rate domestic leagues; those guys were overmatched to begin with.

But Ivanov came into this tournament as one of the world's most respected referees, and as a candidate to officiate the final. Merk is from Germany, where referees presumably have the common sense to know that what Oguchi Onyewu did against Ghana was not worthy of a penalty in any galaxy.

Graham Poll, England's top ref, completely lost control of the Australia-Croatia match, highlighted by his administering three yellow cards to Croatia's Josip Simunic. Talk about records that will never be broken.

Which leads us to Luis Medina Cantalejo, a referee from the world's best league (Spain's La Liga), who needlessly sent off Italy's Marco Materazzi in the Azzurri's 1-0 win over Australia on Monday. Cantalejo was playing the role of restless first grader at show-and-tell, flaunting the red card like a prized new toy.

The commentators on ESPN, bless them and their ceaseless ineptitude, have bemoaned the fact that referees are getting as much attention as players and the goals they are scoring. Of course, those same commentators ironically can't stop talking about the referees, and this is one occasion where I cannot disagree with them.

The pompous executioners have become the story. Let us hope Germany and Argentina play the epic that is expected of them, and return the focus to where it belongs: great players accomplishing wondrous feats on the pitch.

A collection of unrelated thoughts

Come to think of it, Blatter got his just punishment by attending that Ukraine-Switzerland match, a contest that produced ennui of staggering proportions. After a fairly promising first half, both teams appeared to come out for the second half playing for the 0-0 draw and penalties, which is precisely what happened.

Apparently, Sven Goran-Eriksson gave both teams their halftime pep talks. And give the Swiss credit for being consistent, managing the dubious task of being shut out in a penalty kick shootout.

Do you think Landon Donovan has realized that the World Cup has started?

The United States can blame their dreadful showing on a lot of things: questionable refereeing decisions, their group, FIFA's seeding process that shafted them in favor of Mexico, etc.

All of those topics came up after the Yanks crashed out of the tournament with their loss to Ghana, but many of the players have to look themselves in the mirror before anything else. Most of all Donovan, who did little to live up to his reputation coming into the Cup.

As in any other walk of life, failure begins at the top, and with this in mind let us hope that Bruce Arena is not on the U.S. sidelines come 2010 in South Africa.

That sentiment, which seems to be the prevailing one among the nation's football followers, is no indictment against Arena's accomplishments in his eight years at the helm. He has been nothing less than superb at what he was hired to do: lift a struggling program out of the doldrums and into the spotlight, to the point where the U.S. has to be taken seriously on the international scene.

Arena has done just that, but the program needs an influx of new ideas. If the U.S. is to make the next step - which is to become a legitimate World Cup championship contender - it will take a manager with a more worldly perspective, a person who has played and coached abroad and knows what it takes to succeed at the game's highest levels.

Many are already calling for the hiring of Jurgen Klinsmann, who is a little tied up right now managing his native Germany. Klinsmann has already addressed those whisperings, saying he is not interested and is focused on leading the Germans.

Well, of course he is. But should Germany bow out to Argentina, will the nation's former hero be asked back to manage? Klinsmann, who calls California his home, will see his contract expire at the end of this World Cup. Should Germany's run end in the quarterfinals, it is very much in question whether Klinsmann will be rehired.

Of all the teams that did not make it out of group play, Togo was among the most captivating.

An undermanned side not expected to be competitive with any of its Group G opponents, the Togolese played perfectly even with South Korea, held their own with the Swiss, and were one half away from stunning France and knocking that side out of the tournament.

And all the while, whether they were playing with 10 men or running up against teams that were supposed to squash them, Togo played and attacked with unending verve, scoffing at the notion that they did not belong.

For all of those who are already penciling in England for the semi-finals…

Yes, Portugal will be without Deco and Costinha, and possibly Cristiano Ronaldo. But Portugal is deep in the midfield, Pauleta has been in good form up front, and the defense that played so well against the Dutch (led by the heroic Miguel and Ricardo Carvalho, whom England fans should be rather familiar with) remains intact for this encounter.

Any team with a strong defense and the skill of Maniche and Pauleta up top is tough to deal with, and the English to this point have had a difficult go of it against far lesser sides. Many are still waiting for England to come out of its shell and play the football they are supposedly capable of, but they have had plenty of time to do it and haven't shown it.

At some point comes the realization that, as Bill Parcells might say, you are what you are.

Prediction: After a 1-1 draw in regular time, the Portuguese take it in penalties. And Sven is never allowed in England ever again, forced into exile by the red card that is British popular opinion.

Fall/Spring Soccer – Age 4 by Aug. 31 to qualify. Register online for fall or spring 2006 at www.cohassetsoccer,com.

All programs have individual application forms. To register for any of these programs, call the Recreation Office or stop by at the first floor, Town Hall. Programs are limited in size. To ensure acceptance into a program, register as soon as possible. Family discounts are available for some programs. Sports camps are scheduled to meet regardless of weather conditions in most cases and should it be necessary to move into the high school, participants will be notified at drop-off time as to status for the day.

SOUTH SHORE MUSIC CIRCUS REGISTRATIONS

The Music Circus Children's Show registrations will be open to children in the playground programs. They will be attending the 10:30 a.m. performances on Thursdays at a group rate. Registrations must be made two weeks prior to the show date. No late registrations can be accepted. Payment must be made at the Recreation Office, Tuesdays between 9 a.m. and noon, or between 5 and7 p.m. in the evening on dates indicated. Registration for the second show of "Beauty and the Beast" will take place on Wednesday, July 5.

Schedule:

July 13 – Russian American Kids Circus. Cost is $15. Payment due June 27.

July 20 – "Beauty and the Beast." Cost is $8. Payment due July 5.

July 27 – "Sleeping Beauty." Cost is $8. Payment due July 11.

Aug. 3 – "Snow White. Cost is $8. Payment due July 18.

Aug. 10 – "Rapunzel." Cost is $8. Payment due July 25.

The Music Circus is optional. Regular playground program activities will continue for those who do not attend. On rain days, see Martha regarding pick-up and drop-off routine. Programs are subject to change by SSMC.

YOUTH TENNIS

Youth tennis began Monday, June 26, and continue for seven weeks, through Aug. 11. Youth tennis registrations are under way: Monday through Wednesday, 9 a.m. to noon, and 1 to 3 p.m., and Tuesday, 5 to 7 p.m. The program is offered to children ages 7 through 18, and is designed on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. The fee for the one seven-week session of instruction, two days a week, is $80 per person. Lessons for beginners, intermediate and advanced players are offered.

Rain day policy: If it rains before 9 a.m., all tennis classes may have to be canceled for that day. Call the Recreation Office for weather status reports. Fridays are rain make-up days.

BOOT CAMP

The Recreation Department will offer Boot Camp fitness training classes to be instructed by Betsy Callanan. This physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays, starting Tuesday, June 20, for 10 weeks through Thursday, Aug. 24, on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20-class session is $100, and checks are payable to the town of Cohasset.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit ups, etc. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vascular endurance and strength.

BAND CONCERTS

During the past 12 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. Each June, the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus takes under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission for concert funding; hence, certainty of concerts is not absolute until mid-June each season. The SSMC donations are matched by a grant from the American Federation of Musicians in New York City.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the season is as follows: Tuesday, July 11, 7:30 p.m. on Town Common. The performance will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts take place on Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available. Call the Recreation Office to check on the status of concert if in doubt as to weather conditions.

AFTER-SCHOOL RECREATION SERVICES

During fall 2005, the Recreation Commission reorganized the administration and delivery of a variety of programs that are generally referred to as "Afterschool Recreation Programs."

Via One Creative Place, located at Jonathan Livingston Square, Route 3A, Cohasset, the joint effort with the Recreation Department has provided a format to increase the number of afterschool programs, ages and facilities for programming.

Ideally, but not always possible, afterschool programs are offered directly after school is released for the day, at a school facility. In this manner, children may simply stay after school and go directly to their recreation activity, then be picked up at the conclusion of that activity, or return to the school department after school care program.

Because of the increased number of services now available, it is not always possible to follow this format, and often children will need to either return to school, or be taken to an off-school site for programs. Efforts remain to offer as many services as possible, directly after school, at a school site.

The joint delivery effort has also provided residents the ability to register at the Recreation Office as in the past, or online at www.onecreativeolace.net or at 130 King St., the One Creative Place facility.

It is the intent of the Recreation Commission to further develop the after school programs that currently serve youngsters from ages 3 through grade eight. In order to accommodate the increased numbers of services, programs will be provided not only at school facilities, but at two One Creative Place facilities, the Teen Garage and at various outdoor facilities as well.

TV spotlight shines on Cohasset 'New England Dream House'

when the network came calling, she was happy to open up her home for a day of filming. The show will air Saturday, July 8 on NECN and will continue running throughout the week.

The network chooses homes from all over New England to be featured on the show, which airs Sundays from 10-11 a.m., Monday through Friday from 3 to 3:30 p.m., and Saturday from 7-8 p.m. Russell said the show features homes for which the owners have been significantly involved in the renovation process. "They want those that took a lot of blood, sweat and tears," she said, and her home certainly qualifies.

The network chooses homes from all over New England to be featured on the show, which airs Sundays from 10-11 a.m., Monday through Friday from 3 to 3:30 p.m., and Saturday from 7-8 p.m. Russell said the show features homes for which the owners have been significantly involved in the renovation process.

Russell purchased the house with the intent of completing renovations and reselling. Living in Hull, she scoured the South Shore for a promising project and was delighted to find the Souther home, primarily due to its surroundings. While the house has a beautiful view of Lily Pond, she said there was nothing being done to take advantage of that view the way the house had previously been configured. "We wanted to create a vista of the pond from every floor," she said, which required taking back every wall to the studs.

When the house was converted to a three-family dwelling in the 1960s, the ceilings were lowered to save on heating costs and the home had been given three separate entrances, one for each apartment. During renovations, the ceilings were put back up to their full height and today, a Victorian chandelier hangs in the front entryway. In fact, many of the features of the home, from the many windows which were added to the home, to the bathtubs to the decorative molding, are authentic Victorian pieces collected from antique shops and architectural salvage yards. While Russell said it is possible to find very good Victorian reproduction pieces, there is nothing quite like finding an original to refurbish.

One of the best features of the home are the original wood floors, which she said was an extraordinary find due to their pristine condition. She said she was very lucky the house had not only good floors, but a very solid foundation made of granite. With the improvements made to the house, that same granite could serve as the foundation for families for the next 150 years, she said.

Once the walls were back up in the house, Russell sold her home in Hull and moved into her King Street project. Having come through 25 prior renovations, she was no stranger to living with sawdust. "I have never lived in a brand new house in my entire life," she said, adding she wouldn't have it any other way.

STAFF PHOTOS/ELSA ALLEN

This house, located at 433 King Street, is being featured by New England Cable News as a "New England Dream House."

Recognizing she was renovating to bring back the antique Victorian feeling of the home, but with the intention of selling to a modern-day audience, she did not cut corners when it came to amenities the families of today expect in a home. Three Victorian style gas fireplaces were added to the home, and by taking everything down to the bare bones, the opportunity arose to wire the house for cable television and Internet access in every room as well as add central air conditioning.

The kitchen has a porcelain farmer's sink, but also has modern amenities such as a double refrigerator and a granite island with cable Internet access at the kitchen island, which makes for a nice place to work on a laptop or plug in a mini flat-screen television. Upstairs, there are three bedrooms including the master bedroom which has a fireplace, its own bathroom, and his and hers closets. The woman's closet is a walk-in while the man's closet is slightly smaller, but lined in cedar. There is also a first-level in-law apartment which could also double as an in-home office, which has its own entrance, laundry facilities, kitchen, and garden patio.

Outside the house, Russell admits she may have "gotten carried away with the stonework," but she felt having gardens overlooking the pond was the perfect way to enjoy the view. "The transformation was done because of the setting," she said, adding she loves to garden and lining the pathways and gardens with stonework pulled everything together.

The homer is currently on the market for $1,890,000 through William Raveis real estate and Russell is the listing broker. Open houses have begun, and Russell said she has received many renovating tips from those who have walked through. She said there is a large community of do-it-yourself renovators on the South Shore and she has been keeping a list of all the ideas given to her by those who have visited her home.

In preparation for the sale, Russell said she has already started scouring the town for her next Victorian renovation. She said she would love to be able to complete her next project in Cohasset, as she has fallen in love with the town. "I love Cohasset. It has a real neat little niche. When the train comes, I think it will become the jewel of the South Shore, comparable to many of the coastal towns in southern Connecticut," she said. "There is no question the growth potential is there, which is why I want to do another one."

When contemplating remodeling, homeowner Barbara Russell said she knew she needed to have a wrap-around porch to take advantage of the home's beautiful view of Lily Pond.

This breakfast nook, flooded with afternoon sun, is one of many sitting areas in Barbara Russell's home with a spectacular view of Lily Pond changes has been a labor of love they have gladly taken on themselves.

Pleasant Street clinic is 'crazy' about pets

"We've been here at night the last four months," said Stevenson, adding both were working other jobs to support themselves before opening up the hospital, which resulted in many 18-hour days. However, the arrangement has not resulted in missing out on any family time as the doctors are husband and wife.

Stevenson said making the office their own has been really fun as it has enabled them to step away from the "conventional" feeling of a hospital, with sterile white walls and cold stainless steel, and instead have embraced the naturally exposed copper pipes which stem from their walls. They are also considering adding a water feature in the waiting area. "Hospitals are so empty, they echo, which can create anxiety for pets," she said. A water feature would not only create a soothing sound, but the fresh water would flow into a pool perfect for patients to take a sip out of before their examination.

With their fresh approach to veterinary medicine, providing quality care with state-of-the-art equipment is not lost. Together, the two provide internal medicine and surgical services, as well as dental care, behavioral analysis and emergency care.

"We'll see them at their worst when there's an emergency, but we can also see the babies and give them their vaccines or treat them as they get older and develop diabetes. We can take them from birth all the way through and give them homeopathic care in conjunction with conventional medicine," said Stevenson. "If they can fit through the front door, we'll see them."

When deciding on a location for their office, the veterinarians knew they would need to pick a place close to home to enable them to respond quickly during an emergency. The family, which includes daughters Katiableue, 15 and Ariadne, 13, as well as five dogs, two birds, and two cats — one of which is named Ophelia and often comes to work with her parents — recently moved to Scituate from Missouri. "We were looking for a good place to raise the kids and we all wrote a list of everything we were looking for. We drove through Scituate and thought, 'This is it'," Stevenson said. Living roughly 3-1/2 miles away from their office, "We can get here quick," she said.

Stevenson and Conard both have extensive relief work experience, which means they have seen a variety of animals along the way. "No one does exotics" on the South Shore said Stevenson, but they will. "People have nowhere to go if their gerbil has a uterine tumor of their macaw has obsessive compulsive disorder," she said, adding for many people, their pets are their family members and they need a place where they can go to get them help.

Dr. Fawn Stevenson stands in her state-of-the-art operating room, next to x-rays of a cat, left, and a blue macaw parrot with a broken femur. Stevenson and her husband, Dr. Gregory Conard, are two of the few veterinarians who will treat exotic pets on the South Shore.

Conard explained during surgery, animals at their office are actually given the same gas anesthetic given to infants in the pediatric wards of hospitals. Animals are monitored using similar equipment as well. He said oxygen intake, heart rate, core body temperature and blood pressure are all monitored to ensure the patient is doing well throughout the entire procedure. "We're dealing with family members, not dogs in dog houses. They're very important to us and their families too," Conard said.

Stevenson added the two are "very much into pain control," as animals can sometimes be overlooked when it comes to giving medication for operations that do cause a lot of pain. "Getting spayed is actually a hysterectomy," she said, adding when animals are coming in for such a procedure, they are given medicine to calm them down. All patients go home on medication, as healing can take place faster when they are not in pain. "We want to keep everyone comfortable. We don't want the animals to be scared of coming to the vet," she said.

Both Conard and Stevenson have a long history of working with animals. Conard grew up on a farm in New Jersey with horses, with a goat farm down the street. "I helped my neighbor deliver baby goats and helped raise them," he said, adding when his sister became a veterinarian, it further spurred on his interest in helping animals. After attending Hofstra University on Long Island, he decided to go to veterinary school at Ross University's School of Veterinary Medicine, located on St. Kitts. St. Kitts is in the Leeward Islands group at the northern end of the Lesser Antilles, approximately 220 miles southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Stevenson attended the University of Vermont and received her bachelor's of science degree in wildlife and fisheries biology as well as a second degree in psychology. Ever since she was a child, she knew one day she would like to be a veterinarian, but when she was in high school, was told by teachers women don't go to medical school. Stevenson would not give up her dream and earned her master's degree in wildlife biology and eventually her path also led her to attend Ross University, which is where she met Conard. "We met second semester and we've been together ever since," she said.

Today, the two are very happy to be using their skills to help families on the South Shore take good care of their pets. Stevenson said some of the more rare services they offer are chemotherapy and in-home euthanasia. "Whoever needs to participate can be there, in the animal's home environment," she said.

Conard added because they own their own practice, they are able to provide services at a lower cost. "People should let their kids have pets and not worry about whether they can afford it should something happen," he said.

Crazy Paws is located at 1 Pleasant St. in the James Brook Crossing building. For more information on its services or to speak to Dr. Fawn Stevenson or Dr. Gregory Conard, please call (781) 383-3373.

Ellen Dickinson to perform in concert

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m., and is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions.

The second program in the 82nd season of Summer Carillon Recitals on the Cohasset Carillon will be given on Sunday evening, July 2, by Ellen Dickinson of Stamford, Conn. The recital scheduled for this date was originally to have featured Ulla Laage of Copenhagen, Denmark, who has had to cancel her United States tour for health reasons. Dickinson has agreed to fill in on very short notice. This will be her second appearance at St. Stephen's Church carillon, having played a joint recital with Roy Lee in the summer of 2001.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m., and is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and brochures will be distributed on the Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand by the courtyard of St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue extension. Listeners are invited to bring chairs, blankets and picnics to the common or the church courtyard. Following the program, the tower will be open to visitors for a demonstration by the carillonneur and a look at the bells.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083, the church carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, at 978-475-2599; or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy, at 781-383-9599.

How to Make Money in Any Real Estate Market

You Haven't Missed Your Chance...

You really haven't missed your chance to make money in real estate.

Ask any millionaire who's made his fortune in real estate and he'll tell you: If you have the right strategies, you don't need a boom to make huge profits in real estate... You can make money in any market.

Living Proof

And believe me, I know... I'm Carleton Sheets and over the past 35 years, and through every market imaginable, I've bought and sold more than $20 million in real estate.

That's right, 35 years of successful real estate investing... that means finding the best deals, buying low, and selling high no matter what is going on in real estate or the world.

For me, it meant I did all this through:

- 7 Presidents
- 3 Wars
- 4 Market Crashes
- 5 Recessions

I didn't need a red-hot real estate market to make my riches — and neither do you.

Tried and True

I'm sure you'll agree that not all real estate is made the same... and neither are all real estate investment programs.

Personal Guarantee from Carleton H. Sheets

I'm sure many of you reading this have toyed with the idea of getting into real estate before — especially considering the major market boom we just experienced.

For whatever reason, you didn't take action... and now you may be thinking the market isn't what it used to be and maybe you've missed your chance.

Well, wipe that thought right out of your mind. My experience tells me there has never been a better time for you to start making money in real estate.

Why put off until tomorrow the money you could be making today?

With the right skills and hands-on training, you can turn any market condition into a windfall of profits.

I personally guarantee the skills you can learn from my Real Profits Active Learning Method can sharpen your senses and take you through any market condition.

Don't hesitate.

Carleton H. Sheets
Best-selling Author and Real Estate Expert

You've probably seen them... those fly-by-night companies claiming they can make you a millionaire overnight.

Well, over the years, I've taught 500,000 people, that's half a million ordinary folks just like you and me, how to use real estate to have the lives they've always dreamed of.

I've built my reputation on the success of my students.

And unlike those "get-rich-quick" schemes that seem to be everywhere these days, I'll be the first to admit this is not a get-rich-quick scheme, this is a get-rich-smart program.

Think about it: A check made out to you with not 3, not 4, not even 5... but 6 zeros before the decimal point...

Real Profits in the Real World

My latest program is by far one of the most remarkable advancements in real estate investing.

Designed to get money in your pocket, Real Profits takes you into the market with live calls to sellers and actual property tours... so you can put your newfound knowledge into action.

Using my NEW active real estate training, you'll discover how you can hone your investment senses so you:

- Spot a roof problem by looking for curling shingles
- Tune in to the differences between creaky floorboards and serious warping
- Sniff out potential mold or masked odors
- Walk away from the money pits and seize the gold mines

These skills can help you make money in any market, regardless of world events or the economy. So while other people are left sitting around thinking they've missed the boat, you can be sitting pretty.

You don't need tumbling prices or soaring appreciation... knowing how to recognize real estate with the greatest profit potential and knowing how to seal the deal is what can make you a real estate millionaire.

And my Real Profits Program can show you how.

See It for Yourself for FREE

We all know seeing is believing...

So a small group of my trained Real Profits professionals is on their way to personally show you how this program works... See for yourself how combining my experience with your desire and determination can have you living that better life you've been wanting.

And your first step is to come to this FREE workshop. It's that easy. There's absolutely no risk and no obligation.

Plus, this NEW Active Learning Method program is only available at this FREE workshop. Check the times and dates my team will be in your area and make plans now to be there.

Decades of Successful Investing in Every Type of Market

Tom Everett Scott gets 'Saved'

East Bridgewater native has new role playing paramedic

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

His good looks have-helped make Tom Everett Scott a leading man in feature films and television, but with his latest role the actor hopes to shake things up a bit.

"I've played my share of nice guys. They can be boring," Scott pointed out in a recent telephone interview. "I still like nice guy characters, just with some flaws."

Scott's new TNT series, "Saved," offers the East Bridgewater native a chance to play just the kind of character that interests him. The drama follows the life of Wyatt Cole (Scott), a conflicted young man who is uncertain of what he wants to do with his life. Once seemingly destined to follow in his father's footsteps and become a surgeon, Cole instead dropped out of medical school. Dumped by his girlfriend, who is an emergency room physician, Cole becomes a paramedic. The often intense pace of the work energizes him and he comes to believe that by helping save other people's lives he just may save his own.

"When I first got the script, I saw that Wyatt Cole is a gambler and med school dropout whose Dad is always on him to go back to med school. Wyatt is constantly burning the candle at both ends. The dichotomy of his not being able to save himself, but wanting to help other people, is what really attracted me to this role."

Scott first attracted the attention of moviegoers 10 years ago in "That Thing You Do!," which was the first feature directed by Tom Hanks. Since then, Scott has appeared in other features including "Boiler Room," 'The Love Letter," and "One True Thing" and has had recurring roles on TV's "Grace Under Fire" and "ER." In addition, the 35-year-old has starred in the short-lived series "The Street" and "Philly." For Scott — who will be seen later this year in the feature film "Because I Said So," with Diane Keaton and Mandy Moore — the ability to find good roles in both films and television is something he values.

"It's not so much the format that interests me. I prefer to look at the character I'm being asked to play and who my fellow actors will be. And I just try to keep working. I was very lucky that at a young age that I got to do films. That has made it easier for me now to be able to do both films and television. I haven't been affected by the perception that it's not cool to do television if you still want movie roles."

East Bridgewater native Tom Everett Scott plays a paramedic in the new TNT series "Saved." The show airs Monday nights at 10 p.m.

One thing Scott did find cool was the chance to experience the inside of an ambulance in full motion.

"So many people know paramedics first-hand that I knew if I was going to play this role I had to do it accurately. I sent out an email to all my friends asking if any of them knew any paramedics who would be willing to talk with me. Eventually, I got to actually ride along on an eight-hour shift. It was very exciting and it really got my adrenaline pumping. What really impressed me, too, was the paramedics' mental capacity for all this information. I memorize one page of dialogue and the next day I can't remember one word of it," said Scott. "And they really have to care about their work. I didn't meet a single paramedic who wasn't a thoughtful, giving person. It was amazing."

What local fans of Scott may find amazing is that he may once have cleared their tables at a well-known Brockton restaurant.

"My very first job was busing tables at Christo's," recalls the 1988 graduate of East Bridgewater High, whose parents and grandfather still live in the town. "I played freshman soccer in high school, but I grew something like eight inches before my sophomore year. I looked like a Great Dane puppy with huge hands and feet. I ended up dropping sports. My first acting role came not long after in an East Bridgewater High production of 'The Wiz.' It was a pretty strange experience with all these white kids doing 'The Wiz,' but I remember thinking that I had wanted to be on stage since seeing my sister in a play when I was in fifth grade so even a small role felt great. My big break came in junior year when I played Lancelot in 'Camelot.' Once I got the taste of what it was like to play a lead I knew that was for me."

After graduating from Syracuse University with a degree in theater arts, Scott returned home to East Bridgewater for what turned out to be only a very brief visit.

"I came home from Syracuse and moved back into my old room, but that lasted about a week. I knew I had to go to New York to pursue my career."

Appearances off-Broadway and in regional theater were soon followed by television and film work that have kept Scott busy in New York and now Los Angeles where he and his wife, Jenny Gallagher, are raising two young children.

Not too busy, however, for occasional trips to his old South Shore stomping grounds.

"We're home at least once or twice a year. When we're there we always go to Peaceful Meadows in Whitman. I love it there and my kids do, too. Nobody makes better ice cream than Peaceful Meadows."

"Saved," starring Tom Everett Scott, airs Monday nights at 10 p.m. on the TNT cable network.

Movie review

The Adventures of Superbland

Brandon Routh, the star of the new "Superman," is the spitting image of Christopher Reeve. And he photographs even better.

"Superman Returns" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

The film has capable, if unoriginal special effects and is not unpleasant.

Not a bird nor a plane, "Superman Returns" is a misguided missile — a $200 million-plus tribute to a mediocre movie.

In the title role is the amiable, 26-year-old, spit-curl-and-cleft-chin-equipped Brandon Routh, who is the spitting image of Christopher Reeve (and photographs even better in the role).

Similarly, the film covers much of the same ground as its predecessor. Director Bryan Singer's bizarrely faithful evocation begins with the same faux 3-D credit sequence as Richard Donner's 1978 film and John Williams' same triumphal theme. Superman has taken a five-year hiatus from Earth, we learn. He claims to have visited Krypton's remains. But how did he pass the rest of the time?

Did he surf the cosmos with that silver dude? Chase intergalactic fugitives with Martian Manhunter? Get it on with Amazonian Wonder Woman? Who knows? And who knows why he re-creates the crash-landing of his infancy when he returns to Smallville and his widowed, adoptive mother (Eva Marie Saint)?

Meanwhile, Superman's bald nemesis Lex Luthor (Kevin Spacey, straining to rise to Joker-ish heights) penetrates Superman's surprisingly unfortresslike Fortress of Solitude and steals several crystals of enormous power, if not enormous interest.

We also see and hear the "crystalized" messages of Kal-El, aka Superman's regal father Jor-El (a hideously bewigged Marlon Brando, appearing from beyond the grave). Jor-El strikes the film's messianic theme by referring to himself as the father and Superman as his beloved son, sent to Earth to serve and protect.

Cue the heavenly choirs.

Back in Metropolis at a bustling Daily Planet, Perry White (Frank Langella) orders Pulitzer Prize-winning Lois Lane (Kate Bosworth), now engaged to Perry's nephew Richard (James Marsden of the "X-Men" films) and mother of an asthmatic little boy (a Damien Thorn-ish Tristan Lake Leabu), to rekindle her "friendship" with the big lug in the cape.

The plot involves a Dr. Evil-esque plan by Lex to kill Superman and submerge the United States under water. As usual, no one sees any connection between Kent and Superman.

"Superman Returns" recycles the props, dialogue, visual style and aerial pas de deux of the 1978 film and the resurrection scene from "E.T." with all the pomp and circumstance of a modern megabudget. Routh and Bosworth are easy on the eyes, but don't have much chemistry. What's most striking — Superboy leaping in the cornfields, the bullet stopped by an eyeball, Lex exclaiming "Bring it on!" and an evocation of United 93 — is in the trailers everyone has already seen.

The film has capable, if unoriginal special effects and is not unpleasant. It's just kitsch with nostalgic cameos and the biggest stiff in the superhero catalogue. There is a big "surprise" you can see coming a mile away. Notably, the old standard "Heart & Soul" is played a couple of times in the film, and heart and soul are exactly what's lacking here. But don't worry. A 2009 sequel is already in the works.

Rated PG-13. "Superman Returns" contains generic action-film violence.

EVENTS IN PLYMOUTH: The day starts off with the 26th annual Independence Day Parade with this year's theme being "Plymouth's Patriotic History Comes Alive." The parade kicks off at 9:30 a.m. at Cordage Park Marketplace, continuing south on Court Street to Main Street where it will turn left on Water Street at the bottom of Main Street Extension.

The Legion Bud Band will be entertaining the crowds on the waterfront starting at 7 p.m., and juggler Greg Frisbee will be performing at 5 p.m. All evening entertainment will take place on the bandstand in front of Cole's Hill on the waterfront. The evening's fun will culminate with the fireworks at approximately 9:15 a.m., depending on when it's good and dark and the howitzers will once again be shot off during the 1812 Overture.

AT ADAMS NATIONAL PARK, QUINCY: On Independence Day, visit the Adams Carriage House, 135 Adams St., for the following events: "Continental Congress," noon and 3 p.m. Reenact the Second Continental Congress and the signing of the Declaration of Independence. You will assume the role of a delegate and debate various issues leading up to the vote for Independence. At 7 p.m., "Jefferson and Adams: A Stage Play" at the Beale Estate, 181 Adams St. In a fast-paced series of encounters, we see the turbulent relationship between Thomas Jefferson (Colonial Williamsburg interpreter Bill Barker) and John Adams (veteran actor Sam Goodyear) as their friendship ignites, flourishes, ruptures and resolves itself. The perceptive Abigail Adams (Colonial Williamsburg interpreter Abigail Schumann) acts as a catalyst and motivator while steadfastly maintaining her own beliefs. This event is free and open to the public. It will take place on the grounds of the Beale Estate under a tent. For more information, call Melissa Burnham, 617-770-1175.

PARADE IN STOUGHTON: The annual 4th of July parade will step off at 2:30 p.m. at the intersection of Prospect and Park streets (Route 27), north on Park through Stoughton Center, onto Washington Street (Route 138), right on Central, disbands at the Department of Public Works.

GARFIELD: A TALE OF TWO KITTIES (B-)

Two cats are better than one in "Garfield: A Tale of Two Kitties," which brings Jim Davis' fat cat back to the big screen in a reasonable riff on "The Prince and The Pauper." This time, the action is in London, and Garfield (voiced again by Bill Murray) is recruited to take the place of Prince (voiced by Tim Curry), the king of England's ancient Carlyle Castle, after he's targeted by the greedy, ignored nephew Lord Dargis (Billy Connolly), who can't wait for the cat's death to assume control of the ancient castle and turn it into a high-rise development. (Rated PG) -Stephen Schaefer

THE FAST AND THE FURIOUS: TOKYO DRIFT (B)

This third installment of the popular franchise takes its car chases and souped-up engines to the Far East. High school troublemaker Sean (Lucas Black) is shipped to Tokyo to avoid jail time and live with his strict, military officer dad (Brian Goodman). Once there, Sean befriends Twinkie (Bow Wow), an army brat with a pimped-out car, and is soon trying a new set of wheels and getting on the bad side of mafia-affiliated DK (Brian Tee) and falling for his girl, Neela (Nathalie Kelley). Sure, it's not the wittiest, smartest or most memorable piece of cinema. But "The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift" delivers everything it promised: loud music, loud cars and a whole lot of glitz. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

THE HEART OF THE GAME (A)

Ward Serrill's emotionally-charged "The Heart of the Game" is a documentary that took seven years to find its ending. Filmed with a grainy, hand-held camera, it chronicles the rise of the Roosevelt Roughriders, a Seattle high school girls' basketball team, and its star player, Darnellia Russell. Narrated by Ludacris, "The Heart of the Game" is a surprising little film that inspires, educates and makes us all the happier for having seen it. High school girls' basketball will seem like the greatest game ever played. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

Garfield (voice of Bill Murray) puts a royal dog in his place in "Garfield: A Tail of Two Kitties."

THE KING (B)

Elvis (Gael Garcia Bernal) arrives in Corpus Christi, Texas, in search of Pastor David Sandow (William Hurt), a revered figure in the community. Elvis claims to be the pastor's son, and the religious leader recalls a former life when a Mexican prostitute kept him company. Not surprisingly, he shuns his son. Stubborn and quietly full of sin, Elvis takes a room at a local motel and seduces the pastor's daughter — and his half-sister — Malerie (Pell James). "The King" is so eerie it's hard to decipher the bizarre from the masterfully planned. The film, however flawed, keeps us on our toes. That certainly counts for something. (Not rated) -Chelsea Bain

Ongoing

THE BREAK-UP (C+)

Oversized, overaged frat boy Gary (Vince Vaughn) and his art dealer girlfriend Brooke (Jennifer Aniston) break up but continue to share a condo. In this anti-romantic comedy, tabloid-linked stars Vaughn and Aniston have nowhere to display their chemistry, except in anger. Between the hijinks that ensue as Gary and Brooke try their best to hurt one another, you end up sitting back and checking off the product placements or trying to figure out how many endings the director shot. (Rated PG-13)

BRICK (D)

In this oddball teen noir about a high school drug ring, Brendan Frye (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) is determined to oust head drug pusher, The Pin (Lukas Haas), from his throne after Brandan discovers the body of his ex-girlfriend Emily (Emilie de Ravin) in a gully. Intriguing as the mystery may be, this film leaves something to be desired. "Brick's" cryptic content, jargon-filled speech and visually bland ambience will leave viewers with a sinking feeling. (Rated R) -Tenley Woodman

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

THE DA VINCI CODE (C+)

"The Da Vinci Code," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. The key elements of Dan Brown's fabulously fun novel are all here: Harvard symbologist Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) investigating a 2,000-year-old conspiracy concerning Jesus' true nature; a murder plot involving a psychopathic, albino monk (Paul Bettany); and clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces. But director Ron Howard's film is too long and too stuffed with scholarly pedantry. "The Da Vinci Code" comes off as a book, rather than a movie, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book, at that. (Rated PG-13)

DEEP SEA 3D (C+)

Giant squid, sand sharks and moon jellyfish frolic in 3-D in this escapade narrated by Johnny Depp and Kate Winslet. During the hour, viewers traverse coral reefs, shipwrecks and kelp forests to glimpse the day-to-day life of creatures we normally see on dinner plates laced with bread crumbs, lemon and butter. The film's message — preserve these submerged communities — is important, if a little bland to watch. (Not rated) -Tenley Woodman

DISTRICT B13 (B+)

In this French action flick, street vigilante Leito (David Belle) reluctantly teams up with cop Damien (Cyril Raffaelli) to save Leito's younger sister Lola (Dany Verissimo) from tres bad guy Taha (Bibi Naceri), a drug dealer who has kidnapped Lola and plans to bomb the blighted District 13 neighborhood. Set to an incendiary French hip-hop soundtrack, "District 13" features fight scenes with furiously flying fists, dizzying acrobatics and bizarrely colorful criminal bystanders. This film makes most other American action films look even dumber and less hip than they already did. (Not Rated.)

I spy a grizzly

Ecotourists in British Columbia hunt for bear, very carefully

By LAUREN KRAMER
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

GREAT BEAR RAINFOREST, BRITISH COLUMBIA -- I'm crouched in the long grass, just 75 yards from a large grizzly bear, trying desperately to follow instructions and not move a hair. The 400-pound predator, oblivious to the presence of its three human onlookers, is feeding quietly on grass-like sedge nearby, enjoying the sunshine that reflects off her chocolate-brown back.

"Now. Stand! Quickly!" says my guide, Fred Seiler, urging me upright while the grizzly's head is turned away. "No sudden movements," he warns. With shaking hands, I raise the camera to my eyes. That's when the bear notices us for the first time, and with ears alert and nose turned to the wind, she stands on her hind legs and raises her body to its full height -- a position that reflects her immense stature and power.

Meanwhile, my heart is palpitating and my pupils are wide. I'm all too aware of this massive animal's abilities -- the fact that it can outrun and outswim me, kill me with a single swipe of its powerful paws and cover the distance between us before I can make it back to our boat, sitting in the estuary a few steps away.

"I think I'm ready to go back to the boat now," I say, trying to hide the tremor in my voice. Responding to my fear, Seiler moves our group steadily backward, his eyes never leaving the bear, which has returned to feeding and is ignoring us once again. In his 20 years of photographing and watching bears, Seiler knows precisely when a situation can get dangerous, and in this case he assures me we're perfectly safe. Still, I'm shaken.

Watching a grizzly in the wild will do that to you.

In grizzly country in northern British Columbia, you're surrounded by pristine, isolated and magnificent tracts of mountain, river and ocean. Since launching the motorboat in the town of Kitimat an hour earlier, we had not seen a soul.

With the confidence bred from years of familiarity with this land, Seiler steers the boat through the channels that wend their way through this nearly 4-million-acre rain forest, home to one of the largest grizzly bear populations in North America. Of the 150,000 grizzly bears worldwide, approximately 13,000 are to be found in British Columbia.

The British Columbia scenery

Heavily forested mountains surround us, some still wearing their winter-white snowcaps. Steep granite rock faces form the banks of the channel, with trees growing from every crevice, covering the landscape in a lush, thick carpet of green. Around our small boat the head of a curious seal glints in the light, while a bald eagle scans the water in search of lunch.

Soon we reach the estuaries that comprise prime grizzly bear-watching. A large stretch of waterfront field is covered with green sedge, shaking gently in the breeze. Its high protein content makes this the food of choice for grizzly bears in May and June as they patiently await the arrival of spawning salmon in late July.

Grizzly sniffs the air

We motor into one of the estuary's shallow channels, turning off the noisy, 300-horsepower motor and using a quiet electric-powered motor instead to cover the last distance. Out goal is to not disturb the grizzly bears.

"We have to leave as light a footprint on this land as possible, because these bears are not habituated to humans and we want to keep it that way," Seiler said.

Intent on adhering to strict ecotourism, Seiler has all his guests sign a waiver before he guides them, a document in which they promise never to disclose the whereabouts of the grizzly tour, and never to return unless accompanied by a guide from his company, Silvertip EcoTours.

"We put a lot of trust in the people we take, so we screen them first and never take more than four out at a time," he explained. "This is what we have to do to ensure we're engaging in sustainable ecotourism. I couldn't sleep at night knowing I was screwing up the bears."

As it is, they face enough challenges, he said. The old-growth rain forest that has been their home since time immemorial is under constant threat of logging and, with each passing year, the grizzly habitat shrinks more. Seiler and his business partner, Greg Knox, have found themselves the sole advocates for the bears' rights in this area, defending their privacy and territory with passion.

When a segment of the rain forest was logged recently, the two were up in arms. They hired a biologist to prove the area was rife with grizzly tracks, scat and hair, and protested that further terrain in the vicinity should be protected from logging and preserved for the bears. This battle, they won.

But the next battle promises to be even more formidable -- Alberta-based Enbridge Gateway Pipelines is pursuing plans to build an underground crude oil pipeline from Alberta to northern British Columbia, and Seiler hasn't a hope of stopping them. Instead, he's resigned himself to be involved in the implementation process, to try to ensure its impact on grizzly habitat is as minimal as possible.

On this sunny springtime day, though, the world still looked bright and beautiful in northern B.C., and the grizzly bears were out to play. From the boat, we watched a sow and cub swim gracefully across the estuary, marveling at the sound of their heavy breath on the water. On another nearby embankment, a different sow carefully watched her three new cubs cavort on a fallen log, later lumbering reluctantly into the forest behind them.

With his palm outstretched, Seiler invited me to taste the starchy grains of the Indian rice bulb coveted by the bears. I sample fresh mint and wild Indian celery too before Seiler pointed out an innocuous-looking plant. "This is water hemlock," he said. "One drop of this plant and you'd be dead in 30 seconds."

The bears, of course, know instinctively what plants to avoid. They've been walking these parts for generations, preying on berries, moose and other animals that come their way, and watching complacently as the sedge turns from green to a blond-white in the fall.

This is the allure of the province's wilderness, a place where nature coexists in a perfectly seamless balance.

Town seeks ways to ease the crunch

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Village Revitalization project is winding down, and while there is still some work to be done in the downtown area regarding the new Greenbush rail line, the town is working with contractors to make the remaining construction period as easy as possible on local merchants and businesses.

"We feel for them. We've been involved with small businesses before, but we're in the home stretch," said Mark Brennan on behalf of himself and fellow Greenbush liaison, Tom Gruber.

With the big machines gone from South Main Street, Brennan said parking on the street is back, which will make it much easier for patrons to visit their favorite Village shops. However, the municipal parking lot will close temporarily in sections while it too receives a makeover.

Brennan said as early as this

Doctors donate myriad services

Cohasset Pediatrics was abuzz with excitement last week when it opened its office doors to some very special patients.

Thanks to the Chernobyl Children Project — the largest organization in the United States to provide medical treatment and respite care for children from Chernobyl-affected areas — 18 children ages seven through 14 traveled all the way from the Ukraine, Belarus and Russia to receive medical care from doctors throughout Massachusetts.

The children arrived in the United States June 21, and made their way to Cohasset June 27. Clair Wankum, a staff nurse at Cohasset Pediatrics, who doubles as the volunteer medical coordinator for the Chernobyl Children Project, said while this is the first time the children have come to Cohasset Pediatrics for medical care, it is not the first time its doctors have seen Chernobyl patients.

"Last year, our doctors went off site to South Shore Hospital" to treat the children, said Wankum, donating ctheir ser-

Fire service changes over time

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset's life-saving capabilities have come a long way in the past 45 years. Despite its advancement, there have been many challenges to face along the way as the town's population has increased, but the number of fire stations and staff members have not kept up with the times.

In the upcoming months, the town will be taking a closer look at whether the services currently being provided by the fire department are adequate, in terms of what is being spent. In the wake of a failed override, money is tight and town officials are scrutinizing every line item. Some have suggested money being spent on fire services should be redirected to the schools.

To get to the bottom of the fire budget, Town Manager Bill Griffin has proposed forming a Fire Services Task Force to investigate every aspect of the fire department's budget and whether the department should continue being run the way it is. In order to take a look at the current situation, it is important to remember how the fire department used to be.

In 1961, there were three fire stations with headquarters located at the Cove at the current site of Veteran's Memorial Park, the Beechwood Fire Station and a third station on Hull Street in

Name: Claire McCarthy

Occupation: Front desk attendant at Cohasset Swim Center.

Best day of your life: In the words of Frank Sinatra, "The best is yet to come..."

Worst vacation: I went with my family to a farm in New Hampshire where the farm's idea of fun was living without electricity.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: Halloween.

Favorite junk food: Dunkin' donuts iced coffee.

Best book: "The Florence King Reader," by Florence King.

Best movie: "The Bourne Identity" and "The Bourne Supremacy."

Best TV show: "The Office."

Pet peeves: Hypochondriacs, disgruntled soccer moms.

Dumbest thing I've ever done: I put a roll of paper towels in the microwave and they caught on fire, along with my hand when I carried it outside. I had a blister the size of a small country on my finger.

Goal: To take part in a conspiracy.

Person I'd most like to meet: Albus Dumbledore.

Biggest worry: Global warming.

Best part of Cohasset: Without a doubt, the Cohasset Swim Center.

Route 3A car crashes continue to add up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"We are going to compare the amount of accidents along 3A in Scituate and Hingham with those in Cohasset and see if there is a difference."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Although none of the recent car accidents have been serious — meaning no one has been severely injured — Police Chief James Hussey thinks there are far too many mishaps along the Cohasset stretch of Route 3A.

His best guess for the cause are the number of curb cuts and the amount of commercial development along the highway, as compared with 3A in Scituate and the Hingham section of 3A south of the Rotary.

Again this week there was a spate of accidents on 3A in Cohasset, including two near Leo's Exxon at the corner of Beechwood and 3A – which has been one of the most treacherous intersections in town, with a fatality at the light there about nine years ago.

"We are going to compare the amount of accidents along 3A in Scituate and Hingham with those in Cohasset and see if there is a difference," Hussey said. "I think Cohasset could be double if not worse."

On Tuesday (June 26) at about 2:30 p.m., a vehicle exited Leo's Exxon and tried to make a left across two lanes of oncoming traffic to head south toward Scituate. What police said occurred is a vehicle travelling north in the right-hand lane, stopped to let the 1999 Chevy Ventura out. But then the Chevy Ventura hit a 1989 Olds Cutlass traveling north in the inside lane.

Hussey said the Cutlass was not speeding and the operator apparently did not see the Chevy pull out.

Neither car was towed and there were no injuries. The driver of the third vehicle (the one that stopped to let the Chevy pull out) did not stick around following the accident, he said.

At about 10:30 a.m. Wednesday (June 27), a southbound,1993 Buick Century that was trying to turn left into Leo's Exxon collided in the northbound, right-hand lane with a 2004 Nissan Sentra. The operator of the Buick was cited for failure to use care when turning. Further investigation revealed the operator of the Buick was driving an uninsured motor vehicle, and the registration had been revoked; plates not belonging to the vehicle had also been attached. Police have summonsed the driver to court on those criminal charges, Hussey said.

At about 2:50 p.m. Wednesday (June 27), there was an accident at 3A and Lower King Street. A 1988 Honda Accord pulled onto 3A from Lower King hitting a 1999 Ford pickup that was traveling south on 3A. The driver of the Honda was cited for failure to use care when entering an intersection.

Also on Wednesday (June 27) but at about 6:10 p.m., a 1994 Ford Ranger hit the rear of a 1995 Chevy Corsica at the intersection of 3A and Lower King Street. Both cars were traveling southbound on 3A (toward Scituate); the Corsica was waiting to turn left onto Lower King Street when it was hit by the Ranger that was going straight ahead. The driver of the Ranger, who told police he did not see the directional, was cited for following too close, Hussey said. Both cars had to be towed following that accident. The operator of the Corsica was also transported to the hospital with what appeared to be minor injuries.

On Sunday (July 1) at just past noon, there was a three-car, chain reaction, rear-end accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Cohasset Plaza. Hussey said no cars were towed and no one was sent to the hospital. One of the drivers was cited for following too close.

Motorcycle stop

Police not only cited a 19-year-old Cohasset man for not wearing a helmet while operating a motorcycle and for operating a motorcycle without a license – but they are also going to cite the owner of the motorcycle.

Chief James Hussey said the person who loaned the motorcycle would be cited for allowing someone to use the vehicle improperly.

Hussey said motorcycle helmets are required by state law. Also, anyone operating a motorcycle has to have a license to do so. A regular driver's license is not valid for operating a motorcycle.

The motorcycle stop occurred Saturday (July 1) at about 1:15 p.m. near Forest Avenue and N. Main Street.

Scaled-back Smith Place project to move ahead

Reduced scope freed up more parking

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The landscape will soon be changing on Smith Place. While it has taken roughly one year, the Zoning Board of Appeals has finally given the go-ahead to raze the small building currently located at 2 Smith Place and replace it with a 7,500-square-foot structure.

While the Planning Board approved plans for the site in August of 2005 — which included building a 9,600-square-foot structure with 19 parking spaces — issues with the Zoning Board had kept the project from moving forward. However, with Brown's concession to reduce the project and increase parking spaces, the board granted its approval.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, Brown said he was not sure when construction will begin. "Who knows, maybe right away, but maybe not for a month," he said. However, the project as approved is not what Brown had originally envisioned building.

When first presented, Brown's plan was to build an eight-bay structure with the intent of renting the bays to local business owners who spend most of their days working on job sites — such as plumbers or electricians — but who need a home base to keep their supplies. He said he did not envision much traffic throughout the day, as a retail shop might generate, as the workers would typically arrive in the morning, pick up what they needed for the day, maybe return during lunch, then return at the end of the day before heading home.

Due to its location in the Village and its proximity to a residential neighborhood, Brown's proposal received stiff opposition from abutters. With the train on its way, the Ripley Road entrance to Smith Place will close, meaning the only way to access the property is by way of Pleasant Street to Cushing Street. During Planning Board public hearings, many residents turned up to voice concerns regarding the potential for increased traffic in their neighborhoods. One of those residents was Juliana Tiryaki, the daughter of ZBA chairman Woody Chittick. Chittick recused himself as a board member during ZBA hearings on the Smith proposal but participated as a citizen at the hearings by asking questions of the board.

In its decision, the ZBA states the first application was denied because the project would not have provided adequate off-street parking and that it would have generated a volume of traffic which the board deemed detrimental to public safety.

Brown subsequently filed another application for a special permit, this time with the size of the building reduced by more than 2,000 square feet. The board said the reduction in scope would free up space for more parking spaces and generate less traffic. In addition, since the denial, a new parking lot was constructed (a result of the Greenbush project) on Pleasant Street which will be used as a public parking area and could be used for those coming to Brown's building.

"This significantly increases the likelihood that a second vehicular entrance and exit to and from the subject property can be established and that traffic moving to and from the property will, therefore, not have to pass through the surrounding residential neighborhood," the ZBA decision states.

The new building will be 150 feet in length and 50 feet in depth and will be broken into six equal units each measuring 50 by 25 feet. Each bay will have a large door for vehicular access and a small door for pedestrian access on its 25-foot front. By shortening the building, there is room for five additional parking spaces and the number of businesses for which parking would have needed to have been provided has decreased by 25 percent. Instead of 16 spaces for eight businesses, there will be 21 spaces for six.

Town hopes to avoid a 'lot' of headaches

week, crews from Cashman Balfour Beatty, which is constructing the Greenbush line, could begin drainage work on the portion of the parking lot located closest to the Olympic Citgo station and James Brook Walkway to the rear of the South Main Street shops.

"Significant drainage work needs to be done," said Brennan, adding the area will be closed off with jersey barriers, which will result in a loss of some parking spaces temporarily. However, 26 additional spaces have recently been paved and painted on Pleasant Street — across from Henry's Root Beer Stand and next to the James Brook Crossing shops — which will help recoup some of that loss.

Once phase one of the project is complete, it is still unclear as to when phase two, which will include grading and leveling of the parking lot, will begin. The town is currently in the midst of a dispute resolution process with the MBTA over the number of parking spaces to be created in the municipal lot. Brennan said the town agreed to plans which have 182 public parking spaces and the MBTA has agreed to construct 161. "They're 21 short," he said. Until the two sides can come to a resolution, paving work in the lot will not begin.

The town is currently in the midst of a dispute resolution process with the MBTA over the number of parking spaces to be created in the municipal lot.

Brennan said the town has been working cooperatively with CBB to resolve the parking lot issue and will continue to do so. However, if an agreement cannot be made, the town has the option of taking legal action.

When parking lot construction takes place, the town has been told it will take between 10 and 15 weeks. Brennan said the town has been brainstorming for ways to help move the process along more quickly, and one idea, although not final, is to take one full day and close the entire parking lot to enable the grading and leveling to take place all at once, then complete the paving and painting in sections. The entire project was slated to take place one-third of the lot at a time, but that will keep construction going longer, Brennan said.

At this point, the town is thinking of closing the lot and completing the grading and leveling on a Monday, but said it will all depend on how the town and its merchants feel about the proposal. "The Board of Selectmen and the town are working with the merchants to minimize disruption," Brennan said. "It has to be done, so we're trying to have the least amount of disruption and the best final product."

Band concert set for July 11

During the past 11 seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. Each June, the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus take under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission for concert funding, hence, certainty of concerts are not absolute until mid-June each season. The SSMC donations are matched by a grant from the American Federation of Musicians, New York City.

It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 2006 season is as follows:

Tuesday, July 11, 7:30 p.m., on the Town Common.

The performance will be by the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh. Concerts take place on the Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellant is a good item to have available.

Call the Recreation office at 383-4109 to check on the status of concerts if there is doubt about weather conditions.

When it was no longer housing fire equipment, the Beechwood Fire Station took on a new life as a barn on Clapp Road in Scituate. Here the building gets prepared to move to its new location.

Changes in Cohasset fire service over the years

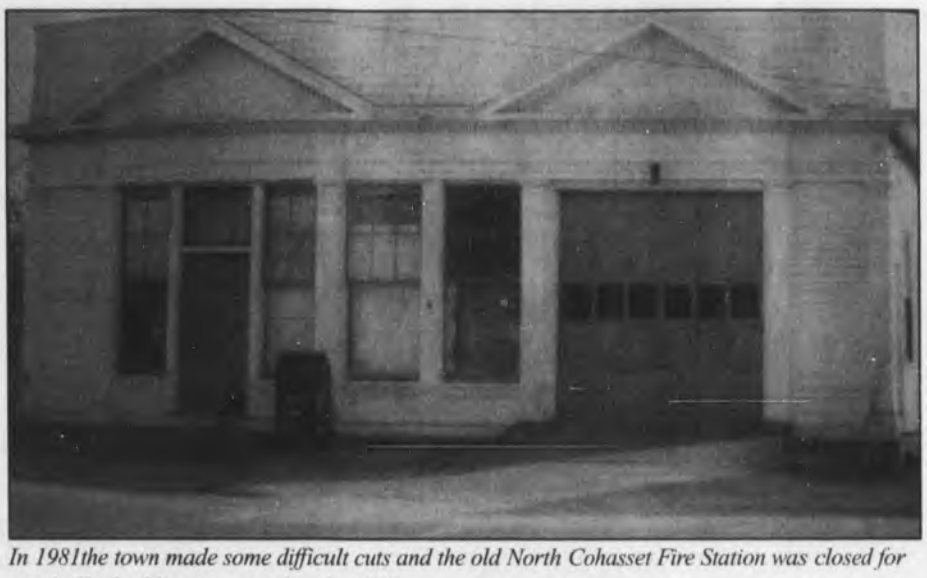
North Cohasset. At that time, the fire department was only responsible for fighting fires, as the police department ran the ambulance service. There were 17 full-time firefighters including the chief and deputy chief, and a number of call firefighters.

When a resident needed medical attention, one of the police department's officers, stationed at police headquarters in the Independence Building on Elm Street (inhabited most recently by Wild Plums) would go across the street to the "police garage," to retrieve the ambulance and drive to the residence in need of help. The garage was an old wooden barn located next to the site of the current Teen Garage. If there was a car accident, when the police showed up on the scene they would have to assess the situation and decide whether the ambulance was needed. If so, someone would have to leave the scene to retrieve it from the garage.

In the 1960s, call firefighters were the backbone of the fire department, as there were as many as 60 volunteers ready to drop everything at a moment's notice to fight a fire. They had regular training drills and were able to man and operate every piece of equipment the department had. They were organized into companies with officers assigned to each station and truck.

Each of the town's three stations had a horn that would be sounded with a box number (none of the street boxes remain in town today) and the call force would hear the alarm and go directly to the scene of the incident. The permanent members of the department would drive the trucks to the scene and when they arrived, many times call fire fighters would already be on the scene.

Today, there is only one combined police and fire station on Elm Street which shares a dispatch center. There are 24 full-time firefighters, nine of which are paramedics. The town is also down to four call firefighters. The fire department responds to fire and medical calls, runs its own ambulance service and provides Advanced Life Support to patients. Recently, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln reported he has seen the department grow from responding to 315 incidents per year in 1969 to 1,784 in 2005.



In 1981the town made some difficult cuts and the old North Cohasset Fire Station was closed for good. The building was razed in the 1990s.

In the end, the company reported there was probably only $400,000 to be saved by regionalizing and the towns decided not to change a thing.

The call force

While call fire fighters played a huge role in the town's fire fighting past, just as the North Cohasset and Beechwood Stations closed in the 1980s, the call fire fighting force is slowly dwindling away.

In April 1992, then Chief John Nadeau pushed for more call firefighters, and said he would need 21 call firefighters to aid his full-time force. At that time, the department was operating with 24 full-time members and 14 call firefighters, seven of which were outfitted properly. The department was also answering roughly 1,000 calls per year, which equals roughly three per day. Nadeau said the way the department was staffed back then, it could respond to a fire or ambulance call, but not to both.

In October 1992, feeling the pressure that volunteer fire fighters may steal their jobs away, the full-time firefighters were scolded by selectmen when several refused to train the call force. Their actions forced Nadeau to seek outside training from the Plymouth County Fire and Rescue Association. However, reacting from pressure from the Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts — which included a threat to disrupt the training activities — Plymouth County Training refused to conduct the training. The course would have provided 64 hours of basic training and prepare a call firefighter to work under the direct supervision of a full-time firefighter.

The town began looking at regionalization of the department in 1992, which also could have affected department members' jobs. Fire chiefs and town administrators from Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, Norwell and Hingham were involved in the discussion, which included looking into ways the towns could share the responsibilities of providing services to all five towns together. Discussion included ways to boost communication should all five towns conjoin, which equipment to use and where the equipment should be located. Cohasset selectmen endorsed a grant proposal seeking $50,000 for consultant services to determine the legal frameworks needed to set up a regional fire service.

However, the discussion was disconcerting for some fire fighters. The union asked the town administrators and fire chiefs to sign a joint statement of purpose and administration which it drafted, and both groups refused to sign. The conflict drew television news attention when members of the union held a demonstration in front of Norwell Town Hall while the fire district study committee, charged with studying every aspect of regionalization, met inside with its consultant, Managment Development Institute, Inc., of Lake Oswego, Ore. In the end, the company reported there was probably only $400,000 to be saved by regionalizing and the towns decided not to change a thing.

But cost savings in other ways could not be ruled out and as Nadeau stepped down from his position and the town began looking at hiring a new chief, the selectmen began to consider sharing a chief position with the town of Scituate, which also did not go over well with members of the department. Scituate's then Town Administrator Richard Agnew informally broached the idea of sharing the position with Cohasset at the time the town hired Nadeau. The town decided not to regionalize the position and hired Cohasset resident Roger Lincoln, who had been on the department since 1969, to be its new chief. Lincoln was the first chief in a decade to hail from Cohasset, and he still holds the position today.

Information for this article was provided by Glenn Pratt, the Narrative History of Cohasset Volume III and the Mariner archives.

Anyone interested in serving on the Fire Services Task Force or anyone who has served on a Fire Services committee in the past and has information to share should contact Town Manager Bill Griffin at (781) 383-4105, or send a letter to Griffin via e-mail at wgriffin@townofcohasset.org or to Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

The present fire-police station, located on Elm Street, was built in 1963 on the site of the old Osgood School.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

FOURTH PRIDE

Hello Cohasset. This past week was wonderful and I hope that everyone had a great 4th of July. Welcome back to the group that returned from the Appalachia Service Project(ASP), a super job was done by all. As I was at the Hingham 4th of July parade, one thing that is so evident when we attend this event is the amount of town pride. Families and friends gather in small(or large) groups to celebrate the 4th and the pride of being together in the town they love. Any thoughts or ideas out there on things we can do here in town?

NEW ARRIVAL

Erica Mahoney and Shaun Carvelli of Forest Avenue are the proud parents of Isabella Maxx Mahoney, who arrived precisely at 4:07 p.m., June 10, 2006 at South Shore Hospital. Isabella tipped the scales at 6 lbs. 7 oz. and measured 20 ins. at birth.

Her maternal grandparents are Edward and Janet Mahoney, also of Cohasset.

Congratulations all!

ASSUMPTION HONORS

Congratulations go out to Carling I. Sturino, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otello R. Sturino of Cohasset. Carling was named to the dean's list at Assumption College for the spring 2006 semester. Super news.

ARC GOLF WAS A HIT

The Arc of the South Shore recently hosted its 19th Annual Arc of the South Shore Lou Bailey Tournament on Monday, June 19th, at the Pembroke Country Club. The tournament raised more than $27,000, with more than $18,000 in proceeds. The proceeds from the tournament will support The Arc of the South Shore and its programs for the children, adults and the families of those with developmental disabilities.

"We are very grateful to the generous sponsors and community members who contributed to today's event," said David Calhoun, former Executive Director of The Arc of the South Shore. "In addition, we would like to thank our loyal corporate sponsors: The Frye Agency; South Shore Savings Bank; Fallon Ambulance Service; and the South Shore Co-operative Bank. Your continued support helped make our 19th Annual Lou Bailey Golf Tournament a success!"

"Children and adults with developmental disabilities are an inspiration to us all," said Claudia Cuscianna, Development Coordinator at The Arc of the South Shore. "The money raised at the tournament will go directly to them, enhancing The Arc of the South Shore's programming and development."

BOWDOIN GRAD

Hats off to Charles Lindsay Anderson of Cohasset who was awarded a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology from Bowdoin College on May 27. Congratulations!

STONEHILL NEWS

Local student Brian F. Lewis of Cohasset recently graduated with a bachelor's degree from Stonehill College. Congratulations, Brian!

Earning dean's list status at Stonehill for the spring semester is Michael W. Devine of Cohasset, who is a member of the Class of 2008. Michael had to maintain an GPA of 3.5 or higher to earn this distinction.

FRAMINGHAM STATE

Molly R. Liddell and Lindsey L. Gardner, both of Cohasset, were named to the dean's list and president's list for the spring semester at Framingham State. To be selected for the dean's list, a student must earn a Quality Point Average of 3.25 or higher. To be selected for the president's list, a student must have been named to the dean's list for three consecutive semesters.

Molly, who is a member of the Class of 2009, is majoring in communication arts. Lindsey, who is a member of the Class of 2006, majored in English.

Lindsey was also awarded a bachelor of arts degree from Framingham State on May 28.

Well done!

PHILLIPS EXETER

Jared H. Dick, son of Linda Hewitt Dick and Michael Dick of Cohasset, earned honors for the spring term at Phillips Exeter Academy in Exeter, N.H. Jared is an 11th grader at Exeter.

Good work, Jared!

RIT HONORS

Conor Buick, a second-year student at Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, N.Y., has been named to the dean's list for the spring semester. Conor, who is studying mathematics, is the son of David and Paula Buick of Highland Avenue. He is a 2004 Cohasset High School graduate.

Congratulations, Conor!

Peter Plante of Cohasset joins Miss Massachusetts, Tiffany Kelly of Braintree for a picture. Miss Kelly was on hand as the auctioneer for the Arc of the South Shore Lou Bailey Tournament. For more about the benefit tournament, read this week's Around Town.

BRYANT DEAN'S LIST

Hats off to Cohasset's Kristen A. Watts, a junior management major, on making the dean's list at Bryant University in Smithfield, R.I.

TABOR NEWS

Two Cohasset students have earned honors at Tabor Academy in Marion, Mass. Isabelle Bertolami, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bertolami, earned honors by compiling an overall average of 85 or above. Gina Giuggio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Giuggio, earned commendation by achieving an overall average of 80 or above, with no grade below 75 and no more than one grade between 75 and 80.

Isabelle is a member of the Class of 2006 and Gina is a member of the Class of 2008 at Tabor.

20TH REUNION

The Cohasset High School Class of 86 is having their 20th class reunion on July 22nd at the Cohasset Golf Club. They are still looking for addresses for the following classmates. If you have any information, please email Ginni Froio at Ginnifro@cox.net or call Collette (Ford) McElhinney at (781) 383-1383. Wendi Blakes, Anthony Bogarty, Linda Calabro, James Conley, James Creed, Laura Doherty, Kristen Eisenstadt, Kathleen McGuire, Gail Fasciano, Scott Patrolia, Cheryl Price, Christopher Ridge, Damian Wolfe, Andrew Glasfield, AnnMarie Goggin, Bill Gorvine, Michael Greiner, Floyd Hardwick, Darrell Horton, Jennifer Hynes, John Kuntz, Brian Leary, Teresa Lloyd, Wayne Lyle, Raymond Maguire, Robin McAllister, Suzanne McMahon, Kymberly Wright and Kellie Riley.

Pirates invade at Buttonwood Books

Enthusiastic young pirates invade Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza to hear stories and create costumes.

Matthew Fitzpatrick studies a word jumble to figure out pirate-related works like map and "aargh."

Jared Stevens finishes coloring his parrot which will complete the pirate costume that the children created during the Pirate Party.

Chernobyl children visit Cohasset Pediatrics

vices as every doctor who participates in the project does. This year, the office was happy to greet the children with face paint, snacks and balloons, followed by a routine physical.

On April 26, 1986 the Chernobyl Nuclear Power Plant in Pripyat, Ukraine became the site of the worst nuclear accident in history. An explosion at the plant led to the release of 190 tons of highly radioactive material, which scientists estimate released enough radionucleides to equal 20 nuclear bombs.

Although 20 years have passed, the effects of the explosion are still being felt in the region. Wankum said some of the typical ailments affecting children who come to receive treatment in the United States are renal problems including chronic kidney infections, scoliosis and vision problems. "Some have heart problems as infants and we follow up on those," said Wankum, while others develop forms of cancer that require chemotherapy.

While most of the children only come to the states for treatment once, the condition of some patients requires coming back for more. One little boy, Serghey Kravchenko, was diagnosed with cancer when he was 3 years old and had one of his eyes removed in his homeland, but a prosthetic eye was never implanted. He has come back to the states more than once for appointments, readying the socket for the new eye he will receive.

Wankum said there have also been cases where children will receive treatment for cancer and will go into remission, only to have it return, requiring more treatment. "We always wish they could come back, but at the same time hope they don't," said Wankum.

Before coming to the states, the children are chosen to participate in the program from the doctors in their native country. They are examined to ensure they are well enough to travel, and in the spring before their summer arrival, a team of nurses from the United States, which has included Wankum for a number of years, makes the trip over to the Chernobyl area to look the children over once more and assess their needs.

Those children who are in need of more extensive care are sent to the Boston Floating Hospital for treatment. Children in more stable condition are sent for screening in local community doctor's offices. Depending on their condition, they may be sent for exams at the Caritas Norwood Hospital, Saints Memorial Medical Center, Saint Joseph's Hospital or South Shore Medical Center, which also see Chernobyl children free of charge. There are eye and dental exams to be given free of charge as well.

But their time in Massachusetts is not filled solely with doctor's appointments. There are dances, harbor cruises and trips to see New England Revolution soccer games. Children are also greeted with gift certificates to see movies at the local theater or to the mall to go shopping, all of which are donated by local families, churches and businesses. "It is truly an entire volunteer community effort," said Wankum, adding because the children come to Massachusetts from very impoverished communities with very little or nothing in their possession, being able to go shopping and experience a different lifestyle is really fun.

The children and their families are not responsible for paying any of the costs incurred during their stay. Wankum said the individual communities which host the children foot the bill through fund-raisers and donations. She said the town of Scituate, which has been a host-town for Chernobyl children for many years, estimates it costs $1,500 to cover all the expenses for one child's four-week stay and raises as much money as it can to accommodate as many children as possible. This year, there are 12 children staying in Scituate, two staying in Pembroke, two in Norwell and two in Lakeville.

Wankum said when the children are here, "You feel the buzz," as everyone eagerly anticipates their arrival. She said the children love to see their pictures in the local papers and everyone in all the South Shore communities welcomes them with open arms. She said the communities have been very generous and continue to be generous with their donations as two of the children participating in this year's trip have been very successful in collecting donations for new children to travel to the United States next summer.

Swimmers cautioned about sea stinger

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As temperatures begin to climb outside, local beaches will be packed with swimmers eager to take a dip. This week, the Board of Health is sending out an alert for residents to be cautious as they venture out into the ocean as many Portuguese man-of-wars have been spotted in Buzzards Bay and as far north as the Upper Cape Cod and Boston areas.

"We haven't seen any yet," said Tara Tradd of the Board of Health office, but added the state Department of Public Health has asked local health boards in Massachusetts to disperse information about the creatures, which are similar to a jellyfish but have a much more powerful sting. Tradd said Cohasset has never received an alert like this one before, as man-of-wars are usually found in much warmer waters.

Tradd said lifeguards and beach managers have been alerted to keep an eye out for man-of-wars and to order swimmers out of the water immediately if any are seen. It is possible to see a man-of-war from shore as they have a gas-filled "sail" on top which helps carry them along with the currents. The sails are usually clear with a purple or pink tinge, but below the surface of the water, stinging tentacles can hang down as far as 30 to 40 feet. The sting delivers a neurotoxin which can be extremely painful, but is rarely deadly.

If a resident is stung, the Board of Health recommends calling either poison control or a local emergency number. Have the patient's age, weight and condition available as well as the time of the sting. The emergency call operator will be able to instruct as to whether the patient should be taken to the hospital, as well as any appropriate first-aid.

The Board of Health recommends washing the sting with salt water, followed by soaking the area with a solution of half vinegar and half water for about 30 minutes to remove any remaining tentacles. Rinse the area then resoak with more half-strength vinegar. To remove remaining tentacles, it may also be necessary to use flour or shaving cream and scrape the affected area with a dull instrument such as a credit card, followed by applying a cream containing a pain killer, an antihistamine and a corticosteroid.

Tradd said if any residents spot a Portuguese man-of-war, they should call the Board of Health office, which can then set up surveillance of the beaches. "Residents need to know they are not supposed to touch it," said Tradd of Portuguese man-of-wars that are seen either in the water or dead on the shore, as even those which have washed up dead can still pack a powerful sting.

To contact the Board of Health office, please call (781) 383-4116. More information can also be obtained by contacting the Center for Environmental Health at (617) 624-5757.

South Shore residents should be on the lookout for Portuguese man-of-wars this summer. While they look like jellyfish, they have a much more powerful sting and can even secrete venom when dead and washed up on the beach. Portuguese man-of-wars have been spotted in Buzzards Bay as well as the Upper Cape Cod and Boston areas. Residents should never touch a man-of-war and should call the Board of Health if any are spotted in Cohasset's waters.

Portuguese man-of-war facts

- The Portuguese man-of-war is named for its air bladder, which resembles a man of war navy vessel.
- While it may look like a jellyfish, a Portuguese man-of-war is not. It is actually a Siphonophore, or a colony of four different organisms.
- Portuguese man-of-wars are an important source of food for sea turtles, which are immune to its venom.
- Portuguese man-of-war can be found on the coast of Africa, North America, Europe and Australia as well as in other areas of the world.
- Detached tentacles from a Portuguese man-of-war that wash up on shore can still sting a human.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Spirit of 1776

When you ask a child what the Fourth of July means, the answer may surprise you.

Perhaps the response we most anticipate from a child is that Independence Day is the day delegates of the 13 original colonies boldly signed the Declaration of Independence.

The older the child, the more we'd expect to hear about the history of the American Revolution, the Constitutional Convention, and our Founding Fathers, that group of exceptional people who are the symbolic fathers of all who live by the American creed that all men are created equal, endowed by our Creator with the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

There is just so much to say.

A child in the upper grades might talk about equality. Obviously we are not all the same. People are born richer or poorer, with all levels of intelligence; we are made up of a rainbow of colors, of many ethnic origins, of different faiths.

So how are we all equal? In a democracy, all people are born with equal rights, equal in the eyes of the law, with the same right to pursue the opportunities we choose.

You might expect a child to say the Fourth of July is about fireworks, carnivals, and cookouts.

When we asked a 13-year-old, a 10-year-old, and an 8-year-old what the Fourth means to them, we didn't get any of the above answers.

Children have a more immediate sense of what the fight for independence means.

To the teenager, it is the war in Iraq.

To the 10-year-old, the Fourth is about "freedom and stuff."

To our children, July 4 is not history.

The fight for our freedom is just as compelling today as it was on July 4, 1776.

That day was not a dividing line in history. It didn't mean that once we crossed it, we had secured our liberty forever.

We are fighting just as valiantly now as we did then, and the stakes remain as high.

July 4 is not history between the covers of a textbook.

July 4 is the history we are living today.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No money no sidewalks

TO THE EDITOR:

I am responding to comments made by Ms. Rosanne McMorris in this paper and elsewhere in which she criticizes the Village Revitalization project that is nearing completion downtown.

I am a lifelong resident of the Town and the Village is looking better than it ever has in my lifetime. The cross walks, pocket park and new trees have enhanced the look of the Village while the street paving, curbs and sidewalks have created a neat appearance while maintaining the original Village character.

This was done with the very limited dollars left in the State PWED grant after the previous Board of Selectmen, Ms. McMorris and previous Town Manager Mark Haddad, had wasted almost $300,000 on Village Streetscape designs by the Waterfield Group.

I believe the Town has a right to ask Ms. McMorris for an account of her management of the PWED grant and why she insisted on altering the character of the Village by substituting her preference for poured concrete sidewalks at a Town Meeting when the townspeople had rejected poured concrete and overwhelming chosen pavers for the sidewalks. So Ms. McMorris , let's get an accounting of were 26 percent of the grant went! The state allows 10 percent on design ($150,000), and the past board of selectman spent $400,000. If we had the extra $250,000, we could have had any sidewalks we wanted, even brick! If you live in a glass house Ms. Mcmorris, throwing stones is a bad idea.

'Second' school financial report needed

COMMENTARY

TERRY MCCARTHY

Kudos to the Cohasset Superintendent of Schools on her "Restoring faith in the budget process" article. I found her explanations and descriptions of process very informative. Her comments on non-resident tuition, regionalization, and fiscal responsibilities are helpful to an understanding of the situation we all find ourselves in. I found it especially useful to see how the state impacts the decision-making of the School Department and the School Committee "as outlined in the Educational Reform Law."

One paragraph in the Superintendent's article stood out as a starting point for a better understanding of how we might come to a mutually accepted view of reporting financial data. It states:

"A line-item budget is developed annually. The format for school budget development is not the same as other town departments. The required school format is in the same function code model that is used for reporting end of year expenditures to the Department of Education, Department of revenue and the audit report."

This statement is the crux of my concerns about the communications gap that exists between the School Department and the citizens of Cohasset. Why? Because the decision-making process must precede what decisions are made and then reported. Thus, it is important to understand how decision-making, or power, works in the process and then we can assess the best way to report these decisions and to whom they are reported.

So how does power flow through Cohasset's educational structure? I think everyone would agree that any power the School Department and School Committee have originates from the voters of Cohasset. The people elect the School Committee to represent all the people of Cohasset. The School Committee is empowered (with responsibility and appropriate authority) to manage the School Department. Given the complexities of the School Department's mandate, so aptly described in the Superintendent's article, the School Committee selects a Superintendent who in turn selects the administration and teaching staff that is key to a successful educational outcome.

The Commonwealth recognized that the authority given to the School Department must be commensurate to the responsibility the state places on the educational establishment. Hence it insulates the School Department with the "rules of the road" stated by the Superintendent. Thus, the School Department has a set of rules mandated by the state which gives it specific authority and responsibilities upon which the town government cannot infringe. One example is that the School Department has near total control over its financial operations. The School Department and School Committee have the right to make up budgets and to move money within line items and between line items with impunity. Some citizens don't like this or perhaps don't understand it. My view is that this structural issue causes much of the disagreement that has come out in the past few years. In reality, coming full circle, the only power the people have to alter the School Department's actions and decisions is provided by the Commonwealth under Prop. 2-1/2 . In fact, if the people don't agree with what the School Department/School Committee wants to do (that is, spend more than Prop. 2-1/2 allows) the only power they have is to vote NO. Which brings us up to the present.

Let's look at the Superintendent's role as she has described it in her article. She has articulated very well what the state requires her to do in terms of financial reporting. However, the state's interests and the voters of Cohasset's interests are not accorded equal weight. If the goal is to only meet the state's system designed to allow the Department of Education to be able to compare apples and oranges among all school departments in the Commonwealth then the Cohasset School Department has complied. However, if the Cohasset public's stated concern is they don't understand the School Department's financial reporting then maybe the School Department and School Committee ought to consider meeting this obligation as well. As I've stated in an earlier commentary I think Committeeman Fusco recognizes this shortcoming and is attempting to solve it. I also acknowledge the School Department has said it will respond to Mr. Fusco by August. So there's progress.

Lawyers can also help in this kind of process. In my former life I was a consultant to the owner of the Auburn Mall (Auburn, Mass.). The Mall owner wanted to expand and redesign the Mall. The design plan and funding had to be approved by the Town of Auburn. Auburn had a representative town government of many, many representatives (think 30-40 selectmen). These people had to understand the plan and approve it. The owner's lawyers (a top Boston firm) created a document similar to Cohasset's warrant. As a consultant I predicted a total defeat at town meeting. My firm was able to convince the lawyers to allow us to "translate" the legal language to a simpler "This is what this means" script alongside the legal language (like some of those illicit Latin texts

'Crisper and neater' village look

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Well, by now you can pretty much see how the downtown Village will look when the project is completed. The new trees are in place, the brick accents are mostly in place. There are "fine tuning" aspects that need to be completed. By and large, things look a lot crisper and neater. We have added 13 new trees which include, Chanticleer pear (at the Red Lion, East side of S. Main St. and at Cohasset Liquors), Hornbeams (near Richard Henderson's Law office), Zelcovas (at the Community Center), and Lilac trees (at the corner of S. Main Street and Elm Street). You will notice how different trees have been selected for different locations. This avoids the problem you sometimes see of everything looking the same. The MIA/POW square has daylilies and low-growing juniper. These new plantings will give this memorial to those who served our country valiantly a new look during each season of the year.

The Lilac trees are a tree form of the familiar lilac bush. They have white blossoms which bloom in late spring. We visited the nursery in early June just as they were finishing their blooming period and were able to see their splendor. These lilacs will certainly add a nice touch to this street corner, especially when the brick accent around them is complete. Note: the automatic watering bag at the base of the tree. These bags, you will see around Town, need only be periodically filled with water. They will slowly release water to the trees to help them flourish in their new setting.

There are a number of decorative pear trees that have traditionally used in streetscapes. The most preferred form seems to be the Chanticleer pear which has a strong vase shape. This pear variety does not have the shallow branching habit that makes them susceptible to breaking under winter snow loading like so many of the decorative pears. These trees will also add to the Town's Spring display with their white flowers.

The Hornbeam trees are truly magnificent trees. They start out in life as a columnar tree similar to a Poplar. Later, as they age they will spread out a bit. As you can see in the accompanying photo of our trees taken prior to planting, the root balls of our trees are large, with some greater than 4 feet in diameter. These are now in place across from the Red Lion complex.

New lilac tree (Elm & Main streets).

Stop by the Village and see our "New Look."

Heather Drive

We have heard, over the years, lots of discussion in Town about the condition of Forest Avenue. What most do not know, is that the Heather Drive project plays an important role in the Forest Avenue situation. Norfolk County will not let us pave Forest Avenue until this drainage project and one other near the Forest Avenue entrance to Wheelwright Park are complete. Only then, can Forest Avenue be done. After a number of years of promises, the Heather Drive Drainage project is finally underway, soon to be finished. So, now, one down — one to go!

Greenbush update

North Main Street crossing should be open by the end of this week or early next week, weather permitting. Spring Street across from the Historical Society will closed in mid July while utilities are replaced under the rail bed. When this work is completed it will be opened temporarily while the Spring / Pond intersection / crossing is finished. Later, this section of Spring Street will be closed permanently. Shortly after the 4th of July holiday, Smith Place will close forever at Ripley Road. Also, the MBTA is scheduled to begin work on the Town Parking Lot after the 4th of July. A portion of the lot behind the Main Street shops will be closed to all parking first to redo the drainage.

We've mentioned a number of times that the Town is very unhappy that the MBTA has not lived up to the Mitigation Agreement to supply 182 Public Parking spaces in the reconfigured Town Parking Lot. And, they have cut their project short at Pleasant Street so that it no longer meets our Village Revitalization project. Consequently we are following the procedures for "Informal Dispute Resolution" as defined by our Mitigation Agreement. The first phase culminated in a meeting on Wednesday, June 21st to attempt to resolve our differences. We were under the impression that "Dispute Resolution" involves a bit of "give and take" on each side. The MBTA offered nothing new and no compromise whatsoever. So, the meeting was over very quickly.

The second phase will be with the General Manager of the MBTA, or his designee who must be a senior manager of the MBTA, as well as a senior official of the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction and no less than a majority of the Board of Selectmen. It is interesting to note that since a majority of the Board of Selectmen must be present, the Town must follow the Open Meeting Laws. This means that this second round of Informal Dispute Resolution must be a public meeting and so posted. We are tentatively looking at Wednesday July 12th.

Yes, there is a war on

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I can recall a time when, if you asked the waitress in a restaurant for an extra pat of butter, she'd answer you in a voice dripping with scorn, "Don't you know there's a war on?" and you'd slink away figuratively in shame.

Ask almost anyone today, "Don't you know there's a war on?" and there's a good chance the answer would be "No."

Gasoline rationing was felt by the ordinary civilian most of all. They were graded A, B and C according to importance.

That's the big problem with the war in Iraq. Except for the guys and gals who are doing the fighting and dying and those closest to them back home, no one else is personally involved. There's a pat of butter for everyone.

Sixty-odd years ago, when World War II was at its height, a pound of butter may have been cheap compared the today's prices but it also cost you 16 red points and a half pound, when you could get it, wiped out your red points for the week.

A pound of oleomargarine was only four red points but it came in unappetizing white blocks that looked like lard and you had to mix it with button of yellow coloring to make it palatable, thanks to a law promoted by the Wisconsin butter people.

Points was the method employed by the U.S. Office of Price Administration (OPA) to control the distribution of food through War Ration Books containing red stamps for meat and dairy products and blue stamps for groceries.

At one time during the war, a pound of steak was worth 12 red points, a pound of hamburger seven red points, a 16 ounce can of peaches 18 blue points, a 16-ounce can of carrots six blue points and a 4 fi ounce jar of baby food one blue point.

Housewives, the ones who were not working in defense plants, at least, had to keep a close eye on the local newspaper just in case something like this was to appear among the war news.

"March 31 — Last day to use A, B and C coupons for processed food in War Ration Book No. 2."

Gasoline rationing was felt by the ordinary civilian most of all. They were graded A, B and C according to importance. A "C" sticker on your windshield might mean you were a doctor; a "B" sticker a war worker; and an "A' just a guy who got in the way..

"A" coupons were worth three gallons of gas a week. Figuring the average car got 16 miles to the gallon, that would take you from Braintree to Plymouth and back one Sunday afternoon a week. You knew there was a war on.

Is it any wonder that the goal of a driver with an "A" sticker would be a "B" sticker and a driver with a "B" sticker would seek a "C" sticker and everyone would shoot for the "T" sticker that truckers had and were willing to sell at outrageous prices.

Posters everywhere reminded us that there was a war on. "Buy bonds!" one urged. "Save Waste Paper," said another. "Loose Lips Sink Ships," said the sailor in the poster as he put his fingers to his lips.

And my favorite, the one that urged the collection of bacon grease to make into glycerin for explosives — "take your fat cans to the butcher shop!"

Loss of shoreline due to global warming

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week we commented on the effects of the now acknowledged effect of global warming on Cohasset and the eastern seaboard. Many observers, including the State Office of Environmental Affairs and the EPA have already established programs for lessening the weather-related effects of climate changes associated with the phenomenon.

For example, a great variety of emergency preparations have been planned and many initiated which have reached the community level in Towns such as Cohasset. But, more important, if one looks at the overall thrust of government preparation, some necessary steps have already been taken to lessen the effects of physical changes in our environment which have long been going on and which, though not directly connected with global warming, certainly will tend to have a negative impact on coastal communities.

Some of the major effects of global warming concern coastal erosion and loss of shorefront. One of the best examples of loss of shorefront is Houston, Texas. In Nassau Bay, a suburb on the outskirts of Houston, before the recent hurricanes, one could go to Nassau Bay and see four bedroom houses sitting in 3 feet of water 400 feet from shore at low tide. Galveston Bay is one of hundreds of such examples; the reason Galveston was selected is that they have a volunteer assessment program which gives hard scientific data on the conditions of shoreline loss. As weather conditions deteriorate from global warming we can expect storm systems like those Cohasset has encountered this spring and summer.

Several parts of Cohasset have conditions which are affecting the shape of our shorefront. One such site is at Bailey's Creek where a succession of northeast storms has blown sufficient sand from Bassing Beach to narrow that channel to the estuary. Another area is Jacobs meadow where a small change in tidal rise and fall has changed the flushing characteristics of the meadow and changed a saltmarsh to fresh or brackish water with a substantial change of vegetation and habitat. Sandy Beach, Sandy Cove, and Bow Street, Richardson's Brook and Cat Dam in Little Harbor all have received oversight of one form or another from Federal and State agencies interested in the problem.

Last week we reported that Cohasset student Summer Institute (a part of the Center for Student Coastal Research) volunteers were involved in another part of the effort: a study which gives Cohasset assessment data from which the Town can plan the next steps to combat flooding in the Towns stormwater drainage system.

The program consisted of taking data successively from 14 key sites in central downtown area which are indicators of the major sources of flooding. The data taken were water flow, velocity and volume; water quality, bacteria and entrococci; temperature salinity, and solids content.

In order to obtain the data student volunteers had to go out at the beginning of a storm and collect samples from the 14 culverts streams, manholes, catchbasins and gabions. They were required to sample in a particular order, and they had to collect samples at two different times. All told the sample collection required about 9 hours for sample collection and fifteen to 18 hours of analysis and record keeping. The following students from the Cohasset School system participated in this program or others like it this year:

Evan Deutsch, Zach Troupe, Rob Brady, Shalea Daly, Rob St. John, Ryan Daly, Derek St. Peter, Emily Nash, John Choi, May McCarthy, Robin Earle, Mike Kusek, Ellie Baumgarten, and Aisling Guinee.

Students were out in the worst weather and stayed with the job until it was done. Town owes them a debt of gratitude at a particularly difficult time; graduation, a peak of student activities and preparation for trips; some like Appalachia were another volunteer effort. They demonstrated qualities of which their parents should be inordinately proud, and the Board of Health can only thank them for an unusual job well done and assure them of the gratitude of those whose responsibility it is to make our town systems function properly.

POLITICAL NOTES

Mulvey announces Senate campaign

Matt Mulvey of Weymouth has announced he is running for the state Senate in the Plymouth/Norfolk District, which serves Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth. A campaign kick off event took place on June 27 at the Jackson Square Restaurant and Tavern in Weymouth. State Rep. James Murphy of the 4th Norfolk District, Norfolk County Commissioner John M. Gillis, and Michael Traft, chairman of the Hingham DTC were in attendance and spoke in support of Mulvey.

The state Senate seat is currently held by Robert L. Hedlund, a Republican.

Matt Mulvey

Mulvey, a Democrat, is a small business owner and Massachusetts Certified Building Commissioner, a Massachusetts Certified Title 5 Inspector, a builder licensed by the commonwealth of Massachusetts and the cities of Boston and Cambridge. He is also s a certified engineering technician and author of building codes and zoning and land use bylaws. He currently serves as president of the New England Building Code Association.

Formerly, he worked for the city of Boston, supervising the rehabilitation of depressed neighborhoods, managing a $15 million budget and staff of 23. He is also a member of the U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Mulvey has volunteered for many causes, including the Walk for Hunger, Father Bill's Place, American Heart Association, WUMB Public Radio at UMass-Boston and the Talking Information Center.

Mulvey has been endorsed by Murphy, who spoke at the kick off event saying that he "looked forward to working with Matt Mulvey. It's important for all of us to get behind Matt." Traft urged the crowd to "get out the word." Mulvey spoke on energy conservation, health care and education. "We need a change. I'm willing to work until the job is done. Let's all get on board a train heading to a place called new ideas."

The family and friends of Mulvey are hosting a fundraiser on Tuesday, July 18, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., at the West Roxbury Pub and Restaurant, 1885 Centre St., West Roxbury.

Responsibility to question and challenge

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

Since Cohasset schools are the only public schools in town, it is our duty to be vigilant for the welfare of our students and our responsibility to question and challenge the elected officials and/or the administration. They aren't infallible.

In her recent column, Supt. Walsh attempted "to clarify misinformation, separate fact from fiction". Unfortunately she has left me with more questions than answers.

Non-resident tuition — Regarding the non-resident tuition/School Choice issue my recollections differ from the superintendent's account beginning with the number of non-resident students. In a matter of a few weeks I heard 3 different numbers (65, 22 and 11) used by Supt. Walsh discussing the number of non-resident students. In her Mariner commentary she included another number: 25. Is there any doubt where the confusion starts?

The misleading information provided by Supt. Walsh at the May 25 meeting was what ultimately caused the school committee to unanimously vote against School Choice. She reported that Cohasset would be liable for $35,000 for each SPED student accepted under School Choice before Circuit Breaker funds kicked in, thus making the program financially unfeasible for Cohasset. But according to MGL - School choice special education pupils' tuitions are designed to reflect the actual costs of specific services for each pupil. This means that Cohasset would receive $5,000 for each SPED student accepted plus 100 percent of any additional amounts above that for any SPED services incurred.

Yes, the $5,000/pupil reimbursement rate is far less than what is currently expended on average each year, but the METCO program that the Superintendent wishes to expand brings to Cohasset approx. $1,300/student. Additionally, METCO does not offer any reimbursement for specific services a student may require.

For FY'06, the average single family home contributed $5,242 in real estate taxes to education, much less than the cost of educating one child. In families with more than one student in our schools, the amount received in taxes is substantially less than what one child in School Choice brings to the school.

Yes, school districts of "Choice" cannot select or discriminate against who is enrolled, but it does not preclude the children of staff participating in the program. It is done on a first come basis, with priority given to siblings if desired. We also cannot 'select' who is enrolled in the METCO program. But in all programs the superintendent has the final say in the number of openings.

Fiscal Management — I don't concur with Supt. Walsh's statement. "For the second year in a row, due to sound fiscal management, the school department will close at the end of the fiscal year without an operational deficit."

In the last two years, we were told that due to override failures students have been deprived of electives, textbooks and supplies. Instead new administrative positions were added with some hefty salary increases, a very lucrative teachers contract was finalized and there have been surpluses.

For FY'05, Supt. Walsh reported a $222,083 utility budget deficit to the Advisory Committee six weeks before she 'discovered' a $190,652 salary budget surplus. The result of this creative bookkeeping was an unbudgeted $81,652 windfall from town Reserve Funds to the school coffers for FY'06. Remember Town Meeting never voted or approved the money be used for that purpose.

I've been informed that surplus money (outside of the Pothole Grant) was available in FY'06 budget and used to prepay textbooks for FY'07. If true, it is unconscionable since we've been consistently told that our students lacked textbooks and supplies in the classroom.

After receiving the $205,000 Chap 70 'Pothole' supplemental education funding grant in Oct '06, it should have been used for critical classroom needs — electives, textbooks and supplies — instead of hoarded. Our children only have one chance at each grade level. It's apparent our officials and administrators don't know where their top priority for educational spending should be.

My opinion of 'sound fiscal management' includes transparency that clearly indicates line item disclosures plus revenue outside the budget, budget adjustments when transfers are made between line items, actual up to date reports, linking the school budget to the town CFO's computer, and most importantly, accountability.

Global warming crisis and us

COMMENTARY

KEN READ-BROWN

A small group from Sustainable South Shore and Old Ship Church in Hingham organized receptions to follow the 7:30 showings at the Loring Theater of "An Inconvenient Truth" this past Friday and Saturday. This is the film created by former vice-president Al Gore concerning, as the subtitle of his book by the same name puts it, "the planetary emergency of global warming and what we can do about it."

The Loring holds more than 200 and it was close to full on both nights. Even so, on the first night we expected only 20 or 30 people at the reception. After all, we reasoned, wouldn't people prefer to be headed for home and bed at 9:30 in the evening rather than to a gathering to discuss global warming? It turned out the answer for over half the audience was "no." A steady stream of people headed up the street to the Old Ship Parish House, and by the time everyone was there, about 120 folks from many South Shore towns were sipping lemonade, quickly finishing all the home-made cookies, and ready to talk and listen and learn. Next night – another almost full theater, another 120 people gathering afterwards. (This time we were ready with more chairs, more lemonade, and more cookies.)

It was inspiring and heartening.

The crisis of global warming transcends political or religious affiliation, transcends national boundaries, indeed transcends most if not all other issues we face on the planet today. Temperatures are rising. Human activity is responsible for much if not most of the increase. And the results will likely be disastrous if we do nothing: increasingly devastating storms and heat waves, increasing rates of extinctions, melting ice caps, rising sea levels flooding coastal communities, … the stakes are about as high as they can be. So it was indeed inspiring and heartening to see that so many people were interested enough to stay late into the evening and share their feelings and their ideas.

And there is no shortage of ideas. Everyone wants to know what they can do to help, and — good news — there is plenty to do: We can drive more fuel efficient vehicles… and drive less — walk, bicycle, ride public transportation, or sometimes just stay put; recycle and reuse and conserve more… and consume less; replace light bulbs with energy saving compact florescent bulbs; get an energy audit for our homes and businesses; set our thermostats lower in the cold months, higher in the hot months… try living without air-conditioning.

All of this is good. All of this will help. Still… all of this, even taken together, will not be enough. We also need to be politically active – demanding of elected officials and candidates of all parties (remember, this transcends partisan politics) that they effectively address global warming by, to give just two examples, supporting alternative sources of energy (including wind farms, the fastest growing source of energy on the planet) and setting much higher fuel standards for new vehicles.

Close to home, here in we can support our towns as they work to create a town-wide energy plan. We can urge them to be radical in their dreaming of a greener place. The South Shore is already green when it comes to our beautiful parks and conservation land; but our towns can become greener when it comes to local responses to global warming: Windmills in Hull – how about in other towns?

If you haven't seen "An Inconvenient Truth," go and see it. It is not a perfect film, but it is an essential film. If you've already seen it, tell a friend, tell 10 friends, to see it.

In the end, though our responses must be personal, political, and technological, global warming is, as Al Gore affirms in the film, a moral issue. Let us act because we each share responsibility for the health of the planet on which we live. Let us act because we love the children in our lives and everywhere who will inherit this world from us. Let us act because we love the beautiful web of life of which we are a part. Let us act.

Ken Read-Brown is minister, First Parish in Hingham (Old Ship Church) Unitarian Universalist.

'Second' school financial report needed

some of us used to have). Once done and presented in advance of town meeting the project was approved. My compliments to those lawyers and, by extension, to town manager Bill Griffin for his simplification and improvements on the Cohasset Warrant and Town Report.

So, perhaps if the School Committee and the Superintendent think it might improve communications they could think outside the box and create a second financial report along the lines Mr. Fusco has suggested. I know it's more work but I think it would improve the public's understanding and would reduce the friction that has emerged.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on five roll calls and local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of June 26-30.

$25.7 BILLION FISCAL 2007 STATE BUDGET (H 5000)

House 148-3 and 150-0, Senate 38-0 and 37-0, approved and sent to Gov. Mitt Romney the conference committee version of a $25.7 billion fiscal 2007 state budget. The package includes an increase of $158 million in Lottery Aid and $216.5 million in Chapter 70 Education Aid. The budget was released only a few hours prior to the vote and some legislators complained that it is unfair to give legislators only a few hours to review all the fine print in a 254-page package prior to voting on it. Supporters said that the budget is a fiscally responsible one that funds necessary programs and new initiatives without raising taxes. Opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yes" vote is for the budget. A "No" vote is against the budget).

PERSONAL CARE ATTENDANTS (H 4758)

House 156-0, Senate 38-0, approved and sent to Gov. Romney a bill creating the Personal Care Attendant Quality Home Care Workforce Council to ensure the quality of long-term personal care services provided to seniors and persons with disabilities under MassHealth (Medicaid) in their homes by personal care attendants. The council's duties would include recruitment and training and establishment of a directory of personal care attendants. Supporters said that the council would help address the shortage of quality personal care attendants. They noted that these attendants help people continue to live in their homes rather than going into a nursing home or other institution. Some argued that this type of home care costs approximately $40 per day while a nursing home costs $140 per day. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

INCREASE MINIMUM WAGE (H 4781)

House 154-0, approved a bill hiking the minimum wage from $6.75 per hour to $8 per hour over three years. Senate 38-0, approved a bill hiking the wage to $8 per hour over two years. A conference committee of three representatives and three senators was appointed to resolve the differences. Supporters said that this pro-worker bill would ensure economic justice and help thousands of families that are living near the poverty level despite the fact that the breadwinner works in excess of 40 hours weekly. They argued that a minimum wage hike is in fact one of the best anti-poverty programs available. The vote was unanimous but business groups including the Retailers Association of Massachusetts lobbied against it. They argued that the hike is unfair to businesses that are already faced with skyrocketing health care and energy costs and the nations' highest unemployment insurance premiums. They noted that it would also hurt consumers by forcing businesses to raise prices. (A "Yes" vote is for the minimum wage hike. The House vote is on the hike to $8 over three years. The Senate vote is on the hike to $8 over two years).

RESTRICT SALE OF MERCURY PRODUCTS (S 2464)

House 156-0, approved a House-Senate conference committee version of a bill banning the sale in Massachusetts of many products containing mercury including thermometers, thermostats, switches, barometers and new motor vehicles with mercury-added switches. The measure also prohibits any mercury-added products from being disposed of in the trash and requires manufacturers to establish a collection system for their environmentally safe disposal. Supporters said that the bill would help remove this dangerous toxin from the state's waste stream and vastly improve the health of the state's citizens. They noted that mercury is a dangerous neurotoxin that enters the air and water, contaminates fish and causes birth defects in children and disease in adults. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

MASSAGE THERAPISTS (S 2258)

House 134-22, overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of a bill creating a new state board to regulate the state's estimated 5,000 massage therapists and require that they meet certain educational or experience requirements in order to be licensed to practice. Current law leaves this process up to local boards of health. The bill also prohibits the granting of a license to anyone who has been convicted of a sexually-related crime or crime involving moral turpitude in the last ten years. Supporters of the bill said that transferring this authority to the state would create uniform standards and regulations to protect the public and ensure that only qualified people are licensed to be massage therapists. They argued that the current piecemeal approach by local boards of health is inconsistent and does not protect the consumer. Opponents of the bill said that they support the concept of state licensing of massage therapists but argued that the creation of a new and costly state bureaucracy is unnecessary when the duties could be handled by the existing Board of Registration of Allied Health Professionals that currently licenses and regulates occupational therapists, athletic trainers and physical therapists. They argued that the bill should include a lifetime license ban on anyone who has ever been convicted of a sex crime and noted that a ten-year ban is insufficient and irresponsible. Supporters of the bill argued that the ten-year restriction is reasonable and noted that sex offenders who committed their crime more than ten years ago could be denied a license by the board under a section of the bill that allows the board to deny a license to any applicant that it determines is not of good moral character. The Senate several days ago overrode the veto and the bill will become law in three months. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL.

CIGARETTE FIRES (S 2403)- The House gave final approval to a Senate-approved bill requiring that cigarettes sold in Massachusetts be designed to self-extinguish if left unattended. Supporters said that the bill would save lives by preventing fires from unattended or carelessly discarded cigarettes. Only a final Senate okay is needed prior to the measure going to Gov. Romney.

LICENSE GENETIC COUNSELORS AND NATUROPATHIC DOCTORS- The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Romney a measure (H 4326) creating a state board to license and regulate genetic counselors who work with individuals and families on the risk of passing on a genetic predisposition for birth defects and disorders to future generations. The House also approved a bill (H 4250) creating a state board to license and regulate naturopathic doctors. The American Association of Naturopathic Physicians defines naturopathic doctors as "primary care and specialty doctors who address the underlying cause of disease through effective, individualized natural therapies that integrate the healing powers of body, mind and spirit." Supporters said that these increasing popular practices should be regulated and licensed by the state in order to ensure that these professionals are qualified and to protect against fraud.

PENSION FOR FORMER REP. MICHAEL RUANE (H 5063)- Gov. Romney proposed an amendment to a bill providing the late former Rep. Michael Ruane with a $44,000 annual state pension and health insurance benefits that would be collected by his wife despite the fact that Ruane never paid into the state's retirement system. The amendment would require Romney, Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey and all the members of the Legislature to privately fund the pension through payments to the state's pension fund of one-half of one percent of their base salary. Romney's amendment would replace the part of the bill that funds the pension through the sale of Ruane's house when his wife and children who are living in the house die. Ruane was denied the right to enter the retirement system from 1975 to 1994 because he was already in the city of Salem's system. He did not take advantage of a special bill passed into law in 1994 that allowed him to join the state's pension system. Romney estimates that the annual payment would be approximately $675 from him, $600 from Healey and $275 from each legislator. Supporters of the original bill said that the Legislature should do the right thing and help this former legislator, his sick wife and their children. In a written statement, Romney said, "The bill would play favorites by creating a special benefit for the family of one former legislative colleague that is not available to other similarly situated persons. Through my amendment, the elected officials responsible for this legislation will be able to demonstrate compassion and at the same time bear all the costs associated with the bill."

The War Tapes give National Guardsmen a voice

COMMENTARY

ROBIN CHAN

The War Tapes is a tale of three men and of war. It is a documentary that is told by the soldiers themselves providing them an opportunity to tell their story as honestly as possible.

The film centers on three New Hampshire National Guardsmen and their loved ones during their service in Iraq. Stephen Pink, a Kingston native, is one of those soldiers. They were asked to film their experience and the resulting product is an important body of work because it is a story that is generally not told to the public. Our armed forces are a surprisingly silent population. Now with the War Tapes, they have a voice.

To stay sane, the troops try to break up the long and tedious days by telling witty one-liners and by teasing their comrades. This helps make watching the film surprisingly pleasant, since the film could have easily caused the viewer to reach for the nearest bottle of Prozac to deal with serious issues that arise from war. The film can be offensive for some viewers so discretion is advised.

The troops find themselves in a situation quite different from their training. The army is taught to invade and to kill the enemy; however, they are now forced to suppress that instinct in an occupational war. The problem of roadside bombs, which are often planted in certain neighborhoods, is an example of this. Instead of dealing with the problem by expelling the locals living in the neighborhood and securing the area, they are forced to be like civilian cops and wait until they are attacked before dealing with the situation then and there, often repeating the dance two or three days afterwards.

This internal conflict is apparent in the War Tapes, and it offers insight into how incidents such as the one in Haditha, where U.S. troops are accused of murdering 24 Iraqi civilians, could arise. Incidents like the one in Haditha may be an extremely isolated case; unfortunately, it only takes one incident to stir the emotions of a people. One need only look to the Boston Massacre, which further inflamed the colonists' hatred of what they viewed as an occupying force.

One noticeable point of the movie for me, and one emphasized by the director through editing, is their aversion to protecting convoys from KBR/ Halliburton that were transporting goods such as certain luxury food items from place to place. They were risking their lives for cheesecake. The role of money and the blatant profiting by a number of corporations makes this conflict different from past ones. This can disillusion the troops who are risking their lives for drivers who may make $80,000 or more a year from KBR instead of actively fighting the enemy.

Not only do some soldiers pay the ultimate price and are killed in battle, but countless more will face the hidden enemy of memory that will haunt them until their dying day. Oftentimes, the soldier will face this battle alone with their memory because they may feel their loved ones will not understand or that it would not be "manly" to openly discuss their challenges after returning to a society largely removed from war. The memory of a scarring incident involving a Humvee and an Iraqi girl was triggered by the seemingly innocuous scream by Spc. Mike Moriarty's wife to a spider triggered a heated argument that could have caused additional strain to their relationship. This may be the most challenging enemy as they can't escape their mind and must live with these images.

Even if they are not scarred by the images of war, they have lost a long year spending time with their loved ones, watching the Red Sox win their first World Series in 86 years (in the case of these three National Guardsman who served in 2004), or enjoying what life has to offer as the fear of the unknown grips them and their families daily.

This past week, we celebrated Independence Day, which was won by the sweat and tears of our nation's servicemen and women. Sadly, their continued sacrifices are often not appreciated. I was able to go kayaking, watch a documentary on the War in Iraq, and have good food and company during the weekend of the Fourth because of the sacrifices they have made.

Free from foreign influences, our forefathers set forth to lay down the foundation, albeit an imperfect one, of a democracy that would allow those freedoms to be enjoyed. What we have, but the Iraqis do not, is ownership of our own destiny, which is why I fear that democracy will never take root there.

The U.S. government would not allow a full-fledged civil war, which would legitimize the Iraqi's ownership of their country, with an uncertain outcome. Civil war would affect the health of the U.S. economy and the world economy since both are dependent on a consistent supply of oil. The price of oil is at a particularly precarious point as the Gulf States are producing at capacity levels, reserves are at an all time low, and demand is exceeding supply as a result of the growing economies of America, China, and India. Given this situation, it is difficult to see a happy ending where Iraqi children can live without fear and violence since the U.S. government will rightly do what it thinks best for their own citizens at the potential cost of a budding democracy and of a people.

It is important that we are mindful of the sacrifices made by soldiers and by their families so that our children can be free to be children. One way to honor our troops is to thank serviceman when you see them. A more important way to honor them is to never take life for granted.

The War Tapes is an important film to watch because it drives home the sacrifices that are being made for our freedoms, ones that are often taken for granted and ones that are being eroded by legislation. It shows how the soldiers and their families are affected by the conflict. Celebrate the soldiers' lives by appreciating what you have. Their sacrifice is too great not to honor them.

At the end of another day at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, stage manager Tim Berry, standing, meets with production manager Dave Wentling to get his paycheck.

MATT DUNNING

(Editor's note: this is the second of a two-part series detailing what goes on behind the scenes at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, in preparation, specifically, for the Doobie Brothers' show Saturday, June 17. Part one appeared in last week's Journal.)

7 p.m., The invasion:

Parking cars was always my least favorite part of working at the Music Circus. Once all of the gear is set up, the empty cases are stored out of sight and the venue is tidied up a bit, the local crew, donning orange safety vests, heads out to direct cars into the parking lot.

Because space is limited, the cars are packed into the lots bumper-to-bumper, which makes some patrons, to put it delicately, a bit ornery. To placate those who don't wish got get blocked in, the Circus offers additional parking at the Cohasset Swim Center. Most though, having experienced parking nightmares at the Tweeter Center and Gillette Stadium, are happy enough not to have to pay for on-site parking or walk a mile and a half to the venue. With the parking operation, the goal is to maintain some semblance of order in the lot while trying not to get run over.

8 p.m., The hors d'oeuvre:

Finally, it's show time.

I headed in from the parking lot and made my way toward the lighting booth. The opening act for the night — the hors d'oeuvre, as our production manager Dave Wentling is given to calling them — was a local comedian whose name escapes me.

Comedians, from a lighting standpoint, are a cinch, and doubly so when they're confined to a small portion of the stage. The lighting rig at the Circus is such that it doesn't lend itself well to acts that like to roam the stage, mostly because the truss above the stage is only slightly wider than the stage itself. However, this gentleman was confined by the Doobie Brothers' gear to about four feet in any direction, which meant keeping him evenly lit would not be difficult. The other enjoyable aspect of lighting comedians at the Music Circus is that the scene (that is, the mix of colors on the stage) doesn't change during the performance, which gave me time to go over the cue sheets the Doobies' tour manager had left on my chair earlier in the day.

9 p.m., The main event:

Here's where my day usually gets good.

Every year, there are a handful of acts that roll into the Circus without a designated lighting personality. In these cases, the local lighting director (LD) is responsible for lighting the show. The inherent challenge is that the local lighting director has rarely, if ever, seen the show itself, and in lighting, timing is everything. Scene changes are typically plotted to coincide with specific points in the show, namely big crescendos, rhythm changes, etc. Not knowing when exactly those moments will come adds a rather large degree of difficulty to the task of putting together a light show that truly accents the music. Fortunately the Doobies' tour manager had the foresight to put together a cue packet. For each song, he noted the tempo and general mood of the song to give me a better idea of what kind of look he wanted. He also on occasion noted specific effects he was looking for, going as far to request "Rock Lightning" for one song.

Before 2005, lighting at the Music Circus was a relatively simple thing. The addition of eight robotic moving lights last summer, however, brought with it a whole new dimension of visual effects to go along with the music. Instead of merely changing colors to a rhythm, an LD at the Music Circus can produce a larger realm of light, beyond the stage, by lighting the audience, the truss and the inner walls of the tent, making the show itself seem that much larger and bringing the audience that much closer to the action.

As for the rest of the techs, during the show they keep busy in the production office, doing odd repair jobs or lining up the empty cases for easier access during load out. The techs are also responsible for providing security for the talent as they come bounding down the Star Aisle toward the stage.

10:30 p.m., Load out:

Load out at virtually any other venue is almost always easier than load in, if for no other reason than it's generally easier to take something apart than it is to put it together. However, at the Music Circus, loading a show out at the end of the night is, quite literally, an uphill battle. The bowl-like shape of the venue and the natural contours of the grounds dictate that every case has to make an uphill journey to the truck waiting in the parking lot. Having already been on the clock for close to 10 hours, pushing case after case, some weighing in excess of 500 pounds, up an incline in the muggy evening air is, to say the least, a daunting charge for even the most stalwart of stagehands. Nonetheless, piece-by-piece, all the gear makes its way back to the trailer from whence it came. As during the load-in, the local crew is divided into smaller cells, a few working on the band gear, a few with the monitor engineer and a few at front-of-house. Once the whole pack is returned to the loading area, it's lined up in the reverse order that it came out in. Most of the crew lines up to shove the cases up the steel ramp into the back of the truck, while a few remain inside the trailer to help stack the cases on top of one another to conserve space. All told, it took us grunts about two hours to tear down the entire setup for the Doobie Brothers, box it up, and pack it into the truck. Not bad for a bunch of kids just looking to make a little money during the summer.

12:30 p.m., Last call:

After the tour crew shoves off into the night, and most of the local crew has gone home, the few of us left over head to one of the local bars for an adult beverage or two. Typically, we end up at the Sea Note in Hull, where Dave has a considerable amount of clout, but at that hour, any bar will do. It's as a good a reward for a hard day's work as we could ask for, beyond a paycheck.

We'll sit around, talk about the trials and triumphs (and a few catastrophes) we've encountered in our years at the 'Circus. Dave will usually regale us with a story or two from his days on the road with the Everly Brothers, Dr. John, or Alice Cooper (if memory serves, he was Cooper's snake keeper for a stretch of time). When the "last call" bell rings, we head home, knowing full well that in just a few short hours, we'll do it all over again.

Matt Dunning is the staff reporter for the Hanover Mariner and the Norwell Mariner. He's also worked for the South Shore Music Circus for a number of years, beginning in 2000. He can be reached at mdunning@cnc.com.

4 CHS alumni named college captains for '07

In a remarkable testimonial to the leadership qualities of Cohasset lacrosse players, four recent CHS grads have been selected to captain their college squads for the 2007 season.

Curt Kahn, Tom Anderson and Nick Spirito, all members of the Class of 2003, and Nick Murphy, a 2004 graduate, will respectively lead Trinity College, Connecticut College, Western Connecticut State and Wentworth Institute of Technology for next year's spring campaigns.

Kahn, one of Trinity's four co-captains, finished the 2006 season as the fourth-ranked scorer in the New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC), averaging two goals and 3.38 points a game, and scoring four game-winning goals. The leading scorer for Trinity in both 2005 and 2006, Kahn now has 88 career points and is on target to break the century mark early in 2007.

Anderson, a Connecticut College co-captain who has been a three-year starter on defense, finished his '06 campaign with 11 ground balls, a season which saw Connecticut advance to the league playoffs.

"Anderson has been a pivotal member of the defense as a starter," notes the Connecticut College website, "and has one of the best sticks on the team."

Spirito will co-captain Western Connecticut for the second year in a row after being named a captain a year ago before he'd ever played a single game for the team. A transfer from Nazareth College after his freshman year, Spirito finished the '06 season with 30 ground balls and three forced turnovers as a starting close defenseman, despite an injury that kept him out of several early-season contests.

Finally, Murphy will lead Wentworth as a junior co-captain after a season where he played in goal in nine of the team's 13 games, posting a 4-3 record with a 7.95 goals against average and a .675 save percentage. After sharing the position with a senior in '06, Murphy is expected to lead the defense in 2007.

Rash of injuries throw wrench in playoff plans

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

What a difference a week can make.

A week ago, the Cohasset American Legion baseball team was battling to take over second place in Zone 6 East with a 5-2-2 record after winning three straight games and things were looking promising for Post 118 to land a spot in the district playoffs.

Hard times have hit Post 118, however, in the form of injuries to members of the pitching staff, and that has contributed to four straight losses which dropped Cohasset to 5-6-2 with five games remaining on the schedule. The playoffs are still within reach as Post 118 entered this week tied for the final playoff spot, but it needs to turn things around in the stretch run of this season.

"We've lost three starting pitchers for the season with injuries in the last week, and we're basically down to nine players now," noted Post 118 coach Fred Caffrey. "This has been a tough stretch for us with these injuries that have pretty much decimated us. Right now, we just need a win. The kids are still playing hard, but things aren't going very well for us right now."

Post 118's troubles began with a visit from perennial power Braintree last Wednesday night. Cohasset had tied Post 86 in an earlier meeting at Braintree, and had a 3-0 lead after three innings Wednesday night at Scituate High School with hard-throwing righthander Greg Malley getting the better of one of the zone's best-hitting teams during those first three innings.

But Malley left the game during the fourth inning with an arm injury and Braintree scored the game's next 12 runs and held on for a 12-7 victory which

Strange bedfellows: France and me

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

I'll admit it, I was rooting for the French against Brazil on Saturday.

This wasn't necessarily the case at the beginning of the game. Four days prior, France had just eliminated Spain (my second country, according to those who know me best), and expectations were vast that the Brazilians would finally wake up and play like, well, Brazilians.

By halftime, however, my allegiance had switched to Les Bleus.

The French came into this tournament with the reputation of being a group of wonderfully talented individuals that played as just that: individuals. Their two most prominent players, Zinedine Zidane and Thierry Henry, had never figured out how to play with one another and could often be seen shouting at each other during matches.

In the group stage of this World Cup, it was more "France being France." They battled to two disappointing draws with Switzerland and South Korea, and in a game against Togo they needed to win, were tied 0-0 at the half.

But when Patrick Vieira scored in the 55th minute against the Togolese on a splendid turn-and-strike in the penalty area, it was almost as if to say, "Enough is enough."

France are a world power and now we will play like one - so said the message that was apparent in all of the players' body language after Vieira's goal. And that is precisely what they have done.

Mostly everyone who has followed this Cup, myself included, figured the French would be mere fodder for Spain en route to a quarterfinal against Brazil. The Spaniards played some of the best football of the group stage, and surely their young, energetic legs would run circles around the old, stolid Frenchmen.

The second half, which began 1-1, was all France. Players young (Franck Ribery, Florent Malouda) and old (Zidane, Vieira) attacked with gusto, while the back line - including some of the "old guard" in Lilian Thuram and William Gallas - repressed Spain's vaunted attack. The full time score line: France 3, Spain 1.

Several managers, including Brazil's Carlos Alberto Parreira, have been criticized in this tournament for doggedly sticking with older players at the expense of younger, more pacey athletes who have thrived throughout most of the competition.

3 Skippers named among area's elite

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: boys tennis.

Cohasset's Susan Curry is one of three Skippers on the Honorable Mention list, joining doubles players Charlotte and Elizabeth Landon.

Singles

Chelsea Grossman - Senior (Capt.) - First singles - Cohasset

Earns her second Marinerland All-Scholastic nod after making it as a doubles player in 2004…An athletic, durable player who won some tough matches for the South Shore League co-champions this year…Among those was a three-set win April 26 against Hingham; also won in three sets May 22 in Duxbury to clinch a 3-2 victory for her team…Grossman earned Cohasset's only team point in its tournament loss to eventual state finalist Scituate, defeating fellow All-Scholastic Lindsay Horne 3-6, 6-4, 6-4…Was seeded seventh in the MIAA individual tournament South sectional, and won two matches in that competition to advance to the Round of 16…Also played basketball for CHS, where she was a starter on this year's Division 4 South semifinal team

Maddie Ward - Junior - First singles - Hingham

Stepping into the shoes of departed four-year starter Meaghan Doyle wasn't easy, but Ward made it look that way…Just a junior, Ward compiled a record of 10-2 this spring, notching several big wins along the way…Recorded a pair of three-set wins over Duxbury and Notre Dame, helping the Harborwomen reign 3-2 in those matches…The Patriot League All-star's game has developed greatly since her freshman year, according to coach Jamie Kenney…"She was a big part of our early season success"…Hingham went 12-5 overall and qualified for play in the Div. 1 South Sectional team tourney…In the individual tourney, Ward reached the quarterfinals…The Harborwomen were the runners-up in the Patriot League at 11-2, the only losses coming against Scituate, a state finalist this season…Just a junior, Ward will return to the HHS courts next spring.

Terri Duffy - Senior (Capt.) - First singles - Marshfield

With three years experience at the No. 1 singles spot, Duffy was a proven leader this spring…The two-year captain racked up a 13-6 record this season, helping to guide the Lady Rams to a 15-2 record overall and 4-2 mark in the Old Colony League…A three-year OCL All-star, Duffy's greatest assets on the court were her confidence and strength, according to coach Roberta Daniele…"Her game really clicked this year and she really went after points. Her net play was really strong, which is rare in high school tennis"…Duffy's only two league losses came against Barnstable, a Div. 1 powerhouse…She won big matches in the Div. 1 South team tourney, topping opponents from Sharon and Wellesley to help Marshfield reach the quarterfinals…In the individual tourney, Duffy upset her seeded opponent before falling to Scituate's Lindsay Horne in the quarterfinals…Duffy also played basketball at Marshfield High and plans to continue playing both sports at Colby-Sawyer next year.

Kyra Holmquest - Sophomore - Second singles - Marshfield

What a difference a year makes…A strong player as a freshman at second singles last spring, Holmquest really came into her own this season…The sophomore racked up a record of 15-5, two of those losses coming against Barnstable…A smart player on the court, Holmquest gained a wealth of experience this spring…"Last year, she was young and inexperienced. This year she really matured as a player and that was the No. 1 difference," coach Roberta Daniele said…Holmquest's consistency at her position helped the Lady Rams finish as the runners-up to Barnstable in the Old Colony League (4-2) and earn the No. 5 seed in the Div. 1 South tourney…There, Holmquest won two matches to help the MHS girls reach the quarterfinals…Holmquest plans to further develop her tennis skills this summer playing in tournaments…Holmquest also runs cross country and indoor track at Marshfield High and she will return to all three teams next year.

Susan Bitetti - Sophomore - First singles - Norwell

About as talented a player there is in the local high school ranks, and opponents will still see her for another two years…Advanced to the championship match of the MIAA individual tournament before losing to St. Peter-Marian's Pam Jeppson; earlier that day, Bitetti dispatched Newton South's Lauren Hollender, 6-0, 6-1 in the semifinal…Did not lose a single game through the first four rounds of the tournament, in the process impressing fans from other towns with her poise on the court…Dropped the first three games of the South final against Bishop Feehan's Darcy Demers before coming back for a 6-3, 7-5 win for her second straight South crown…Was undefeated in team match play for the Clippers, routinely winning by 6-0, 6-0 scores…Earned Norwell's only team point in the Division 2 South quarterfinal loss to Duxbury…One of the highest ranked 16-and-under USTA New England players

Lindsay Horne - Senior (Capt.) - First singles - Scituate

Closed out her sterling SHS career in style with an excellent senior campaign…This marks Horne's fourth appearance on this team, the same number of times she was named a Patriot League All-Star…The leader of a singles group, featuring fellow All-Scholastics Samantha Santorella and Katie Pritchard, that dominated throughout the season and state tournament…Part of a singles sweep in sectional semifinals against Duxbury and sectional final against Ursuline…Picked up a big win over Bishop Feehan's Darcy Demers on May 22, 6-3, 7-5…Dependable in the clutch, as evidenced by her three-set victory on April 10 over Hingham's Maddie Ward (also an All-Scholastic); that win decided a 3-2 result in favor of the Lady Sailors…Advanced to the quarterfinals of the MIAA individual tournament South sectionals, a feat she also accomplished as a junior…Also was the starting goalie for the SHS girls soccer team

Katie Pritchard - Sophomore - Second singles - Scituate

Talk about a breakout season…Pritchard was very good as a freshman, earning Marinerland Honorable Mention status, but was even better this season…The highlight may have been advancing to the semifinals of the MIAA individual tournament South sectionals, winning five matches (including one against the number-3 seed) in that competition before being ousted by Norwell's Susan Bitetti, eventual state finalist and fellow All-Scholastic…Able to step up when it mattered most; with the Division 2 state semifinal match between Scituate and Lynnfield tied at 2-2, it was Pritchard who won a dramatic three-set affair to propel the Sailors to the state championship match…Along with teammates and All-Scholastics Lindsay Horne and Samantha Santorella, Pritchard was part of singles sweeps against Duxbury and Ursuline in the sectional semifinal and final, respectively…Will likely move up to the top singles spot in Scituate's lineup next season, and there is no reason to believe she won't thrive there, either

Samantha Santorella - Senior - Third singles - Scituate

Scituate's run to the state final was made possible largely by the return of Santorella, who at third singles redefined 'automatic point'…Would be a second singles player on any other team, and probably the top player in most other programs…A Marinerland All-Scholastic in 2004, when she went undefeated at first singles and led her team to the Division 1 South title match…Played through a broken left wrist this season, an injury that took away her incredible backhand; still, she had more than enough to dominate any opponent that came her way…Perhaps her most impressive win came in the state tournament match against Cohasset's Meg Anderson, a very good player who played to Santorella's backhand and took an early lead; the Sailors senior made the necessary adjustments and walked away with a 6-3, 6-1 win…Santorella earned the team's lone point in the state championship loss to Notre Dame of Worcester

Melissa Dempsey - Sophomore - First Singles - Weymouth

Teaming up with her twin sister Megan, Melissa Dempsey led the way for a young Weymouth team that fell just one win shy of a tournament berth in the final match of this season.

Playing first singles in the ultra-competitive Bay State Conference against such powerhouses as Newton North and Wellesley Dempsey more than held her own against some of the top high school players in the state. Her season highlights include a 6-0 6-0 win over her first singles counterpart from Braintree, and a huge win over Walpole that helped keep the teams tournament hopes alive at 5-7. After winning against Walpole she followed that up with a win over Norwood, and another dominating effort against Braintree. She even picked up a singles win in the season finale despite her team falling. Her success was an integral part in keeping the team alive for the tournament. She was rewarded for her efforts this season by being named a Bay State League first team all-star.

Only a sophomore, she'll be back next year along with most of the Wildcats team to make more headway in a very difficult conference.

Doubles

Meg Anderson/Sally Meehan - Doubles - Cohasset

Although they didn't play together often this season, it wasn't hard to choose this sophomore duo after they advanced to the quarterfinals of the MIAA individual tournament South sectional…Were the number-2 seed in that competition after making it to the sectional semifinals as freshmen in 2005…With teammates Charlotte and Elizabeth Landon, Anderson and Meehan formed one of the most formidable groups of doubles players in the area…Both can run the ball down on the baseline, play at the net, and hit powerful serves and volleys to befuddle opponents…Meehan also played field hockey for CHS, while Anderson has played soccer and basketball…Both played a little singles this year as well, with Anderson picking up a big win at third singles on April 28 in the Skippers' 4-1 victory over Norwell…With the program graduating most of its singles players, Anderson and Meehan could figure in the singles picture for the Skippers next year

Krista Vreeland (Capt.)/Kaylene O'Brien - First doubles - Hingham

Was one of the most dominating doubles teams in Marinerland this season, finishing with an overall record of 14-3…Recognized by their coach for being extremely hard workers, Vreeland and O'Brien played every single match and attended every practice this spring, according to Jamie Kenney… "They are leaders on and off the court. They have excellent doubles knowledge and give a great effort until the end. Their commitment was amazing"…The duo picked up big wins against Duxbury (twice), Scituate (twice), and Notre Dame (once) during the regular season, helping the Harborwomen compile an overall record of 12-5 and 11-2 mark in the Patriot League, the only two losses coming against state finalist, Scituate…Both just juniors, Vreeland and O'Brien will return to captain the squad next season…Vreeland will be a two-year captain.

Kasey Talbot/Caroline Bagby - First doubles - Marshfield

After playing together for two seasons, Talbot and Bagby were tough to beat this season…A two-year captain, Talbot is a four-year veteran on the doubles front…The junior Bagby has three years experience at the position…The pair compiled a record of 15-4 and were a major reason why the Lady Rams had the season they did…MHS went 15-2 in the regular season, finished second in the Old Colony League and reached the quarterfinals of the Div. 1 South team tourney…"Caroline is a bit more aggressive, which was good for Kasey. Kasey makes very few mistakes and is very consistent. Both of them set each other up well for points and they know where to be on the court," coach Roberta Daniele said…Talbot was also captained the swim team at MHS and plans to continue that sport at the US Coast Guard Academy next year…Bagby will return to the Marshfield courts next spring.

Tough luck for Post 118

began the four-game skid for Post 118.

Cohasset also had a three-run lead in its next game last Friday night against West Roxbury, as it was in front, 6-3, in the sixth inning of the game played at Catholic Memorial High School. But another pitcher went down for the season with an arm injury, this time Scituate High graduated senior righthander Greg Ouellette, and when he went out in that inning with the lead, West Roxbury rallied for an 8-6 win.

Post 118's troubles continued over the weekend as it lost to Canton, 10-3 on Saturday and was held to two hits by Morrisette lefty Matt Haskins on Sunday in an 8-1 loss at Cohasset High School.

"We had to throw three kids against Morrisette who hadn't pitched in a couple of years, and under the circumstances, they pitched pretty well," said Caffrey.

The Braintree game started promisingly enough for Cohasset as Malley and winning pitcher Dan Newman matched zeroes until the bottom of the third when Post 118 jumped on Newman for three runs and looked on its way to another win in a big game.

Chris Ofsthun got the inning going with a leadoff single, Tom Chase singled with one out and both runners moved up on a throwing error. Ofsthun scored on a single to left by Shane Caffrey and Chase also scored on another Braintree throwing error on the play.

Chris Bryan walked and Kyle Pinkus was hit by a pitch to load the bases, Caffrey scored the third run of the inning on a ground out by Tim McGrath, and Post 118 had a 3-0 lead after three innings.

But the wheels come off from there as Malley had to leave the game with Cohasset still up, 3-2, in the fourth inning, and Braintree then scored three more runs in the fifth to take the lead, and add two more in the sixth and five in the seventh.

Post 118 responded with four of its own in the bottom of the seventh as Cody Morgan led off with a single, Chase followed with a double and both came in to score on wild pitches. Michael Signorelli walked and McGrath finished the scoring with a two-run home run.

In the game at West Roxbury, Caffrey, Pinkus, Marcus Joyce and Kevin Signorelli had two hits each as Post 118 built their three-run lead. In the loss at Canton, Chase and Caffrey had two hits each, and a Chase double was the only highlight of the home loss to third-place Morrisette.

Post 118 returns to action tonight at Holbrook at 5:45, and will stay on the road to take on unbeaten Milton next Monday night, and then host Canton next Tuesday in a makeup game to end the regular season. The zone playoffs begin next Friday with the top five teams in Zone 6 East matched up against the top five teams in Zone 6 West.

Strange bedfellows: France and me

FROM WORLD CUP, PAGE 17

At long last, it caught up with Brazil on Saturday, when fullbacks Cafu and Roberto Carlos were made to look like fools by the French forwards. Of course, Lucio and Juan didn't exactly acquit themselves well, either, but it was Roberto Carlos who got lost on Henry's goal in the second half.

By that time, I had already made my mind up that I wanted France to win. After sitting through 120 minutes of Portuguese and English impotence earlier in the day, I just wanted to see some decent football.

The Brazilians did not appear particularly interested in providing it. Ronaldinho was continuing his stunningly indifferent play, Kaka was nowhere to be found, and Parreira forgot Robinho was on his team until it was too late. Of Brazil's starters, only Ze Roberto and Ronaldo, of all people, can legitimately say they did anything useful when it mattered in this Cup.

France, meanwhile, was playing the beautiful game the way it was meant to be played, with imagination, speed and creativity. The most impressive performance of the day came from Zidane, who looked like the Zizou of 1998: devious dribbling, tricky juggling and cutting passes, all making the Brazilian defense lost and dizzy.

As fitting as it was that Zidane assisted and scored the final two goals against Spain, it was even more so that he created Henry's goal with another marvelous free kick. One of the best players in history of the game - and on this day, the best player on the pitch - finishing off another supposed favorite with a vintage performance.

I just wanted to see some decent football. The Brazilians did not appear particularly interested in providing it.

A collection of unrelated thoughts

England's World Cup ended rather appropriately, didn't it?

Strong defending combined with little in the way of offense; more misery from David Beckham; the tempestuous Golden Boy, Wayne Rooney, gets a red card; Frank Lampard flubbing an amazing scoring opportunity beyond belief; and, ultimately, a loss in penalty kicks.

On the subject of Becks, is there another manager in the world beside Sven Goran-Eriksson that would have continued to start him over Aaron Lennon? When Lennon took the pitch in place of Beckham on Saturday, it took him two minutes to show more than Beckham did in his 55 minutes.

And then there is the omnipresent story of Becks and his desire to play in MLS within the next few years. Personally, I can't wait for it to happen, and all the subsequent hype that will lead to nothing in terms of results. Put Beckham on the Revolution, and he is their third-best player behind Clint Dempsey and Taylor Twellman. Shalrie Joseph might have a say in the matter, as well.

Ridiculing Beckham seems like a perfect segue to ridicule Marcelo Balboa.

The ESPN color man has been astoundingly hideous during the World Cup, but he was truly on top of his game for the England-Portugal match.

My favorite Marcelo-ism came in the second half when, after Beckham had been taken off, England were lining up for a free kick. In attempt to size up the English options for who would take it, Balboa waxed poetically, "Well, you have Steven Gerrard, you have um...umm...uhh...umm...Cole, who can kick it with his left foot, so you have that option. You have Gerrard..."

During Balboa's analysis, the cameras showed Lampard standing over the ball the entire time.

It won't be long before an African side reaches the semi-finals of a World Cup.

It could very well happen in 2010 in South Africa. The geography will help, sure, but how Ghana and Ivory Coast performed in this tournament showed that Africa is not that far off the world pace.

Against Brazil, Ghana played the far better, more attractive football between the two sides, but were doomed by questionable finishing and a couple mistakes in defense. The Ivorians played right to the end against Argentina and Holland, and may have already set their tone for 2010 with their come-from-behind victory over Serbia and Montenegro.

With traditional African powers Cameroon, Senegal and Nigeria already gearing up for it, the 2010 Cup could be Africa's coming-out party to the world.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Recreation offers sports clinics

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer the following clinics. For more information or to register, call the Recreation Department, 41 Highland Ave., at 781-383-4109.

South Shore Basketball School – The Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with South Shore Basketball School, is accepting applications for a summer basketball clinic, under the direction of Ron Ford.

Based upon age, two sessions will be available during the week of Monday. July 10, through Friday, July 14, at Cohasset High School gymnasium. Session I is for boys and girls, ages 7 through 11, and will be from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Session II is for boys and girls, ages 12 through 15, and will be noon to 3 p.m. The fee for the five-day program is $125. This year's sessions will be led by Dorian Bryant, current coach at Cohasset High School.

Brochures and registration forms are available at Cohasset Town Hall in the Recreation Department office.

South Shore Soccer Camp and Squirts Camp – Cohasset Recreation Department has announced that registrations are being accepted for South Shore Soccer Camp's summer clinics, which take place for one week only, Monday, July 31, through Friday, Aug. 4. Jon Anderson will direct the camp again this year at Milliken Field, Cohasset.

There are two camps offered this summer for two different age groups. For boys and girls, ages 7 to 14, the SSSC will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The boys and girls camps are operated separately. The one-week session is $255 per participant, with a $20 discount for a second. child. The fee includes a shirt and a ball for each participant, available the first day of camp. For boys and girls ages 4 to 6, the Soccer Squirts Camp will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m., each day. The price is $90 per Squirt, with no discount for a second child.

Complete the application form in the brochure at the Cohasset Recreation Department office to register. Space is limited – early registration is advised.

Youth Lacrosse Clinic – This one-week clinic is for boys and girls entering grades three through six in the fall. While the program is run by the Cohasset Recreation Department, it's open to players from other communities. Brothers Jamie and Ronan Buick will direct the program.

The clinic will take place the week of July 17 to 21, from 8 to 10 a.m., at Milliken Field. Sessions take place rain or shine – in all conditions except lightning. Players need full equipment. For girls, this means a stick, goggles and a mouth guard. For boys, it includes a helmet, including mouthpiece, gloves, arm and shoulder pads and a stick.

Players should also bring their own water, juice or sports drink to each day's sessions. The fee for the lacrosse clinic is $85. Call the Recreation Department to register.

Basketball Camp

The Whitman-Hanson Boys basketball program will be playing host to an elite players camp this summer for boys in grades 7, 8, 9 and 10 (all grades as of this Fall) at the brand new multi-court facility at Whitman-Hanson High School.

The camp will be held from July 17-21 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Players may register as individuals or with their current travel team. Included in this camp will be player seminars on SAQ (Speed, Agility and Quickness) training designed to teach players the most modern techniques in improving in these pivotal areas.

Other seminars will focus on mental training as players will be given lessons in positve mental imagry which is essential as players get more advanced in their careers. Campers will be playing several games a day against the top competition in the area as well as taking part in 3-on-3 and 1-on-1 tournaments.

The cost per camper is only $150 if registering with a team of 8 or more before July 10th. The cost per camper is only $175 if registering as an individual before July 10th or $200 after that date. There is a lunch program available as well.

For more information please email Panthercamp@aol.com . Space is limited and will be filled in the order in which we receive the registration forms.

How to Make Money in Any Real Estate Market

You Haven't Missed Your Chance...

You really haven't missed your chance to make money in real estate.

Ask any millionaire who's made his fortune in real estate and he'll tell you: If you have the right strategies, you don't need a boom to make huge profits in real estate... You can make money in any market.

Living Proof

And believe me, I know... I'm Carleton Sheets and over the past 35 years, and through every market imaginable, I've bought and sold more than $20 million in real estate.

That's right, 35 years of successful real estate investing... that means finding the best deals, buying low, and selling high no matter what is going on in real estate or the world.

For me, it meant I did all this through:

- 7 Presidents
- 3 Wars
- 4 Market Crashes
- 5 Recessions

I didn't need a red-hot real estate market to make my riches — and neither do you.

Tried and True

I'm sure you'll agree that not all real estate is made the same... and neither are all real estate investment programs.

You've probably seen them... those fly-by-night companies claiming they can make you a millionaire overnight.

Well, over the years, I've taught 500,000 people, that's half a million ordinary folks just like you and me, how to use real estate to have the lives they've always dreamed of.

I've built my reputation on the success of my students.

And unlike those "get-rich-quick" schemes that seem to be everywhere these days, I'll be the first to admit this is not a get-rich-quick scheme, this is a get-rich-smart program.

Think about it: A check made out to you with not 3, not 4, not even 5... but 6 zeros before the decimal point...

Real Profits in the Real World

My latest program is by far one of the most remarkable advancements in real estate investing.

Designed to get money in your pocket, Real Profits takes you into the market with live calls to sellers and actual property tours... so you can put your newfound knowledge into action.

Using my NEW active real estate training, you'll discover how you can hone your investment senses so you:

- Spot a roof problem by looking for curling shingles
- Tune in to the differences between creaky floorboards and serious warping
- Sniff out potential mold or masked odors
- Walk away from the money pits and seize the gold mines

These skills can help you make money in any market, regardless of world events or the economy. So while other people are left sitting around thinking they've missed the boat, you can be sitting pretty.

You don't need tumbling prices or soaring appreciation... knowing how to recognize real estate with the greatest profit potential and knowing how to seal the deal is what can make you a real estate millionaire.

And my Real Profits Program can show you how.

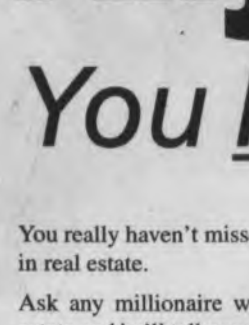
See It for Yourself for FREE

We all know seeing is believing...

So a small group of my trained Real Profits professionals is on their way to personally show you how this program works... See for yourself how combining my experience with your desire and determination can have you living that better life you've been wanting.

And your first step is to come to this FREE workshop. It's that easy. There's absolutely no risk and no obligation.

Plus, this NEW Active Learning Method program is only available at this FREE workshop. Check the times and dates my team will be in your area and make plans now to be there.



Personal Guarantee from Carleton H. Sheets

I'm sure many of you reading this have toyed with the idea of getting into real estate before — especially considering the major market boom we just experienced.

For whatever reason, you didn't take action... and now you may be thinking the market isn't what it used to be and maybe you've missed your chance.

Well, wipe that thought right out of your mind. My experience tells me there has never been a better time for you to start making money in real estate.

Why put off until tomorrow the money you could be making today?

With the right skills and hands-on training, you can turn any market condition into a windfall of profits.

I personally guarantee the skills you can learn from my Real Profits Active Learning Method can sharpen your senses and take you through any market condition.

Don't hesitate.

Discover how to make money every time on every deal in any market condition. With the right plan and know-how, I guarantee it's possible.

White water Rafting in Maine

Don't bring your cell phone; there's no coverage in The Forks

By TANIA MEJER

THE FORKS, Maine -- "Dig in," our whitewater rafting guide shouted as five other rafters and I paddled harder and faster, trying to stay in unison as we propelled ourselves toward the next set of rapids on the Dead River. A swirl of water beckoned below, creating a menacing-looking hole that grew deeper and deeper until -- BAM! -- a huge wave swallowed our raft and nearly took out one of my fellow rafters.

Now this is the sort of adventure I was looking for when I drove up here with a pal for a weekend whitewater rafting trip.

It's becoming less of a secret that this is where the action is -- no less than Playboy recently named The Forks, the meeting place of the Dead and Kennebec rivers, among its Top 10 Under-Appreciated Outdoor Spots (and showed a photo of folks in a Northern Outdoors raft).

A friend and I spent two days rafting with Northern Outdoors, the company that pioneered whitewater rafting here in 1976 -- the folks at this company actually named most of the rapids on the Kennebec, Dead and Penobscot rivers.

The staff at the rafting operation and low-key resort is amazingly hospitable and knowledgeable. And they brew their own beer on premises at The Forks Resort Center's Kennebec River Brewery.

Playboy, Maine hospitality, beer -- what's not to love?

We timed our visit so we could raft both the Kennebec and the Dead rivers. The Dead is usually, well, too dead to raft, so you have to plan your visit around scheduled dam releases (remaining dates this season are Aug. 13, Sept. 3, Sept. 17 and Oct. 7). But when the water's flowing, you can expect 15 miles of continuous and consistent Class III, IV and V whitewater at anywhere from 3,500 cubic feet per second to over 7,000 cubic feet per second -- and we certainly couldn't resist that.

The other options for those with a faster-and-wilder-is-better mentality is to schedule a trip for a turbine-test day on the Kennebec River, when it's flowing at nearly double its normal volume (remaining dates this season are July 10, Sept. 9, Sept. 23). Or schedule a double run through the Class V rapids on the Penobscot River (anytime through Sept. 10).

As a rafting novice but experienced thrill seeker, it was an adrenaline rush I was looking for. But the first heart-pounding experience of the first morning (we drove up the night before so we wouldn't be late for the crack-of-dawn starting time) wasn't on the river but instead came from the aerobics of trying to squeeze myself in a wet suit (mandatory before June 1 and after Oct. 1, but available to rent all summer). Once past that time-consuming ordeal, we were soon on the Kennebec. Northern Outdoors takes up to 124 guests on this river each day (and you're likely to see other rafters with other companies out on the water).

We beat the rush (only 26 rafters were here with Northern Outdoors on our late May trip), but we did not beat the vicious bites of black flies everywhere our wetsuits didn't cover.

About half the people in my raft had never been whitewater rafting before, and the Kennebec was a good river to start with, with alternating sections of whitewater and calm spots, and of course experienced guides (our guide for both days also happened to be one of the company's beer brewers).

For the most thrilling ride on the raft, take the lead in rowing and sit in the front. You'll get the first and liveliest taste of all the roller-coaster waves, though you'll be the most likely to get knocked off into the river. No one fell out of our raft on either river, though we did see another group get thrown in for a swim on the Dead.

I took the middle position for the first day, and soon after practicing our paddling commands we found ourselves well into Taster -- rapids our guide told us would give us a taste of what's to come. We plunged into Goodbye Hole and Whitewasher and made a big splash at Magic Falls.

There's some Class II rapids that you can swim in, which we couldn't pass up. When our guide gave us the nod, everyone on my raft went over the edge and swam with all our might against the current. At the sound of his whistle, we flipped on our backs and let the rapids splash up over us and carry us downstream. It was a blast!

Shortly after Swimmers Rapid, we made a stop at Dead Stream Falls. Along with my fellow rafters, I climbed right up onto a rock and let the forceful, pounding waterfall hit my back. Our trusty, accompanying video kayaker was sure to capture all of us goofing around here (Northern Outdoors has videographers and still photographers who travel ahead of the rafts. After the trip, you can see the photos and video of your day on the river and purchase a copy to take home).

Since it was still early in the season, a snack served on the shore of the river included hot chocolate -- most of the time they do lunch here.

After this halfway point stop, most of the rest of the river is a leisurely float to the takeout spot -- so our guides rolled out inflatable kayaks during the break, and we took turns using them and sitting on the raft as we finished the trip (if it had been warmer we would have swam some more for the last leg of the river).

The next day, the Dead was more what I had been hoping for -- major excitement and adrenaline. And with clear blue skies above, it was perfect weather to get wet.

On this river, my friend and I took a ride in a Diablo sport raft, which provided a wilder ride. I took the front for the last part of the river, through Little Poplar Falls and Big Poplar Falls. It was harder to paddle in the front, but what a rush when the waves came right up over me -- surely this is the best spot! At one point on the Dead, another one of the Northern Outdoors rafts got stuck in a hole, and we had to throw a rope out to them to help pull them out.

Rafting down the Kennebec River with Northern Outdoors

Since the Dead is faster and more intense, we didn't have as much time to sit back and enjoy the scenery, but both the Dead and the Kennebec have beautiful views. Come in the spring for wilder rapids, summer for the great weather, and in the fall you can get in some leaf-peeping.

Nearby is hiking nirvana, but be aware: Rafting is physically draining. We hiked to Moxie Falls (of Moxie soda fame) after the first day, but despite the beckoning of the nearby Appalachian Trail, we had no energy to hike the second afternoon.

Instead, we napped in our "cozy cabin," a log cabin that proved to be just that. It's one of several accommodations offered at The Forks Resort Center.

We could have cooked our own dinner in the cabin's full kitchen but opted instead for the restaurant at the property's timbered main lodge, where the beer-battered onion rings were truly addictive. We followed dinner with drinks at the Kennebec River Brewery, and then a long soak in the hot tub -- a perfect way to end our adventure.

If you go ...

GETTING THERE: Google Maps can't find The Forks, and there's no cell phone service once you get up there, so don't forget the directions before you leave. The Forks is a 4 1/2-hour to 6-hour drive from Boston, depending on traffic leaving the city. Take I-95 north to Route 201 (exit 133). The Forks Resort Center is about 18 miles north of Bingham. (Trips on the Kennebec and Dead rivers depart from The Forks Resort Center, while the Penobscot Outdoor Center is the departure point for trips on the Penobscot River. It's about a 2 1/2-hour drive from one center to the other.)

ON THE RIVER: Rafting trips start at $69 per person, which includes lunch and use of the facilities at The Forks Resort Center/Penobscot Outdoor Center. Diablo rafts cost $20 extra per person. Discounts are available for two-day, two-river trips.

STAYING THERE: Northern Outdoors has camping areas and lodge rooms as well as apartments, houses, and cabins with full kitchens. Prices start at $10 per night for camp sites and $32 per person for lodge rooms (based on double occupancy). The "cozy cabins" we stayed in run $64 per person weekdays, $75 on weekends (also based on double occupancy). Add a meal plan (two breakfasts and one dinner) for $37.84 per person.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: Go to www.northernoutdoors.com or call 800-765-RAFT.

Amy Johansen to perform on Cohasset bells

The 82nd season of summer Carillon recitals on the 57-bell carillon of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset, will continue on Sunday, July 9, at 6 p.m., with a performance by Amy Johansen from the University of Sydney, Australia. Johansen is an organ recitalist, having given many recitals throughout the United States. In 2004, she made her American carillon debut as a featured artist at the Springfield, Ill., Carillon Festival. This is her first appearance as a carillonneur in the New England area. Her program on Sunday will include original carillon compositions by Hamilton Harty, Emilien Allard, Frank Della Penna, Terry Vaughan, Jef Rottiers, Ronald Barnes and Albert de Klerk, and arrangements of works by J. S. Bach and Dieudonné Rayck.

The hour-long recital is free of charge and will take place rain or shine. In case of rain, listen from parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and descriptive brochures will be available in a stand beside the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension, and will also be distributed on Cohasset Common. Listeners are invited to bring blankets, lawn chairs and picnics to the courtyard or the Common.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083, weekdays between 9 a.m. noon, or St. Stephen's carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, at 978-475-2599, or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy, at 781-383-9599.

Hootie and the Blowfish

New album, new beginning for Hootie and the Blowfish

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

After spending most of last year touring in support of the album "The Best of Hootie and the Blowfish: 1993-2003," Darius Rucker and his Blowfish bandmates — Mark Bryan, Dean Felber, and Jim Sonefeld — were ready for something new. The group's latest release and fifth studio album, "Looking for Lucky," on the Sneaky Long Records label — its first since the multi-platinum quartet parted ways with Atlantic Records — gave them just that.

"I think its the best album we've ever recorded with the best batch of songs we have ever done," explained lead singer Rucker last week by telephone. "That came from being in Nashville and working with some great writers while always keeping an open mind about what we wanted to do."

That meant a first try at collaborating with an outside songwriter for the pop-rockers, who play the South Shore Music Circus on Friday.

"Before this, it was the four of us writing all of the songs. It was really cool, as a singer, to have a song like 'Get Out of My Mind' (written with Nick Brophy) to come in already written and I get to interpret somebody else's lyrics."

Collaborators on "Looking for Lucky" include songwriter Matraca Berg ("Strawberry Wine," "Wild Angels"), Keith Burns (from Trick Pony), Radney Foster ("Just Call Me Lonesome"), Hank Futch (from South Carolina's roots rock band Blue Dogs), Derek George, Walter Salas Humara, Paul Sanchez (from Cowboy Mouth) and old recording friend Nick Brophy, who also added drum loops and guitar effects that helped shape the album's overall sound. The disc was recorded at Emerald Studios in Nashville and reunited the band with its longtime producer Don Gehman, who was behind their biggest hits including "Only Wanna Be with You," and the Grammy Award-winning "Let Her Cry."

"We've been together 20 years. We were done with Atlantic and they were done with us, but we definitely weren't done as a band. In fact, we're a much better band than we were 10 years ago. We've settled in to giving our all and expecting no less," says Rucker, who helped form the group at the University of South Carolina in the late 1980s, taking its name from the nicknames of two of their classmates. With Rucker on lead vocals, Bryan on guitar, Felber on bass, and drummer Sonefeld, the band began playing frat parties and dive bars while steadily earning regional buzz. Signed by Atlantic without having ever put out an album, the band's first release, "Cracked Rear View," in summer 1994 produced the top ten single "Hold My Hand."

Cutting the record in Nashville cut down on a lot of unnecessary distractions, according to Rucker.

"Los Angeles and New York are such huge cities. There is so much going on that you can lose focus very easily. What I love about Nashville is that it is really a small town, but with great people and incredible musicians. Being in the studio hadn't felt this good in a very long time and that came entirely from being in Nashville."

Rucker, 40, doesn't only like to work down South, he likes to live there, too.

"I've tried living elsewhere, but nowhere makes me as happy as Charleston, S.C. That's where it's at for me," says Rucker, who is married and the father of three young children, 11- and five-year-old daughters and an 18-month-old son.

"It is very hard to leave my family to go on the road, but it is my job and I love it as much today as I ever have."

("Hootie and the Blowfish" will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on July 7 at 8 PM. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.)

Movie review

The smug and ruthless Miranda (Meryl Streep) enjoys shocking her new charge Andy (Anne Hathaway).

Wicked good 'Devil'

"The Devil Wears Prada" (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In "The Devil Wears Prada," the season's hottest fashion accessory is a jewel-encrusted knife in the back. Based on Lauren Weisberger's dishy 2003 chick-lit best-seller and directed by "Sex and the City"' and "Entourage"-seasoned David Frankel, the film is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot.

A clever blend of "Cinderella' and "Faust," "The Devil Wears Prada" features a simply divine Meryl Streep as its witchy Mephistopheles Miranda Priestly and Anne Hathaway as Andy Sachs, a dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist in New York City.

Andy, who lives with devoted, aspiring chef Nate (Adrian Grenier) and has a tight circle of friends, is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and fashion high-priestess Miranda, a dragonlady with a tongue like a carving knife known to go through assistants like the French go through foie gras.

Andy's catty Brit coworker Emily (Emily Blunt) practically hisses when she speaks to her and ridicules Andy's thrift-shop-wallflower wardrobe. Andy's only ally in her struggle to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, including somehow getting her hands on a copy of the new "Harry Potter" novel before its official publication for Miranda's bratty twin girls, is Nigel (a terrific Stanley Tucci).

Nigel is Miranda's swishy and celebrated art director at the fabled, extremely influential "Runway" magazine. Using the magazine's own "closet" of samples, Nigel even plays Henry Higgins and transforms Andy into a New Age Eliza Doolittle, and the newly made-over Hathaway gives Audrey Hepburn, the screen's most legendary fashion-makeover icon, a run for her money.

"The Devil Wears Prada," which was shot on location in New York City, captures the pulsating excitement of that metropolis and is set in a cutthroat world where the Houses of Valentino, Givenchy and Chanel are second only to the House of Machiavelli in power and status. Streep reportedly modelled her performance in part on Vogue editor Anna Wintour. But I'm not sure anyone reading this gives a fig about Anna Wintour. More importantly, Streep triumphs in the role. Speaking with the bored nonchalance of monarchs, she skewers everyone within hearing distance with low-voiced barbs and hilariously heart-stopping putdowns.

Miranda is happiest, we are told, when everyone around her is "panicked, nauseous and suicidal," and Streep, who has probably met a fair share of Mirandas in her life, takes her measure with precision. A montage in which she dumps her (different) coat and purse on Andy's desk every day, while making a nasty remark or impossible demand is priceless.

Looking like the love child of Paul Schaffer and an ostrich, Tucci is also ablaze as the secretly decent Nigel. And, yes, that is Valentino himself greeting Miranda at his Paris show.

But the film's biggest surprise is the beautiful Hathaway, best known for those subpar "Princes Diaries" comedies, although she stepped out impressively in "Brokeback Mountain." To be sure, she is more convincing as "Glamazon" Andy than as down-home Andy. But when Hathaway slips into that couture, you understand why such clothing is designed in the first place. It's modern-day goddess worship (my apologies to the Vatican).

Rated PG-13. "The Devil Wears Prada" contains profanities.

A full sized glass and fabric divan is one of the unusual works of art to be exhibited at the Art Complex Museum in Duxbury in Clearly Cast, Glass Artists from July 2 to August 27. The substantial collection of cast glass in the museum's collection inspired the exhibit, which promises a look at contemporary glass artists who use various casting methods. In addition, some examples of cast glass from the museum's collection will be on view in the Phoenix Gallery. An opening reception is scheduled for Sunday, July 9, from 1:30 – 3:30 pm. The Art Complex Museum is located at 189 Alden Street in Duxbury. For mor information call 781-934-6634 ext. 12.

A Mazda RX7 spins out of control in "The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift."

New Releases

THE FAST AND THE FURIOUS: TOKYO DRIFT (B)

This third installment of the popular franchise takes its car chases and souped-up engines to the Far East. High school troublemaker Sean (Lucas Black) is shipped to Tokyo to avoid jail time and live with his strict, military officer dad (Brian Goodman). Once there, Sean befriends Twinkie (Bow Wow), an army brat with a pimped-out car, and is soon driving a new set of wheels and getting on the bad side of mafia-affiliated DK (Brian Tee) and falling for his girl, Neela (Nathalie Kelley). Sure, it's not the wittiest, smartest or most memorable piece of cinema. But "The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift" delivers everything it promised: loud music, loud cars and a whole lot of glitz. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

GARFIELD: A TALE OF TWO KITTIES (B-)

Two cats are better than one in "Garfield: A Tale of Two Kitties," which brings Jim Davis' fat cat back to the big screen in a reasonable riff on "The Prince and The Pauper." This time, the action is in London, and Garfield (voiced again by Bill Murray) is recruited to take the place of Prince (voiced by Tim Curry), the king of England's ancient Carlyle Castle, after he's targeted by the greedy, ignored nephew Lord Dargis (Billy Connolly), who can't wait for the cat's death to assume control of the ancient castle and turn it into a high-rise development. (Rated PG) -Stephen Schaefer

THE HEART OF THE GAME (A)

Ward Serrill's emotionally-charged "The Heart of the Game" is a documentary that took seven years to find its ending. Filmed with a grainy, handheld camera, it chronicles the rise of the Roosevelt Roughriders, a Seattle high school girls' basketball team, and its star player, Darnellia Russell. Narrated by Ludacris, "The Heart of the Game" is a surprising little film that inspires, educates and makes us all the happier for having seen it. High school girls' basketball will seem like the greatest game ever played. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

THE KING (B)

Elvis (Gael Garcia Bernal) arrives in Corpus Christi, Texas, in search of Pastor David Sandow (William Hurt), a revered figure in the community. Elvis claims to be the pastor's son, and the religious leader recalls a former life when a Mexican prostitute kept him company. Not surprisingly, he shuns his son. Stubborn and quietly full of sin, Elvis takes a room at a local motel and seduces the pastor's daughter — and his half-sister — Malerie (Pell James). "The King" is so eerie it's hard to decipher the bizarre from the masterfully planned. The film, however flawed, keeps us on our toes. That certainly counts for something. (Not rated) -Chelsea Bain

Ongoing

THE BREAK-UP (C+)

Oversized, overaged frat boy Gary (Vince Vaughn) and his art dealer girlfriend Brooke (Jennifer Aniston) break up but continue to share a condo. In this anti-romantic comedy, tabloid-linked stars Vaughn and Aniston have nowhere to display their chemistry, except in anger. Between the hijinks that ensue as Gary and Brooke try their best to hurt one another, you end up sitting back and checking off the product placements or trying to figure out how many endings the director shot. (Rated PG-13)

BRICK (D)

In this oddball teen noir about a high school drug ring, Brendan Frye (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) is determined to oust head drug pusher, The Pin (Lukas Haas), from his throne after Brandan discovers the body of his ex-girlfriend Emily (Emilie de Ravin) in a gully. Intriguing as the mystery may be, this film leaves something to be desired. "Brick's" cryptic content, jargon-filled speech and visually bland ambience will leave viewers with a sinking feeling. (Rated R) -Tenley Woodman

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

THE DA VINCI CODE (C+)

"The Da Vinci Code," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. The key elements of Dan Brown's fabulously fun novel are all here: Harvard symbologist Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) investigating a 2,000-year-old conspiracy concerning Jesus' true nature; a murder plot involving a psychopathic, albino monk (Paul Bettany); and clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces. But director Ron Howard's film is too long and too stuffed with scholarly pedantry. "The Da Vinci Code" comes off as a book, rather than a movie, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book, at that. (Rated PG-13)

DEEP SEA 3D (C+)

Giant squid, sand sharks and moon jellyfish frolic in 3-D in this escapade narrated by Johnny Depp and Kate Winslet. During the hour, viewers traverse coral reefs, shipwrecks and kelp forests to glimpse the day-to-day life of creatures we normally see on dinner plates laced with bread crumbs, lemon and butter. The film's message — preserve these submerged communities — is important, if a little bland to watch. (Not rated) -Tenley Woodman

DISTRICT B13 (B+)

In this French action flick, street vigilante Leito (David Belle) reluctantly teams up with cop Damien (Cyril Raffaelli) to save Leito's younger sister Lola (Dany Verissimo) from tres bad guy Taha (Bibi Naceri), a drug dealer who has kidnapped Lola and plans to bomb the blighted District 13 neighborhood. Set to an incendiary French hip-hop soundtrack, "District 13" features fight scenes with furiously flying fists, dizzying acrobatics and bizarrely colorful criminal bystanders. This film makes most other American action films look even dumber and less hip than they already did. (Not Rated.)

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

KEEPING UP WITH THE STEINS (C+)

It's the battle of the bar mitzvahs in "Keeping Up with the Steins," as the Fielder family wages war to outdo their rivals, the Stein family, and throw a more lavish party for their son. Filled with mawkish sentimentality, antediluvian Borscht Belt jokes, and a cast of TV actors, "Keeping Up with the Steins" often feels like a lame, big-screen sitcom. (Rated PG-13)

LADY VENGEANCE (A-)

"Lady Vengeance" is the third installment in the acclaimed "Vengeance" trilogy by Korean auteur and master of gory lyricism, Park Chan-wook. The film's heroine, Lee Geum-ja (Lee Young-ae), is released from prison after serving time for a crime she didn't commit. She hatches a complex plot for revenge against Mr. Baek (Choi Min-sik), the true culprit and the person who caused her to lose her infant daughter. Toting a primitive double-barreled pistol, she wades into her task with determination and guts, leaving a trail of brains and dead assassins. But the mystery at the heart of "Lady Vengeance" is Geum-ja herself. Is she an angel or a devil? Mary Poppins or Lizzie Borden? (In Korean with subtitles. (Rated R)

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT (A-)

Mrs. Palfrey (Joan Plowright) moves to London to be near her 26-year-old grandson, who, oddly, doesn't show up. Instead, Mrs. Palfrey persuades aspiring young writer Ludovic Meyer (Rupert Friend) to impersonate her grandson to deflect the attention of busybody hotel residents. A rare friendship develops between the lonely widow and young artist. Brimming with warmth and intelligence, "Mrs. Palfrey" is small film, yet completely delightful. (Not rated)

THE OMEN (C+)

Power-couple Robert (Liev Schreiber) and Katherine Thorn's (Julia Stiles) infant child dies soon after his birth in a Rome hospital. A grief-stricken Robert, at the behest of a priest, agrees to switch the dead child with a newborn whose mother has died. But we soon know the "switched" son is strange because his parents name him Damien and people start getting knocked off in the most gruesome ways imaginable. This remake of the terrific 1976 B-movie has its moments. But it mostly takes everything that was ambiguous and subtle in the original and makes it so obvious that it's often unintentionally funny. (Rated R)

OVER THE HEDGE (B+)

Mischevious raccoon RJ (Bruce Willis) accidentally ruins Vincent the bear's (Nick Nolte) cache of junk food and is given one week to replace it. Buoyed by a group of guileless forest animals, RJ goes "over the hedge" on his quest, and enters the horrific human world of exterminators and McMansions. The often laugh-out-loud action and "Shrek"-like pop culture references make this CGI comedy fun for both kiddies and adults. Rated PG.

A PRAIRIE HOME COMPANION (B+)

An instant cult film, the charming if surprisingly toothless "A Prairie Home Companion" takes Garrison Keillor's enduringly popular Minnesota-based National Public Radio program and transforms it into a Robert Altman film. Keillor plays himself, a singer/host/master of ceremonies on an old-timey radio program. He's joined on stage — and for the most part upstaged — by Altman's cast, including Meryl Streep, Lily Tomlin, John C. Reilly and Lindsay Lohan. Altman's artistic vision is perfectly suited to this backstage comic fable about quirky showbiz characters. But the film is uninspired and conceptually flawed, which is too bad given its genuinely moving valedictory tone. (Rated PG-13)

THE PROPOSITION (B-)

Set in the late 19th century, this Aussie western sets up an epic struggle between civilization, represented by police officer Capt. Morris Stanley (Ray Winstone), and the forces of barbarism, represented by Irish immigrants Arthur Burns (Danny Huston) and brothers Charlie (Guy Pearce) and Mike (Richard Wilson). Though plodding, slow as molasses and ultraviolent, "The Proposition" also boasts magnificent alien-landscape-like photography where heat waves — and the stench — virtually pour off the screen. (Rated R)

THANK YOU FOR SMOKING (A-)

"Thank You For Smoking" is a terrific black comedy about the pitfalls of being the chief spokesman for the tobacco industry. As Nick Naylor, Aaron Eckhart turns in a great performance as an American Everyman subpoenaed to testify before a congressional committee, pursued by a reporter (Katie Holmes) trying to get him to come clean about the industry, and urged by tobacco head honchos (J.K. Simmons and Robert Duvall) to find a solution to smoking's bad image. (Rated R)

WATER (B+)

Important and visually lush, if not great, Deepa Mehta's "Water" tackles a controversial subject: The virtual imprisonment of widows required by fundamentalist Hinduism. Set in 1938 during Gandhi's struggle to loosen the bonds of British imperialism, the film focuses on Chuyia (Sarala), a widowed 8-year-old who is left to live in poverty and wondering, "For how long?" In Hindi with English subtitles. (Rated PG-13)

X-MEN: THE LAST STAND (B-)

Lust, angst and antagonism — as well as Halle Berry, Patrick Stewart, Hugh Jackman and company — return in this lackluster third installment of the "X-Men" series. Shoddy-looking and unfocused dramatic scenes sit between big, expensive, action and special-effects sequences. The film will satisfy die-hard fans. But it should have been so much more. (Rated PG-13)

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like confidence, through our All Kids Can™ program that helps disabled children learn, play, and succeed. Hope, in the form of nearly $8 million raised for ALS research. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live.

Fire chief to end career

Lincoln plans to retire in fall

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After almost four decades on the Cohasset Fire Department, Chief Roger Lincoln has announced he will be retiring, effective Oct. 29. The Board of Selectmen made the announcement at its Monday meeting and said Lincoln will be greatly missed.

"I found Roger Lincoln to be the consummate professional. His knowledge and experience in fire and emergency medical services is unsurpassed. But, what was especially impressive about Roger was his love for and dedication to the Town of Cohasset itself," said Town Manager Bill Griffin in an interview Wednesday. "More than any other fire chief I have ever worked with, Roger has always been willing come in to man the station during an

Town land could be a drain

Selectmen hold off on restriction

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen would like to wait before it imposes a permanent conservation restriction on town property located adjacent to the Cook Estate. While it said it does not favor building on the town's property, it does not want to rule out the possibility of allowing the land to become part of a drainage system for a developer looking to build affordable housing on the Cook property.

But for those residents, who voted in favor of imposing the restriction during the December 2005 Special Town Meeting, the time to preserve the land is now, as the sooner the better when it comes to protecting the town's drinking water. The town's nine-acre parcel of land abuts Peppermint Brook, which runs to Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply.

At the board's Monday meeting, residents Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, and Jim Shipsky, 58 Doane St., both proponents of the article, came before the board asking it to carry out the wishes of the people. While the vote in the affirmative cannot mandate the board place a conservation

Jack and company are back

During the Summer of 1986, literally thousands of spectators flocked to Cohasset to watch the filming of The Witches of Eastwick in the hope of getting a glimpse of one the stars, Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon or Michelle Pfeiffer.

As you will see in this week's special edition of the Eastwick Word that is included with this copy of your Cohasset Mariner, people were not disappointed. In addition to seeing movie stars, dozens of lucky South Shore residents of all ages also appeared as "extras" in the movie; they were selected out of more than 4,000 who answered the casting call.

If you were living in Cohasset that summer, we hope you will enjoy this 20-year "Eastwick" anniversary walk down memory lane. If you are new to the area, you should find this slice of local history entertaining.

In addition to Cohasset, scenes were also filmed near Damon's Point in Marshfield, Hingham's Old Ship Church Parish House, and at the Quarterdeck in Scituate Harbor.

By the way, the Eastwick Word was the local paper at which Sukie Ridgemont (Michelle Pfeiffer) was the local columnist.

Minors have their drinks on the rocks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The warm weather of summer seems to have increased the amount of underage drinking taking place in town. During the week of the Fourth of July, there were seven minors caught in possession of alcohol, some of whom were arrested.

On Wednesday, July 5, an officer on patrol with the department's motorcycle came across youths drinking on the rocks on Lighthouse Lane on Government Island. All three were underage and in possession of alcohol. "They all had identification on them, and we seized the alcohol," said Police Chief James Hussey, adding all three were summonsed on charges of being minors in possession of alcohol.

Hussey said while the three were not arrested, whenever minors are found with alcohol, some kind of enforcement action is taken. "Sometimes we call the parents, sometimes they are summonsed, and in some cases we make arrests, especially if there are motor vehicles involved," said Hussey.

Friday July 7, youths were found drinking at the South Shore Music Circus. Three Marshfield minors were arrested for being in possession of alcohol. Hussey said because there were motor vehicles were involved, the minors were arrested. "In a situation like that, we will usually make an arrest" to be sure no one gets back into the car and drives off, he said.

A fourth youth was also found drunk at the Music Circus. She was found throwing up between two cars in the parking lot, and due to the fact that she was not in possession of alcohol, but was obviously drunk, she could not be arrested, but was taken into protective custody. "We do it for her own protection," said Hussey, adding she was later released to a responsible adult.

Fireworks in the Village

On Tuesday, July 4, a Cohasset police officer observed a person shooting fireworks in front of Tedeschi's Food Shops in the Village, as well as other portions of South Main Street. The person got into his car and drove off, and the officer followed him and pulled him over.

"The officer recovered fireworks from the car and discovered the person driving had a suspended license," said Police Chief James Hussey, adding the driver was then arrested and charged with operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license, attempt to commit a crime with the destruction of property (as some of the fireworks were shot at the front door of Tedeschi's), disorderly conduct, and unlawful possession of fireworks.

Upon further investigation, the officer found the underage passenger in the car had been drinking. She was taken into protective custody and the driver was then also charged with furnishing liquor to a minor.

Shoplifting

A shoplifting case was reported at Stop & Shop Thursday, July 6. An 82-year-old man from Scituate was seen loading a large plant from outside the store into his black Mercedes. The man then went into the store to shop and managers kept an eye on him to see if he would pay for the plant at the checkout. The store had previously had issues with the man.

Police Chief James Hussey said the man did purchase some items, but not the plant. Managers at the store called the police who responded to the scene before the man made it to his car. Not only was the plant stolen, the man had stolen items in his pockets, police said.

Due to the prior experience with the man, Stop & Shop decided to press charges and he was arrested. As his car was being towed, stolen items from Shaw's supermarket up the road were also found. "He ended up with two counts of shoplifting," said Hussey.

Hussey said the shoplifting was not due to a lack of funds. "He had plenty of money in his pocket to pay for it," as the man was carrying more than $100.

The man has already been to court, which issued a stay-away order for both supermarkets. The order is stronger than a no trespassing order the police department can issue, which can cause an arrest for coming onto the property. The man was also required to pay for the court costs and pay restitution to the supermarkets.

Stolen car

At roughly 2 a.m. Friday July 7, a Cohasset police officer on patrol near Bayside Boatworks on Route 3A near the Scituate border, saw a group of youths in a vehicle. Police Chief James Hussey said the situation seemed suspicious and the officer turned around and approached the vehicle. All four youths took off on foot, abandoning the car.

The owner of the truck was contacted and he replied he had not given permission for anyone to take his truck. "At that point, I don't think he realized it had been taken," said Hussey. The state police were called and it used its K-9 unit to sniff out the youths in the woods.

Two of the four were found in the woods and the police were able to obtain the names of the other two youths involved. The two youths found in the woods were arrested on charges of larceny of a motor vehicle and the two others were summonsed on the same charges. Hussey said the owner of the truck is the grandfather of one of the youths involved, which means there is a good chance the charges will be lessened to unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Truck hits wires

A large tree removal truck was traveling south on Route 3A Monday, July 3 when it hit a low-hanging wire with one of its pieces of machinery. Police Chief James Hussey said the wire was a telephone wire and was pulled completely off the pole. Verizon was called on to the scene and "they repaired it fairly quickly."

Slap in the face

Two Cohasset adult males got into an altercation at Tedeschi's Food Shops on South Main Street in the Village Tuesday, July 4. Police Chief James Hussey said the two men knew each other and were arguing about money being owed. The Tedeschi's employee called the police, reporting the altercation as well as the fact he had been threatened. The police, fire trucks and ambulance responded to the call, but no one was treated.

"The person who was slapped didn't want to press charges. It actually ended in a handshake," said Hussey.

Municipal Parking Lot construction update

The drainage project currently taking place in the municipal parking lot behind the South Main Street shops will be going on for roughly the next four to six weeks. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he was told by Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan that all water runoff in the parking lot will drain into the James Brook culvert and a venturi is in the process of being installed. A venturi is a device which is similar to a funnel. As water flows down the venturi, the swirling action helps separate the water from the sediment, decreasing the amount of solids flowing into the brook.

Dormitzer said the town has also proposed grinding down the parking lot to prepare it for paving in one day, beginning early in the morning and finishing up at night. He said he was not sure what the paving schedule would be, but completing the grading phase of the project in one day would cut down on construction time, which would benefit the Village merchants. Dormitzer said the town had sent a letter to the construction company asking that Village construction stop until the fall, but was told there would be an additional cost to the town for delaying the project.

"Do you want, as a group, to be the leaders? If not, the selectmen will step up and do it."
— Jim Hardy, Mass. Assoc. of School Committees

While there is an "I" in committee, this week the school board was counseled in the importance of acting like a team and showing united leadership.

Feeling as if they needed some guidance on their role and responsibilities, members of the School Committee asked Jim Hardy of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees to hold a workshop Tuesday, July 11. Discussion focused not only on the role of the board, but its duties in conjunction with dealing with those of the superintendent and the Board of Selectmen.

"There are many pressures. They're coming at us from all angles and we're trying to solve the problems of the schools while keeping focused on what we've been elected to do," said School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy. She said having a clear understanding of what its charge should be would help it interact with other boards positively.

Member Rick Flynn said currently, part of the frustration being felt by the board is an "intimidation from the Board of Selectmen that we should be doing things differently." He said the selectmen continually ask questions of the School Committee and when given the answers, the selectmen tend to want to "impart their wisdom on it."

Hardy said part of the problem could be — judging from the body language of School Committee members — they do not seem to be operating as one cohesive unit of leaders with a firm charge. He said naturally, people gravitate toward leadership and if the School Committee cannot demonstrate it, there are others who will step up to do it for them, whether it be the Board of Selectmen or residents who feel they could get the job done better. "Do you want, as a group, to be the leaders? If not, the selectmen will step up and do it," he said.

"That's what they want to do," said MacCarthy.

Hardy also reminded the board what people see on television and at the meetings and how the committee acts becomes their impression of the entire school system. "If you're functioning as a board, it's OK to disagree, just don't be disagreeable," he said, adding the level of respect between members should be increased.

Having served both as a selectmen and as a member of a school committee, Hardy sympathized with the board's feelings to a certain extent.

"You have a charge and you are the governmental agency which governs the education of students in Cohasset. The selectmen have their own responsibilities, but they are under a different set of statutes. As much as they might want to, they cannot run the schools or infringe upon your authority," he said, adding the School Committee has a big role to play in town. "You are in charge of the schools. The superintendent works for you," he said.

With that being said, Flynn pointed out while they may be the "boss" of the superintendent, he tends to wonder why the board should not defer some matters to members of the school administration as they are the experts, rather than give orders. "I never took education classes and we have a superintendent and principals with doctorates. Where do you draw the line? Where do you give latitude? Collectively should we adopt a position to be micromanagers or have faith in the people employed by us?" he asked.

Once the committee decides on its priorities, Hardy said the superintendent can then take over and bring the school district where it needs to be in the best way she sees fit.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz said one of the major priorities of the board would be to get Cohasset schools up to the status of being among the best in the state. "There's no reason why you shouldn't strive to be at the top," he said, adding it is the job of the committee to proactively seek ways to bring the district forward.

Committee member Steve Fusco pointed out the board needs to build trust back up in the community because like it or not, "We do have a problem with the public," he said, adding people are not getting the messages the committee is sending out.

With the differing opinions, MacCarthy said the entire board hasn't been supportive of what has taken place at the schools. "It's hard to advocate if you don't fully believe in what the district is doing," she said, adding the entire School Committee needs to get behind the superintendent.

Jamie Williams said the committee needs to step up its efforts to get the good news about the schools into the community and celebrate its accomplishments. "Our marketing strategy for selling overrides has failed two years in a row," she said, adding it is time for a different approach. She said if the town sees all the schools have been able to accomplish with very limited funding, they may be inclined to give more money in the future to see what other great things can be accomplished.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said all the School Committee meetings are televised, the budget is on the Web site and there should be no reason people feel they are not informed.

But Fusco said sometimes the board overestimates the number of people who read the local news or watch the meetings on television, and it is the committee's responsibility to step up its personal efforts. "They don't have it. The message isn't getting there," he said, adding there are good things going on at the schools, which people are not hearing about, and the School Committee needs to do a better job of sharing that information.

Using the example of full-day kindergarten, Slanetz said if people were aware of the statistics of how many students are reaching certain levels of proficiency, they would be less likely to think of it as a day-care service and more of an academic benefit.

Walsh said every Osgood parent knows how successful the full-day kindergarten program is and that a good majority of students were writing paragraphs at the end of the year and reading well. Williams, Slanetz and Fusco all said they have children at Osgood and were not aware of the program's success to that extent. They agreed messages like that need to be brought to the attention of the public.

Walsh said in putting that message out, "We don't want it to sound like we don't need the money."

But, Fusco pointed out, "If we take a defensive posture, they'll think we have something to hide."

No budget link this fiscal year

Members of the School Committee asked MASC member Jim Hardy whether it is common practice for schools and towns to have their budgets linked via software. The Advisory Committee had asked the schools and town to allow their budgets to be networked together but the School Committee feels the request has come due to a lack of confidence.

"It all goes back to mistrust."
— School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy.

Hardy said it is not common to have the two budgets linked, adding until the law changes, "All they (the town) get is the bottom line." However, he did say that for larger cities with different forms of local government, such as those with mayors, the budgeting process is different and both sides would be linked as the mayor oversees both. In Cohasset, it makes sense for both the town and schools "to have total fiscal autonomy," he said, and added he doesn't see why they should be linked or why anyone would want that.

"No one's saying why, they just want to see it," said School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro.

"It all goes back to mistrust," said Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy.

However, in an interview Wednesday, Director of Finance Michael Buckley said he has been working in Cohasset for the past 15 years and for the first 10 he was here, the school and town budgets were linked. He said when Guido Risi was the School Business Manager, the town had access to the school's budget numbers and things ran smoothly. However, Risi left his position in 2001 and Ivan Klimko, hired by then Superintendent Edward Malvey, created a separate charter of accounts, which Buckley could not duplicate on his end. "It's been the same ever since," he said.

Buckley said currently, twice per week the schools and town have a diskette transfer, to make it possible to do the payroll. He said the school department manually enters information into the Pond Street database and then a diskette and six pieces of paper are brought to Town Hall and Buckley then uploads the information to his computer and completes the transaction. He said the same thing happens whenever the town has to pay a bill related to the schools. "I've learned to live with it, but the Advisory Committee asked us to recombine," he said.

Buckley said while in the past the schools have not had access to the town's budget numbers, this time around he asked for software that would allow the schools to have a read-only view of the town's budget. He said if at any point members of the school department would like to look into how much is being spent on light, electricity, salaries, or anything else in the budget, it would all be available at their fingertips.

Buckley said the window of opportunity to merge the two databases has passed for this year. He said the only time a town can switch over its database is at the close of the fiscal year, and now that the new fiscal year has begun, changing anything over will have to wait.

School Committe wants more information on fiscal 2006 budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Fiscal 2006 came to a close June 30, but some, including members of the School Committee, still have questions regarding what was spent.

While the School Committee voted 4-1 to approve the district's second to last Warrant, or school financial report, of the fiscal year at its Tuesday July 11 meeting, Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said when the Warrant is presented for the last time — detailing end-of-the year figures — he would like to see specifically where the school district has surplus funds and where the deficits are.

Slanetz also said he would like to see a list of what has been pre-paid for fiscal 2007 using left over fiscal 2006 funds. "Where did the money to pre-pay come from?" he asked, as there is roughly $61,000, which was left over and has already been spent. School districts are allowed to pre-pay two things using left-over funds: special education tuition and supplies and materials. Supplies and materials must be ordered and delivered to the school by June 30.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh explained in the fiscal 2006 budget, there was money left over in the regular transportation line item and grant funding from the METCO program paid for a portion of salaries, which freed up money in the salary line item.

"Don't we have to approve that?" asked member Jamie Williams of using money from transportation to pre-purchase materials for the next year. Walsh replied because the board did not adopt a policy, which says the superintendent needs School Committee approval to make the transfer, it does not. At one point the board had discussed adopting such a policy, but it was never adopted. Therefore the superintendent can move money between line items as she sees fit.

Williams noted the board never took a vote to approve pre-paying using the left-over funds. However, Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the board gave the consensus it wanted to use leftover funds to purchase supplies for the following year. [Member of the Massachusetts Association of School Committees Jim Hardy hosted a workshop for the School Committee after its regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday and advised the board begin taking votes rather than getting a consensus].

Williams said she had thought the board would use money from the foundation reserve grant it was awarded by the state to make its purchases. "In the 2-1/2 years I've been on this board, I've never been able to get my hands around the budget as it moves forward," she said, adding she would like to be kept up-to-date on expenditures to ensure she has all the necessary information when budget discussions heat up in October.

Slanetz added if there are surpluses in certain line items, he would like to know how much and which items they are because they may have been over-budgeted from the start and could be reduced in the fiscal 2007 budget. "Tell us where the money is coming from," he said.

In a related note, School Committee member Steve Fusco has refused to sign the Warrant since late May, stating he feels the information being provided by the school department is not adequate and he does not feel comfortable approving it. He said he would like to see an accounting for each line item, stating what that item's total budget is, how much has been spent to date, and how much is left to spend.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he has been working with someone to install a new software package which would allow for a new format for the Warrant, and that could be in place as early as mid-August.

By the numbers

Fiscal 2004 budget $11,418,419
•Includes $350,000 override passed April 2003.

Fiscal 2005 budget $11,943,800
• Includes $400,000 override passed April 2004.
• Does not include $160,500 added at December 2004 Town Meeting.
• Does not include $200,000 added at April 2005 Town Meeting.
• Does not include $205,000 state Foundation Reserve grant.
• In September 2005, the school department agrees to turn back $109,000.

Fiscal 2006 budget $12,344,382
• Town went for a $400,000 override in April 2005 and lost.

Fiscal 2007 budget $12,714,714
• Town went for $725,000 and $1.495 million overrides and both lost.

Fiscal 2006 budget timeline

• In April 2004, the town passed a $400,000 override for fiscal 2005. That July, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh came on board in Cohasset. In the fall, Walsh announced the fiscal 2005 budget had been underbudgeted by roughly $500,000, and the schools would need extra funds on top of the override funds to make ends meet.

• At the December 2004 Special Town Meeting, $160,500 ($93,500 for utilities and $67,000 for unemployment) was put into the reserve fund to cover costs associated with fiscal 2005.

• At the April 2005 Annual Town Meeting, $100,000 was transferred into the school budget, and an additional $100,000 was transferred into the reserve fund for any additional costs that might occur. The school department also went for another $400,000 override for fiscal 2006, but this time it did not pass muster with voters.

• A few months into fiscal 2006 (September of calendar year 2005), Walsh announced the school department had $190,652 left over from fiscal 2005, of which it used roughly $80,000 to pre-pay special education tuitions for fiscal 2006.

• In October 2005, the school department received a state Foundation Reserve Award in the amount of $205,000. The money was awarded as a result of significant reductions in state aid. This money was added to the $21,000 it already had from the previous year.

• The school department turned back $109,000 at the December 2005 Special Town Meeting, which was put back into the reserve fund. At that same meeting, $285,000 was taken out of the fiscal 2006 school budget, due to the failed override at the April Town Meeting (That year the town voted to pass the budget with the override figure included in the budget. When the override failed at the ballot box, it required the budget go back for another Town Meeting vote after cuts were made to balance the figures).

• At the April 2006 Annual Town Meeting the school department went for an override again for the fiscal 2007 budget, this time with two choices: $725,000 or $1.495 million. Both figures failed at the ballot box.

• Currently the school department is reporting it has $61,000 left over from fiscal 2006, which it used to pre-pay special education tuition as well as some supplies and materials for fiscal 2007. The schools are also asking for $109,000 from the town's reserve fund to help pay a special education tuition bill from fiscal 2006, which has been incurred due to the schools' losing an appeal.

COOL TIMES

Hello Cohasset, is everyone having a fantastic but really quick summer? I cannot believe we are in the middle of July already. Anyways, enjoy each day as it happens and make sure to have fun with all the little things that take place as well. It all adds up to some really cool times.

Thursday afternoons we have the Farmers Market to enjoy, the first weekend of August is the Cinderella show being put on by the Cohasset Dramatic Club Summer Theater program and the week of Aug. 7 has The Music Lady here in town (call 781-383-2211 for information) giving classes and a fun-filled Family Concert for all to enjoy. It is all looking great.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy Birthday wishes go out to Kyle Burke and a belated one to Kyle's brother David. Kyle is turning 8 this week and David recently turned 6. Happy Birthday to both of you on your very special days.

ACADEMIC HONORS

Congratulations go out to Lawrence Academy junior Christopher Roy, who was named to the academic honor roll for the spring trimester. Christopher is the son of Peter Roy of Cohasset and Susan Roy-Reposa of Hingham. Super news, Christopher.

BENEFIT RAFFLE

Here is a wonderful way to make a donation and have a chance of winning something really nice. For $5 a ticket, you can take a chance on winning the gift basket with products donated by Rooms in Bloom valued at $500. The raffle basket includes a set of Simon Pearce candlesticks, a silver custom Children's Hospital bracelet, a Reed and Barton vase, a Lunt serving tray, a Vietri pesce dish, and a Cohasset by the Sea sign. The raffle basket items are displayed in the front window and chances can be purchased at Rooms in Bloom in Cohasset Village until closing on Friday, July 21. All proceeds will go directly to Children's Hospital and the drawing will take place at the Tournament Reception party on July 21 at the Lightkeepers. (You do not have to be present to win!) Whether you buy one or one hundred, all donations will be appreciated! Thanks for helping out.

ROTARY PRESIDENT

Hat's off to Christopher Roy on earning academic honors at Lawrence Academy.

HIGH HONORS

Cameron Cunningham attended The Master's School in West Simsbury, Conn. for his sophomore year. He made the High Honor Roll list for 4th Quarter and Semester 2.

He made Honors for the entire year. Cameron's mom Sue and dad, Bob are very proud of this Cam, super work.

Elisa Ninde Jerome, daughter of Jane P. Ninde has recently been named to the Spring Semester dean's list at Saint Joseph's University in Philadelphia where she is majoring in finance and international business with a concentration in Spanish. At the end of the month Elisa will be traveling with fellow students to El Salvador with the Christians for Peace in El Salvador organization of Boston.

The trip will focus on the current economic situation of El Salvador and how students at Jesuit universities can help. Elisa and her classmates are trying to gather sports uniforms, small toys and books to bring with them and would appreciate your donations. She is interested in talking to anyone who is interested in her trip or would like her to bring anything to El Salvador for them. You can email her at:

Elisa.NindeJerome@sju.edu.

KEITH AND THE POPS

The Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra and conductor Keith Lockhart will return to the South Shore Music Circus on Saturday, July 29th in a concert to benefit the exhibition and education programs of the South Shore Art Center. There is nothing like hearing Boston's "nation's orchestra" in the intimacy of the Music Circus! This year, the Pops will be joined by the awesome a cappella of Rockapella, who performed at the Esplanade on July 4th to the delight of all, in a concert of 70s music. In addition to movie and TV themes (including Star Wars and Rocky!), there will be a Paul Simon medley and a 70s sing-along with songs such as Celebrate and American Pie.

Tickets are available at The Music Circus Box Office and special concert packages including premium seating and a reception with Keith Lockhart are available through the Art Center. Don't miss out on one of the best night's of the summer!

IN THE ARMY

Army Spec. Josue P. Ruelas graduated from the Multiple Launch Rocket System Operations/Fire Direction Specialist Advanced Individual Training (AIT) course at Fort Sill, Lawton, Okla. The course is designed to train the service member to record and transmit firing data using fire direction systems and voice radio; operate fire direction system, platoon leaders digital message device, and multiple rocket launch system communications equipment; participate in gathering of operations and intelligence data; plot by using capability charts, friendly and enemy situation maps; and record ammunition expenditure, equipment serviceability, situation, firing point, target and mission reports.

Josue is the son of Victor M. and Silvia Ruelas of King Street, Cohasset.

PRESIDENT'S LIST

Douglas Huntington Pearce, son of Peter and Ansley Pearce of Cohasset, has been named to the president's list for the spring 2006 semester at Elon University in Elon, N.C. To earn this honor, Douglas could have no grade lower than an A-. Great work!

BU GRAD

Hats off to Malcolm J. Stansell of Cohasset on being named to the dean's list at Boston University for the spring term.

JEN IS 40!

Lordy, lordy — look who's 40! Our very own Mariner Around Town columnist Jen Piepenbrink's big day is Monday (July 17). Her husband, Bob, her children Daniel, Callie and Cody, and all of her friends love her a whole lot! So do we here at the Mariner. All the best, Jen!

SKIDMORE HONORS

Taylor O'Brien, Class of 2007 at Skidmore, earned highest honors for the spring semester; Taylor is the daughter of Emmett and Susan O'Brien of Jerusalem Road. Highest honors are awarded for a quality point ratio of 3.670 or more out of a possible 4.0. Well done!

That is it for this week. Send in all of your news no llater than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

SHARING GREEK FOOD AND FESTIVITIES

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Greece is more than 4,000 miles away from Cohasset, but it won't feel like it during the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church's Taverna 2006.

With Greek food and pastries, live music, dancing, boutiques and children's activities, during the Taverna —which will take place July 14, 15 and 16 — traveling down the road to the Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham will seem like traveling to another country.

"The Panagia community is very fortunate that the brothers of the Glastonbury Abbey have graciously allowed us to use their beautiful facilities since the church is under construction and also lacks the space and parking facilities to accommodate large groups," said Ed Lofgren, president of the Board of Stewards. "We could not undertake an event of this magnitude without their generosity and we are very thankful to them."

The community of the Panagia Church is small and includes roughly 250 people. One of the Taverna's coordinators Marlena Alex said to undertake a Taverna of this size and duration takes the whole community, especially when the church does not yet have a community center of its own, as it is still under construction.

"The ladies have been baking for weeks, and Harry (Athas, executive chef for the Taverna) has single-handedly made all the pastitsio and moussaka," she said.

In addition to the cooking, Athas, a Hull resident, will provide traditional Greek dancing music as he plays with his band, Asteria. Additional music will be provided my Zach and Dan Zotos of Scituate, who will be accompanied by Anthony Pappas of Marshfield.

Just as was done during the "A Taste of Greece" festival, during which the church partnered with the Our World museum to provide Greek food and fun for the South Shore, the menu will include a wide variety of dishes including: filet and shrimp kabobs, moussaka (baked eggplant and beef casserole topped with a cheese béchamel sauce), pastitsio (baked macaroni and seasoned ground beef casserole topped with a cheese béchamel sauce), roasted lamb, dolmathes (grape leaves stuffed with meat and rice), spanakopita (spinach and feta pie baked in filo), loucanico (sausage seasoned with orange peel), and the ever-popular gyro (blend of seasoned lamb and beef, stuffed into a pita and topped with diced tomatoes, onions, and a cucumber and garlic sauce).

Desserts will include baklava, koulourakia (crispy cookies that are wonderful with a cup of coffee), kourambiethes (shortbread cookies topped with confectioner's sugar), melomakarona (semi-soft honey-dipped cookies sprinkled with walnuts), galactoboureko (custard baked in filo and topped with a honey syrup), mille feuille (layers of puff pastry laid on top of each other with a sweet patissiere cream filling and dusted with powdered sugar), and loukoumades (deep-fried fritter puffs topped with a honey syrup and sprinkled with cinnamon). Finally, baklava sundaes (chopped baklava topped with vanilla ice cream) will be a sure to cure the summer heat.

To add to the festival atmosphere, there will be a moonwalk and other activities for the children.

Taverna 2006 will take place at the Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham Friday July 14 from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., Saturday July 15 from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday July 16 from noon until 8 p.m. The event will feature traditional Greek food and pastries, live music, dancing, children's activities, boutiques, Greek folk dancing and more. Admission and parking are free, and seniors will receive a 10% discount on food.

MAKE YOUR OWN MOUSSAKA

1 (1 lb) eggplant
2 large cloves garlic
2 lb. ground lamb
1 tsp. oregano
1 (16 oz) can whole tomatoes, drained
1 tsp. allspice
fi cup dry red wine
1/3 cup parmesan cheese
fi cup tomato paste
4 Tbs. olive oil
3 eggs
/cup parsley
1 cup chopped onion
salt and pepper to taste

Bechamel Sauce:
4 Tbs. Butter
fi tsp. salt
1 onion, chopped
dash of pepper
8 Tbs. Flour
3 fi cups milk

Melt butter; add flour and slowly add milk. Stir constantly, cooking over a low flame until thickened. When thick and smooth, add onion, salt and pepper and remove from the heat.

Peel and cut eggplant crosswise into /-inch thick slices. Sprinkle with salt and let bleed for 1 hour. Brown the meat in 2 tablespoons of olive oil. Remove and drain. Saute (in 2 tablespoons of olive oil) the onion for 5 minutes. Add the meat, tomatoes, wine, tomato paste, and all the seasonings. Let it summer for 15 to 20 minutes or until thickened. Cool and stir in one cup béchamel sauce and/cup parsley.

Dry the eggplant slices with a paper towel. Brush with oil and broil, 4 inches from the heat for 3 minutes. Cover the bottom of the pan with a layer of the slices. Sprinkle with parmesan cheese, and top with fi of the meat mixture. Repeat, layering as above. Cover with a final layer of eggplant. Beat the eggs into the remaining béchamel sauce. Pour over the eggplant and sprinkle with parmesan cheese. Bake 45 to 50 minutes until golden brown.

Selectmen won't restrict Cook-adjacent town parcel restriction on the property, it authorized the board to do so. Both said it is very important to protect the town's drinking water supply and much money has been spent to date to acquire land in the watershed for water protection purposes. It therefore makes sense to place the restriction on the property, which the town already owns, they said.

But the board was hesitant to place the restriction on the property, not knowing the fate of the Cook property, located adjacent to the town land on Sohier Street. The town had worked with the heirs of the Jane Bancroft Cook Estate for roughly three years to build affordable senior housing on the combined Cook and town parcels of land. However, wastewater issues first forced a reduction of scope for the project, and then forced the project to fall through. The town would still like to see affordable housing built on the property by a private developer, if possible, and if using a portion of the town-owned land can provide a wastewater solution, the town would be willing to help, selectmen said.

"I'd very much like to protect the land, but I'd like to keep that ace up my sleeve," said Selectman Gary Vanderweil. He said he has heard there are a few developers who have shown interest in building on the Cook property and "If they needed to do something over the property line, I'd like to allow it," he said, reiterating that does not mean he wants to see the town's property developed.

Selectman Rob Spofford agreed and said it would be a shame to lose out on the possibility of gaining some affordable housing for the town if a developer needs 30,15, or even 10 feet to make it happen. "I do support open space, but I think we have to tread lightly," he said.

Vanderweil added, "Maybe it would be a rain garden going in up there to help get rid of the nitrogen," in the water which flows into Peppermint Brook. With a conservation restriction, the land must remain open space in perpetuity.

However, Shipsky pointed out, when private developers come before the planning board looking for a special permit, they are asked to provide adequate drainage on their property for their project. "Abutters don't help out. Why would we help an unknown developer with an unknown project?" he asked.

Quigley added she has spoken informally with a couple of developers who told her they would be able to build a project using only the Cook property. "Why does the town need to subsidize a private developer?" she asked, adding, "Every other developer has to deal with the property on their own."

"This could set a bizarre precedent," said Shipsky.

Selectman Fred Koed said he believed the board would only agree to help out a project if it would benefit the common good, such as providing affordable housing, which the town desperately needs. "We wouldn't do this for a regular subdivision," he said, adding if the town could gain five more units of affordable housing for a few feet of its land, the deal would be worth it.

But Quigley said while she supports affordable housing and it is important, "I don't think it's more important than protecting the town's water supply." She added she had letters from the Water Commission, Open Space Committee, Conservation Commission, Planning Board, Board of Health, and Water Resources Protection Committee which all support placing the conservation restriction on the land.

While the board said it was not ready to take a vote that night, Dormtizer assured Quigley before the end of his term in 2007, he would bring the issue to a vote. "You're going to get this at some point or another, but we need to have a common agreement," he said, adding perhaps Town Counsel can get involved and draft a restriction that would somehow incorporate a portion of the land now, followed by the rest of the land at another point if it is not needed by a developer. In the future, depending on whether developers come forward to build on the land or not, placing the restriction on the land could be a much easier decision.

Town property summary

Location: The town's nine acres are located north of Route 3A and southeast of Deer Hill and the Cook Estate. The Stop and Shop plaza on Route 3A is located southwest of the town's parcel.

Water: A perennial stream (locally known as Peppermint Brook) drains the site. The stream is a tributary of Lily Pond, which serves as the town's drinking water supply.

Vegetation: A mature deciduous forest consisting primarily of red oak, red maple, black birch and white ash covers more than half the site. Wetlands (deciduous wooded swamp) and a potential vernal pool occur on the southern half of the site. Vernal pools serve as critical breeding habitat for certain wildlife species such as wood frogs, spotted salamanders and some invertebrate species. A portion of the northeast section of the parcel is brushy due to past disturbance from test pitting. The remaining sections of the site consist of undisturbed native vegetation.

Wildlife: The site provides cover, feeding and breeding habitat for local resident wildlife. In addition, naturally vegetated habitat, such as that existing on the site, provides important resting and "refueling" areas for migrant birds passing through the area, en route to breeding grounds elsewhere in the region. The National Environmental Health Surveillance Program has identified the property as a Priority Rare Special Habitat, due to known occurrences of rare species listed by the state as endangered, threatened or species of special concern.

Surroundings: The site adjoins additional town-owned land located north and northeast of the site (south of the Deer Hill and Osgood elementary schools). The town-owned land is forested and complements the naturally vegetated land occurring on the site. The Trustees of Reservations' 824-acre Whitney-Thayer Woods Reservation and the recently acquired 100-acre "Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area" are located a little more than 1,000 feet southwest of the site.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln discusses strategy with firefighter Randy Rosano during a two-alarm fire at 100 Pond Street in April, 2004. Lincoln announced his plans to retire this week.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln to retire in October

emergency, or to drive the truck, or to even go to a neighboring community and provide direct services during a mutual aid situation. I will miss him and the community will miss him."

As a member of the fire department for 37 years, Lincoln has served in the rank of firefighter, captain, and for the past 13 years as chief of the department. "He always discharged his responsibilities with the interest of the town of Cohasset and its residents in mind. He will be sorely missed," said Griffin.

In a letter to the board, Lincoln explained while serving the citizens of Cohasset has been a "most rewarding experience, the time has arrived to move on." He added, "I want you to know what a pleasure it has been working with you and I look forward to working with you through the transition period."

Lincoln is a graduate of the Cohasset High School Class of 1965, and holds an associate's degree in fire science from Massasoit Community College. Today, he is a Brewster Road resident, who became the town's first local chief in a decade when he took over at the post in 1993. Not since former Chief Charles Piepenbrink served the town had the fire chief been from Cohasset.

When Piepenbrink retired in 1982, Lincoln served a 10-month stint as acting fire chief, and actually applied for and was offered the position. However, he declined the offer due to the fact that at that point, the chief's position had just been taken out of civil service. At that time, Lincoln's two sons were about to enter high school and he didn't think a 3-year contract provided enough security. He therefore chose to return to his civil service rank of captain and Martin Dooley was hired. Following Dooley came Daniel Brock and John Nadeau, and all three were either from out-of-town or out-of-state.

"He always discharged his responsibilities with the interest of the town of Cohasset and its residents in mind. He will be sorely missed."

—Town Manager Bill Griffin

When Nadeau departed in the summer of 1992, Lincoln once again stepped up to serve as acting chief. Once again he applied for the position and this time was offered the position and accepted. For lack of a better word, Lincoln said it was a better "gamble" to take the position at that time, due to the fact that his children were grown. He had also served as a captain since 1976 and felt it was time to make the move.

When Lincoln was hired as chief, members of the fire chief search subcommittee, which consisted of then selectmen Merle Brown and Jane Goedecke, narrowed the field from 35 applicants down to five. They said none of the other finalists were of the same caliber as Lincoln, who was unanimously appointed by selectmen.

"No other candidates were close enough to the winning candidate to make it worth the selectmen's time and the candidates' time," Goedecke said at the time. "The subcommittee felt it was an easy decision and recommended the board interview just one."

Griffin said Lincoln's departure is a major development for the fire department as the town is currently in the process of forming a fire services task force, charged with scrutinizing every aspect of the fire department budget. With the failed override this year, every budget will be broken down line by line to ensure the town is getting the services it expects for the money being spent. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the amount of data Lincoln has collected over the years has been invaluable to the board and will continue to be extremely helpful. "His reports are wonderfully detailed," he said, and will surely be an asset during the budget review process. "He will be missed."

The Board of Selectmen will begin discussing the selection process for a new chief at an upcoming meeting. Under the Town Manager Act, Town Manager Bill Griffin will be responsible for appointing a new chief.

COHASSET'S WEEK

New cable advisory committee members

At its Monday meeting the Board of Selectmen appointed Paul Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road and Pam Fredericks, 18 Pleasant St., to the Cable Advisory Committee. Carlson has lived in town 33 years and said he was one of the first cable customers in town. As a financial analyst, he said he has had the opportunity to analyze cable stocks in the past, and hopes to put that experience to good use in the committee. He said he looks forward to working with other members of the committee to get the best possible cable service for the town.

Fredericks has lived in town eight years and said her background is in technology and computer security. She said with so much new technology coming down the pipeline, such as the conversion of television and the Internet, there will be many security and privacy issues for the town to face, which is where her expertise will come in handy.

Carlson and Fredericks will join Pat Martin, 169 Linden Drive, and Stephen Oronte, 2 Bound Brook Lane, on the committee. Martin is the co-host of "Our Town," the town's local cable access show, and has been working with both Comcast and the town's local Comcast Access Coordinator, Evelyn Burke since May 2005. She is currently one of six people in Cohasset "certified" by Comcast to use their equipment and film events on its behalf. For the past eight years, Oronte has run organizations and worked with technologies that are at the center of IP convergence, and he is completely familiar with the business models of the telephone, cable and Internet providers. He also works with and understands the implications of Municipal Wi-Fi and various Wi-Fi, Wi-Max, ubiquitous and pervasive network technologies.

Gardeners sought to plant median island

MBTA train crossing work is complete on North Main Street and the road is once again open to the public. The Board of Selectmen is now looking for volunteers to adopt the median island at the crossing, as its center is full of loam and is ready for plantings.

Anyone interested in adopting the island should contact Town Manager Bill Griffin at (781) 383-4105 or any member of the Board of Selectmen.

Buttonwood Books hosts program for writers

Buttonwood Books & Toys and Grub Street, a Boston independent writing center, will present Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a program for writers. The next seminar will take place Tuesday, July 25, at 7 p.m. The topic is Flash Writing and the instructor is Linda Button.

Looking for a spark to get writing again? This workshop focuses on tricks and tactics to get pen to paper and let it flow. Participants can walk away with good starter material to build on later. The program is for new writers and experienced writers who want a little refresher jolt.

This is a free event. Reservations are appreciated. Call Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 781-383-2665 for reservations or more information.

OPINION

Drive defensively

As long as we have been covering Cohasset, we still have trouble writing the words "state highway."

Somehow that term seems incongruous with this small seaside town full of idyllic streets, a lovely Village, and spectacular ocean vistas.

However, the truth is Route 3A runs right through town and it is getting more traffic clogged and dangerous all the time.

On the up side with the "3A corridor", those who are passing through on their way either north or south are not likely to take side streets to reach their destination.

However, on the down side the traffic is outgrowing the capacity for 3A to handle it. The roadway is a single lane in each direction for most of its stretch through Cohasset. When it opens up by Shaw's into four lanes, it becomes more like the Indianapolis Speedway with cars passing in both the inside and outside lanes when the speed limit in that location is only 35 m.p.h.

While the most dangerous stretch in Cohasset in terms of "rear-end" collisions is King Street (between Stop & Shop and Lower King Street) – the entire corridor can be hazardous.

The light at Beechwood still doesn't register unless you are right at the stop line. We've stopped there hundreds of times to make a left and have yet to have the benefit of an arrow although the lights are equipped with them.

The Pond Street light provides a "choke point" in the morning commute with cars backing up to Beechwood.

At Leo's Exxon where there is also a Dunkin Donuts, some motorists try to pull out onto 3A and turn left across two lanes of traffic to head south. Motorists on 3A heading south often put on their directional and make a left into Leo's – it's a left that can surprise a motorist with a lead foot who has just made the light.

Have you ever tried to make a left out of Tedeschi Plaza or Brewster Road (heading toward Scituate)? The move is not for the faint of heart.

"Near misses" with those trying to "gun it" and make a left out of Sohier Street onto 3A are hair raising for those motorists traveling north who have a clear view of the "close call" with the vehicle heading south and the Sohier Street "suicide driver."

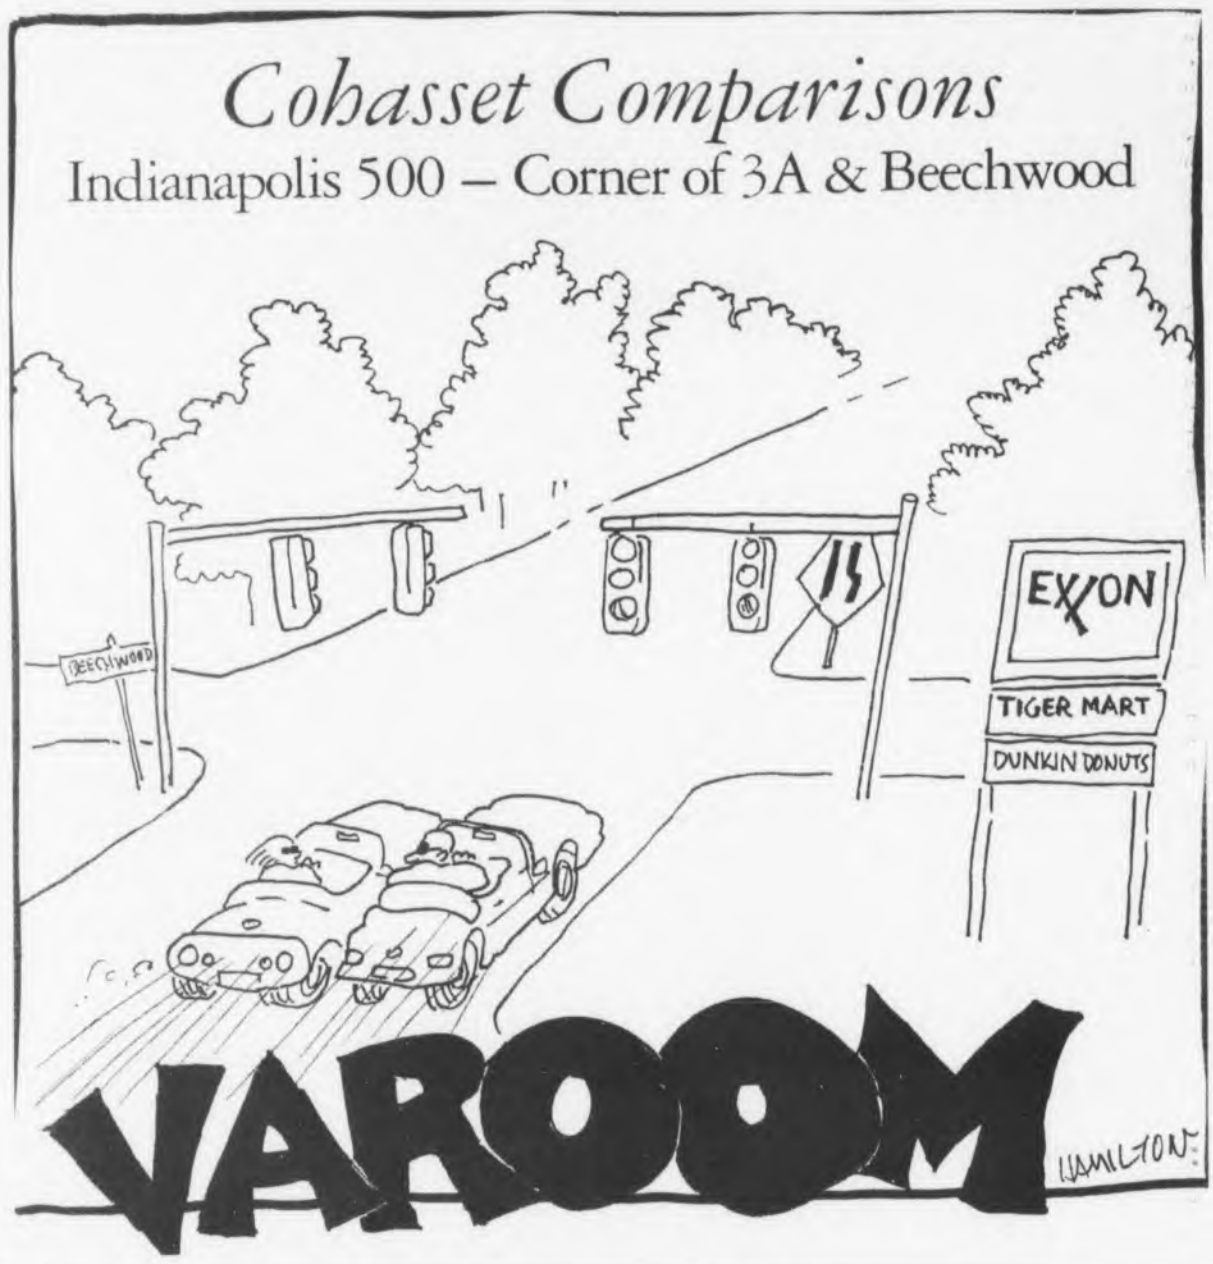
On Tuesday, we bought our coffee at Dunkin Donuts by Acapulco's at about 7 a.m. – right in the middle of rush hour. We pulled up to the exit to turn right and waited for several minutes before there was enough of a lull in the traffic to safely make the turn.

While waiting there we observed what seemed like 100 cars pass. At least half the drivers were on the cell phone and clearly distracted during the stretch of 3A where there are the most curb cuts. Nearly everyone was "following too close," so if one had to make a sudden stop – there would certainly have been a chain reaction, rear-end collision.

We fully support the efforts of the Cohasset Police Department, which has launched a study of the highway and will also compare notes with Scituate and Hingham that share the state road.

With Avalon on the horizon, Cedarmere being built and the train coming – traffic conditions on 3A could only get worse. In addition, the town hopes to grow commercial development along the corridor through changes in parking regulations to increase its commercial tax base and generate more, badly needed tax revenue.

So now is the time to get a handle on the traffic issues and try to take corrective action. Otherwise, motorists in a hurry will turn to our side streets. North and South Main streets, as well as upper King Street, could become mini-speedways of their own as commuters rush to either the North Scituate, Cohasset or Nantasket Junction train stations.



LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Selectmen ignore TM vote on land restriction

TO THE EDITOR:

When Article 14 came up for vote at the Dec. 5, 2005 Special Town Meeting, two arguments were presented: proponents argued in favor of placing a conservation restriction on the town-owned land in order to protect the town's drinking water supply; opponents, led by a majority of the then Board of Selectmen, argued the town's options for disposition be preserved until the Cook development was concluded. The voters passed Article 14 by a two-thirds majority; voters clearly view protection of our drinking water as more important than development.

The town's participation in land development is thankfully at an end – or is it?

This past Monday, I went before the Board of Selectmen to request they act upon the Town Meeting vote. Déjà vu! The losing argument on the floor of Town Meeting was raised again. It seems if the majority of the Board of Selectmen lose on the floor of Town Meeting, they can ultimately win by choosing to ignore the voters.

Their rationale: a private developer may need a portion of this land to successfully develop the Cook Estate; and the town may be able to negotiate a moderately priced development. Since when does the financial success of a private developer take precedence over the protection of our drinking water supply? The town's last involvement in developing affordable housing went really well, didn't it?

They want a compromise. A compromise was agreed upon prior to Town Meeting, but on the floor of Town Meeting the majority of the then Board of Selectmen changed it. This revised compromise stated any land the developer didn't need would be protected, and the land the developer did need could be used for structures. What developer do you know who's going to need less land? So you see, aside from the issue of why the town is subsidizing a private developer, past experience leads me to be less than willing to trust such a compromise today.

Despite representations by some Selectmen, the Water Commission has publicly supported this effort from the very beginning – and is not alone. Monday night, the Selectmen had in front of them letters of support from: the Water Commission, Water Resource Protection Committee, Planning Board, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, and Open Space Committee. It's not just the voters they choose to ignore.

Do I believe moderately priced housing is a priority? Yes, I do. Do I believe this can be achieved by private development? Yes, I do; a smart developer will recognize this is the only housing market not glutted in Cohasset and their best chance for success. Do I believe it's more important than protecting our drinking water. No, I do not.

Fred Koed gets it. Ralph Dormitzer does too. Since Ted Carr is away on vacation, I don't know if he gets it. Ralph has promised me a vote on this issue during his tenure as Chair. I believe him. If Ralph says he will do something, he will, but this vote won't take place until a developer has been offered our land.

I got involved in town politics because I was outraged at the arrogance of our prior Town Manager and some on the Board of Selectmen. Their view was we are smart enough to elect them, but not smart enough for them to listen to us on issues. Some things never change.

POLITICAL NOTES

Dem. Caucus to watch film on global warming

On Tuesday, July 18, from 6:45 to 9:30 p.m. the South Shore Democratic Party Caucus will be gathering for a showing of the environmental documentary on global climate change titled "An Inconvenient Truth" sponsored by the South Shore Democratic Party Caucus at Loring Hall Cinema in Hingham, 65 Main St.

The event starting time is 6:45 p.m. featuring video presentations of the speeches of all three democratic candidates for governor from this year's convention. The movie starts at about 7:30 p.m.

Information about environmental issues, all three democratic gubernatorial candidates and our local democratic town committees will be available and distributed. All Democratic party candidates, party members, independents and interested citizens are invited and welcome. All net proceeds go back to South Shore Democratic town committees.

Tickets are $15 and includes a soda and popcorn.

RTC to host cookout

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee announces its annual cookout on Sunday, Aug. 13, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m., at the home of Lou Harvey, 465 King St., Cohasset.

Special guest speaker will be Reed Hillman, candidate for lieutenant governor.

As superintendent of the State Police, Hillman was responsible for 2,600 law enforcement and support personnel and an annual budget of more than $200 million.

Invited guests will include: Kenneth G. Chase and Kevin P. Scott, candidates for U.S. Senate; Jeff Beatty, candidate for U.S. Congress, 10th District; state Sen. Robert Hedlund; Peter Forman, former representative and sheriff; Mary-Jeanette Murray, former representative; district attorneys Mike Sullivan and Tim Cruz; Sheriff Joseph McDonald; elected town officials and other candidates for office.

North Main Street opens to traffic

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Smith Place has been closed to traffic from Ripley Road.

Greenbush – Late last Friday, the North Main Street railroad crossing opened to traffic at the Cohasset Golf Club. We finally have another way out of Town to the North that is in "finished" condition, at least as far as street traffic is concerned. It's amazing how smooth this crossing really is. Although both Sohier and Lower King Streets have been open to traffic for some time, the street these crossings are not complete.

In the case of Sohier Street, construction was suspended during the Music Circus season and will resume in the fall. We have no reliable information concerning when work will resume on the lower King Street crossing. This crossing, in particular, has been a bit problematic, since CBB has not been "Johnny on the Spot" in keeping the temporary roadway in reasonably good condition. We have commented to CBB that partially completing crossings and then leaving them for an indeterminate length of time does not leave a favorable impression with the residents. CBB is well aware of our comments both at the local liaison and senior project management levels, but we have received no comment or action from them.

Smith Place — This week we reach an historic milestone. Smith Place has closed for good (or at least "for good" as far as most of us is concerned). Ever since Pleasant Street was closed, cars have gotten very used to the Smith Place detour. Now even though Pleasant Street has reopened, some cars still use Smith Place to get to the hillside area and beyond. No more!

We have observed quite a few cars whipping around the corner from Ripley Road at the Carousel Antique Shop into Smith Place without a lot of regard to what's coming at them on Smith Place. If this continues, we expect to see cars impaled on the newly erected jersey barriers. So, please be careful wherever you drive, especially in the Village area.

Town Parking Lot — Construction has begun on the Town Parking lot. This construction is being done by the MBTA as a part of Cohasset's Greenbush Mitigation Package. The first phase of this work involves placing large drainage structures below the ground behind the village shops. That's why this area in now off limits to cars. The drains they are placing are designed to gather water from the surface of the parking lot and separate the dirt and particulate matter from the water and then release the clean water into the underground James Brook culvert. The collected dirt and solid matter is retained in a catch basin that can be cleaned out periodically. These are expensive underground structures but are effective in our quest to clean up the storm water that ultimately finds its way to Jacobs Meadow and our harbor. The drainage phase of the parking lot project is expected to take about five to six weeks.

Heather Drive – The new drainage project at Heather Drive is about complete. The really good news is that about 300 feet of Forest Avenue near Heather Drive will be repaved shortly. Now, all we need is a small drainage project at the Forest Avenue entrance to Wheelwright Park to be completed and Norfolk County will let us pave Forest Avenue. (We can hear the cheers from here.) The paperwork to begin the Wheelwright Park drainage is in process. If we are really, really lucky and the stars align for us, we'll be able to do this new drainage project this fall. Otherwise, it will be done next spring. Then and only then can we think about paving Forest Avenue.

Revitalization – Revitalization is winding down. The "punch list" items are mostly completed. Some new temporary drainage has been added at the Brook and South Main corner to solve water problems until such time as we can do Brook and Elm streets properly. Three stone planters, which were damaged in shipping, are on backorder. These are scheduled to be placed in the brick areas. A fourth will be placed on the sidewalk between Tedeschi's and French Memories. The crosswalk at the end of Depot Court was redone this week because the pavers had settled more than an acceptable amount. We were worried that our snowplows would wreak havoc on them.

Our request to the Commonwealth for sufficient additional funds to allow us to complete Brook and Elm streets is still under consideration by the Department of Transportation. We are sitting here with our fingers crossed that it will be looked upon favorably by the powers to be. (We know crossing our fingers probably doesn't help much, but at least we feel like we are doing something to help the project along.) Seriously, we are in regular contact with the Executive Office of Transportation to make sure our request is current and active. We will let you know as soon as we hear from them.

US 'athletes' lose another

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I regret to report that "athletes" representing our United States of America have once again failed in their efforts to bring back yet another championship to our homeland, and I'm not just talking about our World Cup soccer team in Germany.

I'm talking about the competition that took place on, of all times, the Fourth of July, and at, of all places, the original Nathan's Famous Hot Dog Stand on the Boardwalk at Coney Island.

If that ain't in your face, I don't know what is!

Takeru Kobayashi, 22, the little 5-foot-7, 160-pound, eating machine from Japan, won the annual hot dog eating contest for the sixth straight time by putting away 53-3/4 hot dogs and buns in 12 minutes, a new world record.

What intrigues me further is a report by the Associated Press that the free contest on the Boardwalk drew "thousands of raucous spectators," which means that next year or a couple of years down the road, they'll be in Yankee Stadium charging for tickets.

After that will come a semi-final round on ESPN with the finals on the Food Channel hosted by Emeril Lagasse, now that Julia Childs is unavailable.

But I digress . . .

One bright spot for the good old USA in the 2006 contest was the fact that one of ours, Joey Chestnut, who weighs 220 pounds and is described wondrously as a "professional eater," came in a close second to Takeru by downing 52 franks in 12 minutes.

Joey apparently warmed up for the task by scarfing down record numbers of ribs, waffles, and chicken wings, or at least that's what his resume says.

Incidentally, history's loudest belch was gotten off in 2004 by one Paul Hunn of England and measured at 104.9 decibels, louder than a pile driver at 100 feet.

Pardon the digression, but somehow it seemed to fit right in there.

Third behind Takeru was a woman, Sonya Thomas, who is known as "the Black Widow" for reasons I hate to contemplate, whose score was not given but who qualified by putting away 65 hard boiled eggs in six and a half minutes.

When we last heard from Sonya, who weighs in at 105 pounds and hails from Alexandria, Va., she was on the road in Kennebunkport, Maine, winning (what else?) a lobster-eating contest.

She ate her way through 38 lobsters, or 9.76 pounds of meat, in 12 minutes, beating the runner up, Jason "Crazy Legs" Conti of Boston, who could only down an ignominious 7.65 pounds.

That lobster contest in Maine was no walkover, however.

The fourth place finisher was Ed "Cookie" Jarvis of New York, who claimed the world's record for eating corned beef and cabbage.

Sonya got a $500 prize and a championship belt known as "The Claw" for winning the Lobster Bowl, but Takeru didn't do so well the other day on the Boardwalk.

All he got was a year's supply of Nathan's hot dogs to practice on for July 4, 2007.

When carpenters make you feel antsy

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

They're actually much nicer to work with than my last general contractor.

I thought I'd get everyone up to speed on the Lengyel Family summer plans. We go away on one or two trips this time of year like most families in town, although ours aren't as expensive, and I know how disappointing it is when you invite all your neighbors to a backyard barbecue and no one shows up. I wouldn't like our vacation to spoil anyone's barbecue, particularly when we're so keen to socialize.

The first thing we're doing is abandoning our house to the carpenter ants for a few weeks. I feel awful, because I kept stomping and poisoning them until I realized they were trying to finish up our family room, which needs baseboard and crown molding. They're actually much nicer to work with than my last general contractor. For one thing they show up on time every day. We leave out a few open bags of Cheez-Its at night and by 8 a.m. we've got a full crew. Not even untraceable cash payments were enough to entice our last carpenters to work as hard as these little guys do. And as you know, once you get two or more humans in a room with hammers, your modest basement project becomes a daytime drama to rival any soap opera. Here is an actual excerpt from my journal, written late in our recent 20-month kitchen remodel:

"....Then there's Danny, the Canadian, who insists that every modern construction technique and material originated in Canada. The new American national electrical code? Allegedly copied verbatim from the Canadian codebook. Airtight drywall? Invented in Canada. Dupont's Tyvek? You guessed it: Ottawa. Roofs? Floors? Windows? I don't bring them up. Peter and Danny despise one another, each using identical language to describe the other: impossible to work with, egomaniacal, inflexible, insane. It's best that they don't work in the same quadrant simultaneously. Tony can't stand Danny either, but Danny is convinced Tony hates Peter. The work goes very slowly. I fear that very soon the entertainment value of our crew won't offset their lack of progress..."

So aside from their tendency to raid the pantry I'm quite satisfied with these ants. I'm not the only fan out there either, because apparently America just can't get enough star-studded, computer-animated films about anthropomorphic ants. I saw "The Ant Bully" advertised ahead of "Cars" in a theater recently, along with a trailer for "How To Eat Fried Worms" that nearly made me yorp. Here is a PG-rated movie that makes "Salo" look positively appetizing. Rest assured the Lengyels won't miss any neighborhood hoedowns on account of that film.

However, we will be out of circulation the first few weeks of August, when a Japanese exchange student is staying with us. The head of the program that arranged her trip said our family was ideally suited to hosting foreigners, because we already speak English slowly and a little extra loudly — even by American standards. The girl's name is Naoko, but if you meet her you can call her "Noki". I haven't run that by her yet but I'm sure she won't mind. Noki is such a cute name, and still sounds Asian.

We've racked our brains trying to think of something exciting to do with her in Cohasset. In the end we decided to focus on out-of-town trips, although I refuse to take her to Plymouth Rock. Obviously it's historical as a primitive example of a tourist attraction, but once you've stared down into its concrete pen for a few minutes and had a waffle cone, what else is there? Now the Irish — they know how to spice up a rock. To experience the Blarney Stone you have to kiss it while being held upside down by the ankles. Wouldn't it be cool if we all told out-of-staters it's considered good luck to have your picture taken on Plymouth Rock without wearing pants? I'm telling you we'd have every odd Canadian down here pounding waffle cones before a month was out. This idea might even work as a fund-raising scheme for Cohasset, if only we had a rock.

Bottom line: once the ants are done with the family room and Noki heads home our schedule should open up for sleepovers, pool parties, yachting -- we're pretty flexible. We're good at spotting things as we drive around, but it's more convenient for us to get an official invitation, so we can give you ample warning about our food allergies. Thanks, and see you soon!

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset with four thousand members of Camponotus pennsylvanicus. Since their arrival his rotting sills have finally got some attention, although he has been unable to locate his cat.

HEALTH NOTES

Safe water from private wells

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

About 2.3 million people (about 20 percent of the total population) in New England obtain water from their own private well. Recent studies in New England identified contamination of some private wells from methyl-tertiary-butyl ether (MtBE), radon and arsenic, but many homeowners are not aware of this risk to their drinking water.

If you have a private well, regular water quality testing is important. Many contaminants cannot be identified by taste or odor, making it difficult for homeowners to know if the water quality of their well has changed. EPA and Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection do not regulate private wells Cohasset does require sampling of private wells after they are initially installed and whenever the property is sold. However, it is the responsibility of all homeowners to periodically test their well for contamination.

In Cohasset the testing requirements include volatile organic compounds (VOCs), which consist of many of the most common — and potentially dangerous — groundwater contaminants, such as industrial solvents and gasoline. The standard well test only includes bacteria and a few inorganic chemicals like nitrate and sodium. If your well was installed without the Board of Health's knowledge, it was probably not tested for VOCs. If you're not sure if your well was tested call the Board of Health for more information. Most of these chemicals are tasteless and odorless in drinking water. Unless you test your well for VOCs, you won't know whether you have a VOC problem. VOCs have been found in many private wells in pristine settings in Massachusetts. In developed and urbanized communities like those that make up the MWRA and Cohasset service area, the chance of having VOCs in the groundwater is much greater. All private wells in these areas should be tested for VOCs before being used for drinking water.

The Board of Health will soon hold a hearing on the permitting of private wells as well as requiring a health inspection of all private wells to determine safety and whether a cross connection to the Town water supply exists.

Cross connections — If a residence is connected to both a private well and public water supply, the piping carrying the private well and public water cannot be connected anywhere. Otherwise an illegal "cross connection" is created, through which private well water in the building's pipes may be siphoned into the public water mains. Therefore, residences served by private wells must either be physically disconnected from the public water system, or the pipes carrying private well and public water must be kept completely separate.

Testing — Although, private well contamination is often identified through detection of an unpleasant or unnatural taste or odor, remember that harmful concentrations of several contaminants do not impart a noticeable taste or odor to the water. It is prudent to have the well water sampled periodically and tested by a certified laboratory. The following sampling scheme is suggested:

- For newly constructed wells. Be sure the well driller submits a copy of the drilling log to the Board of Health. This will trigger the testing requirements already established. Results should be given to the Board of Health and the water not used until the results are reviewed.
- For existing wells: When buying a home with a private well be sure to get a copy of the test results which were reviewed by the Board of Health prior to purchase. Then, each year, preferably in the spring, all private wells should have their water analyzed for coliform or enterococcus bacteria.

Every three years, homeowners with wells located proximal to land uses and/or intensive residential developments that are potentially impacting groundwater quality should have their water analyzed using the standard well test.

If you intend to install a private well, you must contact the Board of Health. If you presently receive public water, you must also contact your local water supplier.

'Small Actors' on 'Our Town'

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, members of the Cohasset Middle School Drama Workshop will perform their award winning one-act play "Small Actors." Members of the cast and their director, Middle School Teacher Stephanie Noble, will also share their feelings about recently taking the gold medal at the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild.

Tune in to enjoy this delightful performance and see some of Cohasset's most talented middle schoolers! Be sure to tune in at OUR TOWN's new times of 9p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays all on Comcast channel 10.

What is your reaction to the Big Dig tunnel failure?

Crews continue to investigate at the scene of Monday's fatal ceiling collapse in the Mass. Pike Extension tunnel in South Boston.

"From what I have heard I think it was a dreadful tragedy and my prayers are certainly with the victim's family and loved ones.

"However, I am very concerned about what this might say about the value we place on the profit incentive vs. safety. There's an old saying 'That's good enough for Government Work.' This is a tragic consequence of that as a modus operandi.

"We have seen it more than once where a contractor will cut corners to meet a deadline — save on materials — earn an early completion or under budget bonus.

"This is a huge project that thousands of people use on a daily basis. I'm afraid that a thorough inch-by-inch inspection is the only option. That is if we can get the inspectors to agree to GPS technology that might actually allow their employers to know where they are."

— David Bigley

PS. Who signs off that the work currently being done on the Greenbush Line is safe and properly done?

"Preliminary indications are that the same design flaw &/or engineering mistake was made in at least 17 other locations. The ceiling collapse, leaking, cement failing specification et al. amount to criminal negligence. Too often, the white-collar criminal walks away with a slap on the wrist. This time, they should identify those responsible at the highest levels and throw away the key."

— Joe McElroy

"Our fears are now reality. Cause of death was blunt trauma not drowning. When we were children, we held our breath as we passed through tunnels. We will be doing it again. Something more than a woman's life was lost in the Big Dig on Monday night, it was the remaining shred of trust in our public institutions to put people before profit. We may have to hold our breath for a very long time."

— John Seel

"$16 billion death trap, expertly built... we must learn the lesson that we cannot blindly yield responsibility to 'experts'."

— Louis S. Harvey

"From a structural standpoint, the construction of the tunnel is under suspicion, and nothing should be said about its safety until qualified structural engineers have inspected the entire overhead support system.

"Meanwhile, it would be foolhardy to permit access to any part of the tunnel structure having similar design and construction characteristics before it has been inspected by competent third-party personnel. By this time, any reasonably competent manager should have requested and obtained a plan for such a survey and given it to the spokesperson responsible for providing information on the status of the situation. It's almost impossible to believe that anyone responsible for management of the tunnel system would emit such nonsensical blather as we've been hearing."

—Steve Bobo

"Although I wasn't shocked that the big dig collapsed, I was extremely disappointed in the people who organized and overlooked the construction of the tunnel. I never imagined that it would kill someone, even though looking back on it — it was evident that an accident would occur. I'm sure many people share the same feelings as I do."

— Emily Toomey

"Projects are either designed correctly with safety in mind or not. Projects are either built to design specifications or not. Inspections of projects as built should confirm that designs have been met and that they have been built to design specifications, without shoddy workmanship. It is truly unfortunate that the Big Dig has now cost the life of an innocent traveler.

"Designers, contractors and inspectors all have critical roles to perform. Now is the time to put politics aside and assure safety first of the entire Big Dig project. Once that has been accomplished the investigation should proceed to where the breakdown occurred.

"The failure of the panels in the Ted Williams Tunnel is a failure in the basic system of how we oversee public projects. This is a complicated problem, but the public deserves answers and to know who was responsible. I hope the finding is not that safety has been compromised in order to keep the budget down. Cutting corners and putting lives at risk is unacceptable."

— Fred Koed

"I am saddened that what appears to be unbelievable incompetence at all levels of this Big Dig fiasco has resulted in the death of an innocent woman traveling to Logan to pick up relatives. I travel a great deal and use that tunnel all the time. It could have happened to me, to my husband, my kids, my friends, to anyone. I am frightened to drive through any of the Big Dig tunnels and I have no confidence in Matt Amorello or any of our state officials who say the tunnel will be safe any time soon. Not until we have an independent committee look at every inch of every tunnel and every word of every document will I feel confident again."

— Jane Lanzillotti

"Perhaps we are a little like Rome before the big fall — projects just too big and perhaps we are just too arrogant and perhaps we feel like we are just invincible. We truly need to examine ourselves and 'keep it simple.' We are getting to the point where there is no end to $$ so we believe we can do anything. I deeply feel for this family—what a loss. What a tragedy, wrong place wrong time."

— Georgie Gladdys

"Who does Turnpike Chairman Matt Amorello think he's fooling wearing a work shirt and an orange safety vest to the press conference? I hope the next time we see him in orange it is a nice prison jumpsuit."

— Lance Norris

"The contracts for the Big Dig were awarded to companies that had and continue to have many, many contracts around the world — the biggest names, etc. What I find most discouraging about the series of failures, of which Monday evening's is only the most recent, is that hardly anyone wants to discuss how it can be that these companies are allowed to continue to operate with apparent impunity. What has happened to pride of workmanship?

"It's beyond comprehension that Bechtel Parsons Brinkerhoff and all the subcontractors weren't determined to do the best possible job, just for their own reputation! How can we expect bureaucrats, politicians, and local temporary hired hands to oversee what should be highly technical and very well thought out work? We need to take a hard look at the quality of work, commitment to excellence, and honesty of everyone working on public facilities with our tax dollars. Once inspections have determined that the tunnels are safe, I will continue to use them. Planners have left us little choice."

— Chartis Tebbetts

"The cause soon will be revealed. Until then, I think any comment on the specific incident is of little value. Considering the size and complexity of the project, it is amazing how little has gone wrong."

— R. Murray Campbell

"Since the first inspection completed Wednesday of the Eastbound tunnel revealed more than 60 possible faulty supports in the concrete ceiling panels, my first reaction was — Why haven't inspections of these supports been completed before a fatal accident occurred?

"My second comment is aimed at what may be poor engineering — Why were steel plates not installed in the forms when the ceiling was poured to support the steel cables and beams, rather than drilling holes and using epoxy grout to anchor the threaded rods, knowing that vibration from the traffic and pollutants from the exhaust fumes could cause substantial deterioration of the support system?

"Finally, perhaps they should have had safety supports on the individual panels — as they do with light fixtures above suspended ceilings, to prevent them from crashing down.

"The outcome of this single accident, will be months of redesign and new construction to place the proper supports and lighter weight panels in place, and the expense of millions of more taxpayer dollars, along with the untold hours of political wrangling between the Governor, Attorney General and Mr. Chairman of the MTA.

"We all know that the tunnels will require continual inspection and maintenance for their entire life, and we will be forever working in them. I thought they should have installed a 'zipper lane' like the HOV lanes, so that they could be divided at any time, and allow traffic to flow in either direction, so that when the inevitable work needs to be done, the driving public can still safely get through to their destination, with the least expense and inconvenience to everyone."

— Wayne Sawchuk

"I was disappointed and sorry that someone's negligence or malfeasance actually killed someone."

— Patience Towle

"This is outrageous, but what do you expect for only $15 billion?" (I'm being sarcastic).

— Peter Guild

"An absolute tragedy, my heart goes out to the victim's family. The state needs to do everything in its power to mitigate any further risk. I think they should interview the workers, not just project managers, to find out where they feel other potential risks may exist. I hope am wrong, but I feel the Turnpike Authority was caught up in financial and project targets instead of public safety."

— Steve Fusco

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

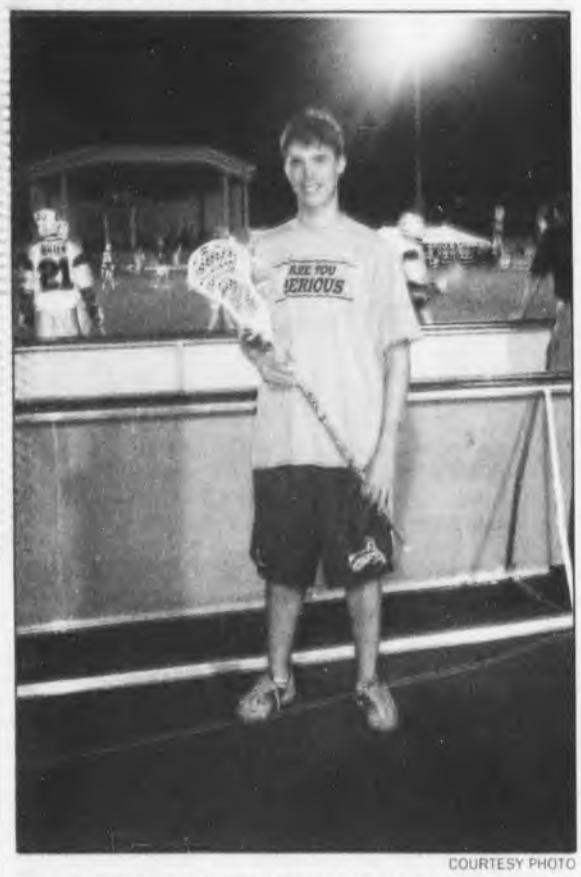
A TRUE SPORTSMAN



COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset's Aidan Buick was honored with the New Balance Sportsman of the Game award, presented by the Sportsman Alliance of Massachusetts, at the Major League Lacrosse All-Star Game on July 6 in Boston. The award is presented to "an athlete who exemplifies the ideals of sportsmanship in their conduct both on and off the field."
A recent graduate of Cohasset High School, Buick was co-captain and leading scorer for the Skippers' state champion lacrosse team.

Boys lacrosse team to visit Statehouse

The Cohasset High School Division 3 state champion boys lacrosse team has been invited to the Massachusetts Statehouse by State Representative Garrett Bradley on Wednesday, July 19 for a luncheon in their honor.

Representative Bradley will provide a pizza luncheon and present the players and coaching staff with citations of achievement. The afternoon will also include a tour of the Statehouse.

CHS Athletic Director Ron Ford asks players to contact him at (781)383-6103 and let him know whether they are able to attend.

Injuries catch up to Post 118

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

The run to try and land a spot in the Zone 6 playoffs was fun while it lasted for the Cohasset American Legion baseball team.

But in the end, injuries took their toll as Post 118 finished the season with just nine healthy players, so after a promising 5-2-2 start over the first half of the season, Cohasset went 1-8 the rest of the way to finish in seventh place with a 6-10-2 record.

"The kids gave it their best and they kept fighting to the end," said Post 118 head coach Fred Caffrey. "We just had too many injuries. We lost three pitchers, including our two best pitchers, Greg Malley and Greg Ouellette, and we lost both of our catchers, Michael Signorelli and Kyle Pinkus. Signorelli only caught one game this year. I thought our kids did a great job under the circumstances."

Milton, Braintree, Weymouth and Morrisette (of Quincy) had landed the first four playoff spots at press time, while Canton and West Roxbury were still fighting it out for the fifth spot on the final night of the season Wednesday as they both moved ahead of Post 118 in the final week of the season.

Cohasset picked up its final win of the season last week when it defeated Stoughton, 5-0, behind the brilliant one-hit pitching performance of Ryan Ferriter. That win lifted Post 118 to the .500 mark for the last time this season as Cohasset improved to 6-6-2 with that victory.

Post 118 backed Ferriter with a balanced offensive attack, as Kevin Signorelli, Michael Signorelli, Chris Bryan, Tim McGrath and Rob Dongara produced two hits apiece to provide Ferriter with more than enough support to give Cohasset the win.

It was all downhill from there, however, as Post 118 lost its final four games. Cohasset ran into Canton ace lefthander Greg

An Italian supporter prays outside Caffe Graffiti on Hanover Street in Boston's North End before the penalty kick shootout during Sunday's final...

...and then goes crazy with thousands of other fans as Fabio Grosso slots home the game-winner against France.

A party like no other in the North End

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

BOSTON - It wasn't the most engrossing of matches or convincing of victories, but try telling that to the thousands that turned Hanover Street into a sea of blue shirts and Italian flags late Sunday afternoon.

There was much in the way of revelry and fireworks, jumping and dancing, and a weird techno remix of Queen's "We Are The Champions" blaring from the speakers outside Caffe Graffiti, which served as the epicenter for the endless throng of giddy fans.

During the match itself, the atmosphere failed to live up to that of the semifinal against Germany. On July 4, there were many fans in black, red and yellow chanting "Deutschland! Deutschland!" – making for some amusing interplay with the Italian fans.

Very few, if any, French supporters turned out to the North End on Sunday. All the better for them, as it turned out, as Les Bleus dropped a somewhat tepid affair.

The match started entertainingly enough with Thierry Henry getting to know the grass on the pitch within the first minute (and he apparently didn't fake it this time, either!), followed just minutes later by an absurdly effective penalty from Zinedine Zidane. Regardless of what anyone says now about Zizou, credit has to be given to anyone with the stones to take a penalty like that in a World Cup final.

The Italians stormed back with their very un-Italian attacking style, and equalized in the 19th on a laser off the head of Marco Materazzi. It was created by the wondrous Andrea Pirlo, the best set-piece creator Marcelo Balboa has never heard of, and aided by a helpless Fabian Barthez, looking as lost as ever in net for France.

Quite frankly, nothing happened over the next 70 minutes, save for an Italy goal disallowed for offsides in the second half.

Overtime began with a man standing in front of me as we stood outside Bricco restaurant, professing repeatedly, "If this goes to penalties, it's over. We will lose." His lack of faith was no doubt instilled by Italy's penalty kick losses in the 1990, 1994 and 1998 Cups, the '94 loss coming to Brazil in the final.

He then went on to compare being an Italy fan to supporting his other favorite team, the Red Sox. I wished to inform him there is a difference between Italy's 24-year drought and the 86 years of Red Sox misery, but I declined.

In overtime, Zidane nearly pulled it out in magical fashion in the 104th minute, his header from a Franck Ribery cross surely headed toward goal. The world's best keeper, Gianluigi Buffon, had other ideas, making

All-Scholastic boys tennis team

Nils Sceery named among area's elite

Editor's Note: The Mariner's All-Scholastic teams take into consideration town public school athletes from the 13 towns covered by the Community Newspaper Company's South Shore office. Those towns are: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: softball.

Singles

Nils Sceery – Senior (Capt.)
First singles – Cohasset

Rounded out a noteworthy high school tennis career in good form, going 16-3 and leading the Skippers to a share of the South Shore League championship…Cohasset earned that distinction by handing Norwell its first league loss in over a decade on April 27…In that match, Sceery topped fellow All-Scholastic Rob Ankner in straight sets to help give Cohasset a 4-1 victory…Also scored a key victory in team's first match against Cape Cod Academy, a squad that wound up going to the Division 2 South final…South Shore League All-Star this season…The salutatorian of his graduating class, Sceery also played soccer at CHS

Alex Chin – Freshman
First singles – Hingham

Just a freshman, this talented player has already solidified himself as the future of Hingham boys tennis…Chin started the year at second singles, but made the jump to the No. 1 spot midway through the spring…He was one third of a very strong singles lineup that helped the Harbormen record a 15-1 regular season record this spring…Chin went 13-1 at first and second singles, helping Hingham capture a share of the Patriot League crown at 11-1…His strong backhand is among his greatest assets on the court and it often helped him outlast his competition in long matches…One such court appearance found Chin win a three-hour, two-tie break marathon match with fellow All-Scholastic Nils Sceery of Cohasset and was the deciding factor in a 3-2 victory…Also won a pair of big matches against Duxbury, with whom Hingham split matches with and shared the PL crown…Won key matches in the Div. 1 South Sectional team tourney, helping Hingham reach the semifinals and also won two matches in the South Individual tourney…Expect to hear more from Chin as he continues his tennis career at HHS.

Brandon Luttinger – Senior (Capt.)
Second singles – Hingham

Had a stellar senior season making the Patriot League All-star team for the third year…The three-year captain went 13-3 on the spring, while going 10-2 in the PL…His consistent play at first and second singles helped the Harbormen capture a share of the League title at 11-1…The team split matches with Duxbury, topping the first time since the Green Dragons joined the PL four years ago…At 15-1 overall, Luttinger helped the Harbormen reach the semifinals of the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney, where he went 2-1 beating opponents from BC High and rival Duxbury…Also a talented fullback on the soccer field, Luttinger helped lead Hingham to a Div. 2 South title last fall…He also played basketball at HHS…He's been praised by his coach Ron Bartles as being a highly coachable player…"Brandon has been a fantastic player and like a coach for us on the court. He has won the sportsmanship award in the PL for the last two years. He has great ethics"…Luttinger plans to attend Ohio Wesleyan in the fall where he will continue both his soccer and tennis careers.

Ryan Sweeney – Junior
First singles – Norwell

One of the biggest reasons for the Clippers' run to the Division 2 state semifinals…In the South sectional, Sweeney routinely dominated opponents, rarely dropping more than a couple games…That was the story for most of the season, during which his only loss came against Winchester in the state semifinal…Advanced to the South quarterfinals of the MIAA individual tournament, including an upset over the competition's number-3 seed…Also made it to the individual quarterfinals last year, a season that saw Sweeney go undefeated…The aspiring sportswriter possesses the intelligence and court sense to match his talent…A South Shore League All-Star this season

Rob Ankner – Sophomore
Second singles – Norwell

About as good a second singles player as there is in the area, Ankner really turned up his game down the stretch to help Norwell win the Division 2 South crown…Perhaps his biggest win came in the second round against top-seed Dover-Sherborn; Ankner clinched the Clippers' 3-2 victory with a tough three-set win…Earned his team's only point in 4-1 loss to Winchester in the state semifinals, winning that match in straight sets…His 6-0, 6-0 win against Cohasset in the teams' second match helped Norwell earn a share of its 13th consecutive South Shore League championship…Filled in admirably for teammate and fellow All-Scholastic Ryan Sweeney at first singles in the middle of the season

Andrew Williams – Senior (Capt.)
First singles - Silver Lake

One of the more underrated players in the area, Williams was often overlooked because of the lack of wins for his team. Always playing first singles against the very best the opponents had to offer, Williams managed a very respectable 10-9 record this year. The ultimate respect for his abilities came from the coaches of the Patriot league who voted him a league all-star this season…In his four years of varsity tennis at Silver Lake he always improved, after starting as a doubles player his first two seasons, he moved up to second singles last year, and wound up as the team's No. 1 at the start of this year. He is an avid tennis player, but also competed on the Silver Lake golf team the past two years during the fall season…He has been an honor roll student enrolled in AP courses throughout high school, including a 4.3 GPA in his senior year…He will not be continuing his tennis career in college, but will be attending Georgia Tech in the fall to study engineering.

Doubles

Walt O'Donnell/Dan Kenyan –
First Doubles – Hingham

After playing his sophomore and junior years with his brother Tom, Walt started fresh with fellow senior Kenyan and the transition was almost seamless…A three-time All-Scholastic, O'Donnell and Kenyan—who played at second doubles as a junior—brought experience and excellent leadership to the court day in and day out, according to coach Ron Bartles… "Walt has played four years in the program and he is premium doubles player. He has extremely good soft hands for volleying. Dan Kenyon is another perfect player to coach. He gives advice when needed and worked out great as one of our captains"…Both captains, the pair picked up several big wins en route to a Patriot League title for Hingham, sharing the honors with rival Duxbury (both 11-1)…The duo rallied from a first set loss to capture a hard-fought win over the Green Dragons' pair in the quarterfinals of the Div. 1 South Sectional tourney, sending the Harbormen to the semis, avenging a regular season loss…O'Donnell and Kenyan's consistency on the court helped Hingham rack up a 15-1 regular season record.

Brett Cleaves/Scott Kitchen
First doubles – Norwell

Yet another reason for Norwell's postseason success was the play of their two senior veterans at first doubles…Kitchen had played the middle portion of the season in singles, but when he and Cleaves got back together at doubles, it didn't take long for them to return to form…Earned the clinching point in 4-1 victory over Cape Cod Academy in Division 2 South final in a strong straight set win…With a little help from teammate Andy Bogaty, who filled in for Cleaves in the second round win over Dover-Sherborn, Norwell did not lose a match at first doubles during the South title run…Also teammates on Norwell's successful soccer program, Cleaves and Kitchen were South Shore League All-Stars this spring

Craig Parker/Ian Thomson
First doubles – Scituate

This Patriot League All-Star tandem experienced consistent success for a Sailors team that fell one win shy of state tournament qualification…May have saved their best tennis for the end of the season, when they beat Hingham's first doubles team and lost a tough 10-8, pro set decision to fellow All-Scholastics Scott Kitchen and Brett Cleaves from Norwell…Also earned a win over Cohasset in the last week of the season that kept Scituate's playoff hopes alive…Together, Parker and Thomson finished the season with a 7-4 record, a mark skewed in part by two three-set losses against Duxbury in the last week of the season…With both players back as seniors next season, the Sailors will have two reliable, experienced players to count on.

Honorable Mention:

A Hanover Street resident provides a refreshing shower for the revelers below after Italy's win on Sunday.

one of the saves of the tournament to push it over the bar. Italy hadn't appeared very interested in scoring since their offsides-negated goal, and a score here almost certainly would have clinched French victory.

And then, the Zidane story went from near fairytale to horror show.

It was hard to believe what was being seen. Did Zidane, one of the best players of his generation, the man who carried France to the final with three immaculate performances, really just do that?

When the replays were shown, the loud sound of "Ohhhhhhh!!" could be heard throughout Boston. Out comes the red card, and with it wild cheers from the Italian supporters.

Still, it was France who looked the fresher side in those final 10 minutes, coming far closer to scoring than the Italians had. Yet, it was on to penalty kicks, a terrific way to determine a competition of such magnitude.

Italy fans seemed doubtful, a curious feeling given the gulf between the quality of the two keepers involved. Buffon vs. the French Clown, Barthez? Overwhelming advantage: Italy.

A penalty kick shootout hasn't really started until someone misses – unless, of course, England is involved, in which case it's over before it starts. On this night, Juventus striker David Trezeguet became the poor sap destined for ignominy when he rocketed one off the crossbar, an effort likely hailed by the Swiss as heroic, but not good enough here.

That would be the only miss of the shootout. When Fabio Grosso's shot hit the back of the net, Hanover Street exploded. If you told me the party was still going on, I wouldn't be surprised.

A collection of final-related thoughts

It will take time before we come to know exactly how Zidane's legacy will be affected by Sunday's events.

Let us hope it does not tarnish an overall wonderful career, culminating in wins over Spain, Brazil and Portugal that may well have been the best three-game stretch Zizou ever played.

I don't think it will. No one will forget his bizarre attack on Materazzi, to be sure, but there are way too many moments of greatness to be consumed by one regrettable act.

France allowing just two goals (one on a penalty) in the knockout stages is a testament to the wonderful defensive work of Lilian Thuram, William Gallas and Claude Makelele, because they sure weren't getting any help from behind them.

Barthez proved himself a terrific volleyball player with that "bump" that any other Portuguese player beside Luis Figo would have scored on. Barthez then followed that up with a virtuoso performance against Italy, time and again getting completely lost on corner kicks, another two of which easily could have gone in the net.

The ESPN commentators, meanwhile, continuously touted his "great seasons" with Manchester United. Of course they would.

Had the Golden Ball voting taken place after Zidane's red card, the award no doubt would have gone to Fabio Cannavaro.

The veteran and team captain was remarkable throughout the tournament, leading a defense that allowed just two goals (an own goal and a penalty) in seven matches. Assuming Juventus gets the heave-ho from Serie A as a result of the match-fixing scandal, Cannavaro could be the defensive catch of the transfer season.

Pirlo, Buffon, Gennaro Gattuso (which is Italian for "Claude Lemieux") and Gianluca Zambrotta joined Cannavaro as the best of the best.

Next week: A recap of a month's worth of madness.

Sports editor Mark Goodman can be reached at mgoodman@cnc.com.

Lyons, who struck out nine batters in six innings and didn't allow a Post 118 baserunner to reach third base in an easy 11-0 victory last Thursday.

It looked like Cohasset might pull off a win at Holbrook last Friday night over a team it had tied earlier in the season when Post 118 had a 3-2 lead with the bases loaded in the fourth and a chance to add to its lead. But a double play ended that threat and Holbrook rallied for its third straight win, 8-5, a damaging loss for Post 118 to a team which won just four games all season but gained a win and a tie against Post 118 this season.

Control problems didn't help Cohasset on the mound as the Post 118 pitchers combined to issue eight walks while limiting Holbrook to just five hits. McGrath led the Cohasset attack with a pair of run-scoring doubles, and Kevin Signorelli scored two of the runs for Post 118.

Things only got rougher for Post 118, who had to finish its season with a pair of games against a Milton team which has lost just once all season (to Braintree at home last week), and who breezed to its third straight Zone 6 East title this season.

Milton showed why it is considered a prime threat to win its first-ever state championship in the postseason after finishing third at the state tournament a year ago, rolling to a 15-0 win on Monday and following it up with an 11-2 win on Tuesday.

"I thought we gave it as good a shot as we could," said Caffrey. I'm very proud of the kids that we had in there. They battled hard and they deserve a lot of credit for their efforts."

Caffrey is hopeful of having a team that can contend for a playoff spot next season.

"We lose about half of the players off our roster this season," said Caffrey. "We have a core of young players returning that should give us a chance to be in the hunt next season."

Greg Malley makes a catch during a game earlier this season against Weymouth. An injury to Malley was one of several that derailed Post 118's playoff hopes this season.

Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football Equipment Handout on Aug. 5

Football equipment for registered football players for the upcoming 2006 Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football season will be handed out by grade/team on Saturday, Aug. 5 at:

7:30 am – 8:15 am (3rd Grade - "C" Stingrays); 8:15 am – 9:30 am (4th Grade - "C" Sharks); 9:30 am – 10:30 am (5th Grade - "B" Stingrays); 10:30 am – 11:15 am (8th Grade - "A" Sharks); 11:15 am – 12:30 pm (7th Grade - "A" Stingrays); 12:30 pm – 1:30 pm (6th Grade - "B" Sharks).

Each player must report during their designated time. Official practice starts for all players at 5:30 pm on Monday, Aug. 14. All players must have their equipment by the start of practice; it will not be handed out starting Aug. 14.

A $300 refundable deposit (made out to SYF) is required at the time of equipment pickup. All equipment will be handed out at the equipment shed located at the back of Scituate High School. For further information on Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleading, please go to www.scicohfootball.com or call the hotlines with any questions: football (781-556-0215) or cheerleading (781-556-0216).

Volunteers: If you have not already signed up, there will also be an opportunity for parents to sign up as volunteers for the upcoming season. We will be looking for parents to: be game day volunteers, assist with our fundraising activities, as well as be a team parent for the season.

It takes hundreds of volunteer hours to ensure a successful season. Please consider this and volunteer to help.

OBITUARIES

Helen T. Cody

Registered nurse

Helen T. Cody, 80, of Cohasset, died July 10, 2006, after a long illness.

Mrs. Cody was born in Brighton and raised in Allston. She was a graduate of Brighton High School and a graduate of Cambridge City Hospital School of Nursing.

Following graduation, she worked at the Watertown Arsenal prior to her marriage in 1952. In 1971, she returned to work for South Shore Medical Center until the late 1980s.

Mrs. Cody volunteered for the Cohasset Senior Citizens Center and was one of the founding members of the Penguin Ski Club in Lincoln, N.H.

She leaves her husband, James J. Cody; her children, James J. Cody III and his wife, Lila, of Cohasset, and Patricia A. Cody of Worcester; her sisters, M. Patricia Tierney of Brookline and Dorothy A. Workman of Deep River, Conn.; and several nieces and nephews. She was the sister of the late John J. Tierney Jr. and George A. Tierney.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated on July 14, at 11 a.m., at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment private. Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to ALS Foundation, Massachusetts Chapter, 275 Turnpike St., Canton, MA 02021.

OBITUARIES

Louis F. O'Malley

Columnist and community activist

Louis F. O'Malley, 65, of Wisconsin, a Cohasset native, died June 17, 2006, after a two-year battle with non-Hodgkin's lymphoma.

Born and raised in Cohasset, he earned degrees from Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wis., and Harvard University in Cambridge, and served as a commissioned officer in the U.S. Marines.

Mr. O'Malley was an opinion columnist for the Green Bay Press-Gazette, in Green Bay, Wis. According to executive editor John Dye, O'Malley's column became "a must read for thousands of readers." "Whether it was a column about his family, local issues or major national developments of the day, Lou's perspective always was unique and compelling."

Mike Blecha, former opinion editor for the Press-Gazette, said Mr. O'Malley was not only "one of the most intelligent people I've ever met," but he was also "a person with a passion for the underdog."

Mr. O'Malley was well known in Green Bay and Brown County. A lawyer who specialized in mediation, he and his wife of 43 years, Karina, founded and operated the Crossroads Homeless Shelter and Justice Center in Green Bay, from 1990 to 2002. Paul Jardin, president of the Chamber of Commerce and former Green Bay mayor described Mr. O'Malley as "bold and honest," and said he could always be spotted at community or neighborhood events.

In his last column published on April 16, he wrote, "Just want everyone to know I have had the best possible life. I have loved and I have been loved, and if I die tomorrow, I die happy."

He was the father of seven, the grandfather of 18, and the great-grandfather of three.

A memorial Mass officiated by the Rev. Guy Blair was held in St. John the Evangelist Church, Green Bay.

Dutch carillonneur to play Cohasset bells

Marcel Siebers, carillonneur of Venlo and Cuijk, The Netherlands, will present the fourth concert in the current summer series of carillon recitals at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on Sunday, July 16, at 6 p.m. His program will include three of his own carillon compositions, transcriptions of pieces by Mozart, Bohm and Joplin, and arrangements of two Queen hits by Freddie Mercury.

The hour-long recital is free of charge and will take place rain or shine

The hour-long recital is free of charge and will take place rain or shine. In case of rain, listen from parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and descriptive brochures will be available in a stand beside the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension, and will also be distributed on Cohasset Common. Listeners are invited to bring blankets, lawn chairs and picnics to the courtyard or the Common.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083, weekdays between 9 a.m. noon, or St. Stephen's carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner, at 978-475-2599, or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy, at 781-383-9599.

Old Ship birthday picnic

Since Hingham" Old Ship Meeting House on Main Street in Hingham soon will launch a celebration of its 325th anniversary, it is only fitting that this National Historic site was part of Hingham's Fourth of July Parade.

Thus, a float bearing a replica of the familiar gothic structure will herald the beginning of the celebration – a picnic on July 29, 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., on the lawn of the church. Included will be a timber-raising, samples of period food and children's games, tours of Old Ship and the Hingham Cemetery, a tribute by the Hingham Militia and a few brief speeches.

The Mariner welcomes photos of your loved ones to accompany obituaries by e-mail to mford@cnc.com or by mail to 73 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043

Vacation Bible School at House of Prayer

Those who are looking for an action-packed summer, can make tracks to House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main St., Hingham for a train-load of adventures aboard the Gospel Express. This vacation Bible School is for everyone between the ages of 4 and 12. The fun will begin Monday, July 17, and continue through Friday, July 21. Sessions will take place from 9 a.m. to noon each day.

At Gospel Express, participants will hear stories about Jesus, make crafts, learn train tunes, play games, perform some skits and make new friends. Each day offers a new Bible story to explore through fun activities.

For more information or to register for VBS, call the church office at 781-749-5533.

JULY 13-21 2006

Breuer unleashes his comedy on the South Shore

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Longtime "Saturday Night Live" viewers may best remember Jim Breuer for his "Goat Boy" character, but the comedian has his own favorite memory of his 1995-98 stint on the NBC-TV program.

"I was doing 'The Joe Pesci Show' sketch when, right in the middle of the sketch, Joe Pesci and Robert DeNiro walked on and beat me down. It was a total surprise to me and an amazing moment of live television that could only happen on SNL," recalled Breuer recently by telephone.

"My comedy is a lot like Bill Cosby's. I'm an animated storyteller. I find humor in my dealings with my wife, my elderly parents and my friends. It is the kind of clean comedy that nobody is doing anymore."
Jim Breuer

Breuer's skewered take on the half-man, half-goat "Goat Boy" character still earns the 39-year-old performer fan recognition.

"Not too long ago, I was in Shoprite, minding my own business, when an elderly couple approached me and asked me to do 'Goat Boy.' He's half-goat, half-man with Tourette's syndrome who instead of cursing bleats like a goat, but people still really love him."

Jim Breuer, the comedian formerly known as "Goat Boy" for the Saturday Night Live character he played, will perform at the South Shore Music Circus Friday night (July 14).

People may have loved his characters, but Breuer wasn't always so enamored of his days on the legendary show.

"'Saturday Night Live' was a really hard experience. Doing that show I realized that the world is just one big professional wrestling show. Everything that can go on, does go on. I learned everything that I needed to learn on that show. The executive producer, Lorne Michaels, knows that show so well that he taught me a great deal just by letting me be around him. Also, I was part of a great company that included Will Ferrell, Molly Shannon and Cheri Oteri for which I will always be grateful. That said, SNL is a very tough, very competive atmosphere to work in."

These days, Breuer - who plays the Music Circus on Friday - is calling upon his working-class Long Island roots for his show on Sirius Satellite Radio, "Breuer Unleashed."

"My radio show is an ensemble made up of two of my high school friends. It's three of us - the guy who made it and two who haven't done as well. All three of us are married with children, though, so we have that in common, too. We just hang out together and deal with everyday issues."

Similar themes enliven Breuer's stand-up gigs.

"My comedy is a lot like Bill Cosby's. I'm an animated storyteller. I find humor in my dealings with my wife, my elderly parents and my friends. It is the kind of clean comedy that nobody is doing anymore."

Jim Breuer will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on July 14 at 8 PM. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.

Movie review

'Pirates' booty richer in sequel

"Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest" (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Give that big bore in the red cape the old heave-ho and fall into the arms of Captain Jack Sparrow, the most amusing buccaneer to hoist the Jolly Roger and sail the Seven Seas.

The best, most spectacular summer blockbuster thus far, "Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest," the second installment in Disney's "Pirates" trilogy, is more fun than a barrel of undead monkeys and an example of what a brilliant cast can do given half a chance and a director on top of his game.

The film is that rarest of summer behemoths: a sequel superior to its predecessor. Reuniting Johnny Depp, Orlando Bloom, Keira Knightley, Jonathan Pryce and, happily, Jack Davenport as ruined, dissolute Commodore James Norrington, a character who is more appealing covered in pig poop, the film is funny, imaginative, witty and action-packed.

OK, it's overlong by at least 30 minutes, but Americans apparently like their summer movies super-sized, too.

The plot is a potpourri of piratical nonsense involving the arrest and escape of Will Turner (Bloom) and Elizabeth Swann (Knightley), that mysterious chest, a Monte Cristo-like escape by Jack, a cannibal tribe outsourced from "King Kong," a Kraken and, best of all, the legendary Davy Jones himself.

If you'd like to see what a great actor can accomplish with an octopus on his face, check out the sublime Bill Nighy as this film's blue-eyed, pirate king villain and his band of crusty, fishy and crustaceous sea men, including a hammerhead shark-headed first mate.

Nighy's Jones, captain of the accursed Flying Dutchman, is the film's most original creation. In addition to the obligatory peg leg, he sports a lobster claw for an arm, that cephalopod head and the ability to play an organ with his tentacles.

Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp) finds himself in yet another tight spot involving swords.

Also new to the cast are such great talents as Swedish actor Stellan Skarsgard as Turner's rotting, watery, sea-phantom father, and Brits Tom Hollander (Knightley's castmate in "Pride & Prejudice") as Lord Beckett, the Ken Lay of the New World, and Naomie Harris ("Tristram Shandy") as a beguiling voodoo priestess (No sign of Keith Richards, yet).

In trademark dredlocks, plaited beard and gold teeth, Depp makes one of the year's best entrances and proceeds to mince and prance through his role on a quest to find the perfect tricorn hat (Do I see a Broadway musical coming our way?). The sight of Sparrow using a coffin as a lifeboat and rowing it with the leg bone of the coffin's inhabitant perfectly captures the flim's Gothic whimsy. Sparrow can now stand on deck beside such iconic screen pirates as Robert Newton's Long John Silver, Errol Flynn's Captain Blood and Charles Laughton's Captain Kidd.

Depp handles the film's action with equal aplomb and doesn't so much speak his lines as dangle them in our faces like verbal naughty bits. Bloom, Depp and Knightley have real chemistry, but that's probably not hard to generate when Knightley is involved.

I have no idea what has possessed director Gore Verbinski ("The Mexican"). But his recent undersung comedy "The Weather Man" was among the best American films of 2005, and he has ratcheted up his game again. While I got a big kick out of a parrot who pleads, "Don't eat me," I'm not sure what to make of the film's obsession with eyes: pecked-out eyeballs, false eyeballs, paint-on eyes, eyes adorned with tattooos, mascara and eye shadow, etc. But when a one-eyed man (Mackenzie Crook) stands up and shouts "Aye!" — I have to admit it's funny.

Featuring dazzling work by cinematographer Dariusz Wolski ("Dark City") and the most inventive CGI since "The Lord of the Rings" "Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest" is pirate movie worthy of its, uhhh, salt. Ahoy, mateys! Arrr.

(Rated PG-13."The Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest" contains violence and gory imagery.)

New Releases

OUR BRAND IS CRISIS (A)

The song and dance of American politics shuffles down to Bolivia in "Our Brand Is Crisis," a fascinating documentary about Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada, the 72-year-old politician who hired the James Carville-helmed GCS consulting firm in 2002 to trump his fellow candidates and sweep his unpopularity under the rug. The film may take place in Bolivia, but it's also a cold, hard look at the way we market our own politicians. In the end, the truth is hard to shake. (Not Rated) -Chelsea Bain

Ongoing

ARMY OF SHADOWS (A)

Jean-Pierre Melville's 1969 French resistance thriller "Army of Shadows" ("L'Armee des ombres") arrives on these shores for the first time, and it's easy to see why it has been neglected. The story of resistance leader Philippe Gerbier (Lino Ventura) is all together too forthright about widespread French collaboration with the Nazis during the German occupation and the Nazi-puppet, Marshal Petain-headed Vichy government. "Army of Shadows" is a dark wartime epic for these war-torn times. Melville's fatalistic observations are universal and banal: War breeds heroism in some, evil in others and brings out the extraordinary in ordinary people. (Not Rated)

THE BREAK-UP (C+)

Oversized, overaged frat boy Gary (Vince Vaughn) and his art dealer girlfriend Brooke (Jennifer Aniston) break up but continue to share a condo. In this anti-romantic comedy, tabloid-linked stars Vaughn and Aniston have nowhere to display their chemistry, except in anger. Between the hijinks that ensue as Gary and Brooke try their best to hurt one another, you end up sitting back and checking off the product placements or trying to figure out how many endings the director shot. (Rated PG-13)

BRICK (D)

In this oddball teen noir about a high school drug ring, Brendan Frye (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) is determined to oust head drug pusher, The Pin (Lukas Haas), from his throne after Brandan discovers the body of his ex-girlfriend Emily (Emilie de Ravin) in a gully. Intriguing as the mystery may be, this film leaves something to be desired. "Brick's" cryptic content, jargon-filled speech and visually bland ambience will leave viewers with a sinking feeling. (Rated R) -Tenley Woodman

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

CLICK (D)

With the help of a new remote control, architect Michael Newman (Adam Sandler) finds that he can mute people, freeze action and restart it at will, fast-forward past unpleasant things and rewind to past events. Much of the action in this uninspired, gratuitously gimmicky and derivative comedy is so mean-spirited that it suggests a movie made by people who killed college classmates in fraternity hazing incidents. I'd say fast-forward through "Click." But you'd be better served by just hitting the "Off" button. Click. (Rated PG-13)

THE DA VINCI CODE (C+)

"The Da Vinci Code," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. The key elements of Dan Brown's fabulously fun novel are all here: Harvard symbologist Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) investigating a 2,000-year-old conspiracy concerning Jesus' true nature; a murder plot involving a psychopathic, albino monk (Paul Bettany); and clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces. But director Ron Howard's film is too long and too stuffed with scholarly pedantry. "The Da Vinci Code" comes off as a book, rather than a movie, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book, at that. (Rated PG-13)

DEEP SEA 3D (C+)

Giant squid, sand sharks and moon jellyfish frolic in 3-D in this escapade narrated by Johnny Depp and Kate Winslet. During the hour, viewers traverse coral reefs, shipwrecks and kelp forests to glimpse the day-to-day life of creatures we normally see on dinner plates laced with bread crumbs, lemon and butter. The film's message — preserve these submerged communities — is important, if a little bland to watch. (Not Rated) -Tenley Woodman

THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA (B+)

"The Devil Wears Prada" is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot. Dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist Andy Sachs (Anne Hathaway) arrives in New York City and is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and Runway magazine editor Miranda (Meryl Streep), a dragon lady with a tongue like a knife. As she struggles to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, Andy is pitied by the magazine's art director Nigel (Stanley Tucci) and made over into a new age Eliza Doolittle. (Rated PG-13)

THE FAST AND THE FURIOUS: TOKYO DRIFT (B)

This third installment of the popular franchise takes its car chases and souped-up engines to the Far East. High school troublemaker Sean (Lucas Black) is shipped to Tokyo to avoid jail time and live with his strict, military officer dad (Brian Goodman). Once there, Sean befriends Twinkie (Bow Wow), an army brat with a pimped-out car, and is soon driving a new set of wheels and getting on the bad side of mafia-affiliated DK (Brian Tee) and falling for his girl, Neela (Nathalie Kelley). Sure, it's not the wittiest, smartest or most memorable piece of cinema. But "The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift" delivers everything it promised: loud music, loud cars and a whole lot of glitz. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

GARFIELD: A TALE OF TWO KITTIES (B-)

Two cats are better than one in "Garfield: A Tale of Two Kitties," which brings Jim Davis' fat cat back to the big screen in a reasonable riff on "The Prince and The Pauper." This time, the action is in London, and Garfield (voiced again by Bill Murray) is recruited to take the place of Prince (voiced by Tim Curry), the king of England's ancient Carlyle Castle, after he's targeted by the greedy, ignored nephew Lord Dargis (Billy Connolly), who can't wait for the cat's death to assume control of the ancient castle and turn it into a high-rise development. (Rated PG) -Stephen Schaefer

THE GREAT NEW WONDERFUL (C+)

"The Great New Wonderful" is neither great, new nor wonderful. More like a misconceived play than a movie, it charts the post-9/11 malaise of a group of New Yorkers (Maggie Gyllenhaal, Tony Shalhoub, Edie Falco, Judy Greer and Olympia Dukakis). "The Great New Wonderful" aspires to be a quirky, multi-character, mosaiclike indie in the "Crash"-"Magnolia" manner. But the film's unsubtle point is that the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks have left psychic scars, a pervasive sense of meaninglessness and deep-seated desire for payback. That such feelings are a virtual universal part of the human condition is not acknowledged. (Rated R)

THE HEART OF THE GAME (A)

Ward Serriil's emotionally-charged "The Heart of the Game" is a documentary that took seven years to find its ending. Filmed with a grainy, hand-held camera, it chronicles the rise of the Roosevelt Roughriders, a Seattle high school girls' basketball team, and its star player, Darnellia Russell. Narrated by Ludacris, "The Heart of the Game" is a surprising little film that inspires, educates and makes us all the happier for having seen it. High school girls' basketball will seem like the greatest game ever played. (Rated PG-13) -Chelsea Bain

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

THE LAKE HOUSE (B-)

Kate Forster (Sandra Bullock) is a lonely physician who, in 2006, moves out of a small, glass-box-like suburban house suspended over a picturesque lake. After leaving a note to have her mail forwarded, Kate discovers the responses she gets are coming from someone who lives in the house in 2004, a hunky, frustrated architect named Alex Wyler (Keanu Reeves). Over the course of their time-traveling correspondence, they fall somewhat convincingly in love. This romance by the numbers is complete nonsense. But the premise — that there's someone out there who is your true dream boy or girl — will make a lot of girlie-girls and girlie-men weep into their popcorn. (Rated PG)

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT (A-)

Mrs. Palfrey (Joan Plowright) moves to London to be near her 26-year-old grandson, who, oddly, doesn't show up. Instead, Mrs. Palfrey persuades aspiring young writer Ludovic Meyer (Rupert Friend) to impersonate her grandson to deflect the attention of busybody hotel residents. A rare friendship develops between the lonely widow and young artist. Brimming with warmth and intelligence, "Mrs. Palfrey" is small film, yet completely delightful. (Not Rated)

Gorgeous isolation

Sky, sand and surf is king at Mozambique island resort

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

MEDJUMBE, Moz-ambique - Bob Dylan introduced me to Mozambique. Back in 1975 on his "Desire" album, he sang memorably about this African country:

"I like to spend some time in Mozambique
The sunny sky is aqua blue . . .
It's very nice to stay a week or two . . ."

And as I jogged the length of this small island off the coast of northern Mozambique, the lyrics came to life before me.

The sky is, indeed, aqua blue. The sand is alabaster and the ocean is turquoise.

And then there's the olive green shore of the mainland -- shimmering miles away -- dense jungle, broken only by a few villages.

As I jogged, I sipped bottled water from Dubai and watched the sails in the distance from small dhows (boats) of local fishermen.

The island is only a little more than a half-mile long and a fifth of a mile wide at its widest point; part of my running trail was the airstrip, a path I shared with black, brown and white herons, egrets and a stunning, sacred ibis with its distinct crooked beak. I wasn't exactly in the middle of nowhere, but I could see nowhere from here.

But if you dream of being stranded on a desert island, this is the place. The sole "occupant" of Medjumbe is the luxurious Medjumbe Island Resort, where getting away from it all comes with gourmet buffet meals, whole lobsters used as happy hour appetizers, homemade chocolates left on your pillow at night, a pool, cable TV and Internet access. And each of the comfortable chalets has outdoor and indoor showers, a private deck and a hammock.

With all that, it's hard to realize you're off the coast of a desperately poor nation.

Indeed, the Dylan song reeks of irony. It was written just as Mozambique threw off the shackles of Portugal's colonial rule; shortly thereafter the country was plunged into a brutal civil war. The 1980s brought a prolonged drought that killed thousands, and between the forces of nature and war, the country's economy collapsed. After more than 1 million deaths, a cease-fire and peace accord halted the conflicts in 1992, and the country began the slow long road to recovery.

Woman on Ibo

That recovery includes the growth of resorts and hotels along its magnificent coastline. The Saudi-owned Rani Resorts, for example, has built (and is expanding) a number of coastal properties, including the 13-room Medjumbe Island Resort and sister property, the 24-room Matemo Island Resort.

The area's biggest allure, besides isolation, is excellent diving and fishing (catch and release only); Medjumbe and Matemo are both situated within a marine national park. Advanced divers can tackle coral reef walls with names like "The Cliffs of Insanity" and "The Edge of Reason."

The tides around Medjumbe are spectacularly long, rivaling Canada's Bay of Fundy.

Most intriguing is a long spit of sand that reaches out from the resort like a finger into the ocean when the tide is down. Medjumbe manager Tony Vernon-Driscoll gave my companions and me a dune buggy ride to the end of the spit, something he seemed to enjoy almost more than his guests. We raced across the sand, plunging into a flock of terns, which becomes a cloud of terns that scattered and regrouped.

At night, Tony took us for another dune buggy ride into the darkness, as platter-size crabs skittered away in alarm. When we stopped and turned off the headlights, the starlight nearly crowded out the dark. The mainland was completely, eerily black, except for a couple of small moving lights, the lamps of people searching for crabs in the shoreline's mangrove forests.

Getting to Mozambique can be a long haul for Americans: The best route is flying South Africa Airways (www.flysaa.com) to Johannesburg, South Africa, and from there getting connections to Maputo, Mozambique's capital city, and from there to Pemba. From here you catch a small plane to the island resorts. A short hop for surf and sun, a la to the Caribbean, it's not.

The flights from Pemba to Matemo and Medjumbe cross over dense jungles and rugged coastline -- nothing can match Mozambique for the sense of sheer wilderness.

The culture shock can be equally bracing. One night at Matemo costs about $346, which is roughly equal to the average annual income in Mozambique. But we did burst out of the tourist bubble for a brief glimpse into Mozambique life.

The resort offers tours of Ibo Island, about an hour away by boat. Once a headquarters for the Portuguese colonial authorities, the island is now home to several thousand, mostly fishermen.

Braving heat and humidity, our party walked through forts built back in the 1790s and made a slow promenade around former government buildings in stately decay, some with families camped out in their marble halls. On the dirt pathways, women, draped in bright wraps, gracefully balanced loads on their head, or carried strings of small fish. Goats and chickens picked among the ruined courtyards and the jungle was busy reclaiming some once-fine colonial homes.

At a makeshift hospital, vividly illustrated posters warned about the spread of AIDS; about 12 percent to 13 percent of Mozambique's population is HIV- positive. A group of men tapped out souvenirs in the form of delicate silver necklaces and bracelets, made from melted Mozambique coins.

The distance between first and third world was also starkly underlined during a tour of the several villages on Matemo, an island far larger than Medjumbe.

Raucous hordes of giggling children greeted our vehicle as we drove through settlements of mud-and-stick huts, the air musky from wood fires and drying fish. The Matemo resort has built a mosque for villagers -- the population here is nearly all Muslim -- but otherwise there are no signs of the "modern" world.

According to local custom, some women (and a few children) cover their face with a white paste made from a local plant. Left on for several days, the paste is supposed to restore and nourish the skin. One young woman thus masked and skillfully balancing a bucket on her head seemed amused by our fascination and clicking cameras. For Americans, the sight of beautiful faces smeared with white paste is both disconcerting and exotic.

Dylan sings that "when it's time for leaving Mozambique/To say goodbye to sand and sea./You turn around to take a final peek . . ." When I said goodbye, it was with the hope Mozambique would continue its peaceful recovery.

Rates for Medjumbe and Matemo: $346 per person per night, double occupancy. Rate includes breakfast and dinner and nonmotorized water sports. Six-night minimum stay required during peak periods. Air transfers between Pemba and Matemo or Medjumbe run about $70 to $80. Go to www.raniresorts.com or call your travel agent.

Note: Mozambique is malaria country, and anti-malarial medications are recommended.

Local teens like life on the farm

Learn about plants, animals

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Waking up to the sound of a rooster letting out his best "cock-a-doodle-do" might not entice the average teenager. But for three Cohasset girls who are participating in the Young Farmer's Program at Holly Hill Farm, getting up early and enjoying nature in a farm setting is a summer activity they relish.

Tucked away on Jerusalem Road, Holly Hill Farm is a certified organic farm comprised of 140 acres of land, of which 7 acres are viable farmland. During the week of July 17 through the 21, Hannah Burgess, Melissa Campedelli and Tina D'Antonio, who will all be entering the ninth grade at Cohasset High School in the fall, arrived at the farm at 8:30 a.m. to harvest herbs and vegetables, feed the animals and tend to the farm stand until noon.

While the Young Farmer's Program is a camp, which parents pay for, those who participate are asked to complete chores that are more like a work experience. In turn, the girls are paid a stipend at the end of the week for their hard

School surplus

Budget $430K in the black

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department will close out fiscal 2006 very much in the black. The School Committee was informed Monday the district has a roughly $433,000 surplus, which will be used to cover under-budgeted items from fiscal 2006 as well pay for materials and supplies and some special education tuition for fiscal 2007.

The School Committee had been told of a $61,000 surplus in its special education tuition line item at its Tuesday, July 11 meeting, and that the district planned to use those funds to pre-pay special education costs for fiscal 2007. Due to the confusion expressed by some members of the board regarding how it had $61,000 left over and where the money would be used, the budget subcommittee scheduled a meeting to allow Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro ample time to present the figures.

Walsh explained the district had $432,603 in available funds as of June 30, the close

Commuters finding smooth sailing

More taking boat since tunnel tragedy

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Some area Boston commuters are "discovering the boat" while others are finding out water is a great way to get to the airport.

Both options are easily accessible off Route 3A and neither involves tunnel travel.

Last week's Big Dig tunnel failure created an immediate spike in commuter boat riders from Hingham. And while those numbers have leveled off last summer's soaring gas prices created a rise in the daily boat commuters that hasn't subsided, officials say.

In short: it's not only cost-effective to take the boat, but could be safer if the drive involves any of the problematic tunnels Gov. Mitt Romney has identified as having suspect ceiling bolts. And, officials predict, until the safety problems in the Big Dig are resolved, water travel could also mean fewer headaches.

Eleanor Koplovsky of Hingham said taking her daughter to the airport Sunday was an "adventure" that she doesn't want to repeat.

"We left Hingham at 6 p.m. and just got her to her 7:45 p.m. flight," Koplovsky said. "We didn't make it home until 9 p.m., inching all the way until we actually got to South Boston."

Koplovsky said for an upcoming trip they are not going through that mess again.

"We are definitely taking the boat from Quincy no matter what time the boat leaves relative to our flight!"

Monica McKenney of Cohasset took the Harbor Express from Quincy last week to the airport.

"I arrived at the Midwest gate in 45 minutes – my husband's cab ride from Boston to Logan took well over an hour," she said.

Mike McGurl, one of the owners of the Harbor Express, said the numbers have tripled since the tunnel disaster.

"The phone has been ringing constantly 12 hours a day just about the airport service," said McGurl, adding Harbor

Energized board

Seeks funding for position

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Alternative Energy Committee is making great strides when it comes to finding ways for the town to save money and be more "green" with its energy use. To that end, members would like to take their data gathering to a new level and asked the Advisory Committee Thursday, July 13 to approve a $10,000 Reserve Fund transfer, which would pay the cost to hire a point-person to take the lead on some of the committee's initiatives.

While the Advisory Committee said it supports the efforts of the energy committee, it did not approve the transfer and said it felt more comfortable bringing the matter before Town Meeting in the fall to let the voters decide if that is how they would like the money to be spent. Town Meeting voted to appoint the committee at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, and charged it with investigating ways for the town to conserve energy as well as generate renewable energy.

Each year, the town votes to appropriate a sum of money into the reserve fund, which is under the control of the Advisory Committee. In fiscal 2006, $125,000 was put into the Reserve Fund to be used for "unexpected and unforeseen expenses." Above and beyond that $125,000, another $109,000 was put into the account to be available for expenses relating to special education tuitions and/or other needs, as determined by the Advisory Committee. Every town has a reserve fund to allow it to handle unexpected and unforeseen expenses during the course of the fiscal year without having to call a special town meeting.

Members of the Advisory Committee said they saw no rush in handing over the funds to the energy committee, as waiting will not be extremely detrimental to the work being done. Members also said without the energy committee's having gone before the Board of Selectmen first for a recommendation, making a determination for spending the funds did not seem appropriate.

"How do we know the leadership of the town agrees with this? I know you're keeping them updated (on progress being

Storm water to be discussed July 25

The Water Commission and Board of Health will meet Tuesday, July 25, at 7 p.m., in the basement meeting room at Town Hall to discuss storm water issues in Cohasset.

"We will discuss the problems of flooding and pollution of surface water bodies from storm water runoff," said Water Commissioner John McNabb, who is coordinating the meeting. "Also on the agenda for discussion are ways to adopt preventive measures and to remediate existing flooding and storm water pollution."

Town boards that have been invited to send a representative to the meeting include the Board of Selectmen, Water Commissioners, Board of Health, Planning Board, Harbor Health Committee, Water Resources Protection Committee, Conservation Commission and the Open Space Committee.

Also invited are representatives of local watershed groups concerned with the pollution of Little Harbor, Straits Pond, the Gulf River, Cohasset Harbor and other water bodies. Interested residents are invited to attend.

Planning board office hours

The Planning Board Office is open during the following hours: Tuesday: 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; Wednesdays: 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; Thursdays: 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Please note that the office may occasionally be unattended during these hours due to site visits and staff meetings.

Town Web site up and running

The town Web site is complete and ready to be viewed. The site can be accessed at www.townofcohasset.org. Meeting minutes, important town forms and information on town boards can all be found at the site.

Teens take booze to the beach

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Two sets of youths were either arrested or summonsed to court on alcohol charges over the past 10 days.

At 10:35 p.m. on Tuesday (June 11) when a police officer was telling people to leave the parking lot and locking the gate at Sandy Beach, he came across two youths in a car with a quantity of alcohol and small amount of marijuana, Sgt. William Quigley said. The officer also recovered a toy gun from the vehicle that looked very similar to a 40-caliber pistol and was located on the floor of the driver's side. One of the teens also had a fake ID.

Sgt. Quigley explained when the officer was talking to the youths, he observed the handgun on the floor of the driver's side. "As a result of that, other items were observed including the alcohol and marijuana," he said.

Police arrested the 19-year-old Hingham teen for possession of a Class D substance (marijuana) and being a minor in possession of alcohol; the 19-year-old Cohasset teen was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol.

It is not illegal to have a fake gun unless it is flashed or found on school grounds, police said.

In an unrelated incident, a 19-year-old Scituate man and another 19-year-old Cohasset man are being summonsed to court on charges of being minors in possession of alcohol.

On Sunday (July 16) at about 12:33 a.m., an assistant harbormaster called police about a couple of kids with a cooler coming from Bassing Beach. When approached, the two teens tried to discard the cooler, police said. The cooler, which contained a quantity of alcohol, was recovered and both males were taken to the Cohasset teen's house and turned over to his parents.

Police Chief James Hussey has said police will try to turn youths with alcohol over to their parents in lieu of being arrested as long as there is no automobile involved.

Warrants service

Cohasset police in conjunction with METRO-LEC (Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council), of which Cohasset is a member agency, have been conducting a warrant sweep funded by grant money. The effort helps clear up old warrants and takes care of the backlog in District Court, Sgt. William Quigley explained.

During the sweep, police seek out people who did not show up to court as a result of Cohasset charges. Officer Ed Bagley has been coordinating the sweep on behalf of Cohasset police.

Police give the individuals the opportunity to turn themselves in first, if not they will go out and arrest them. There are four warrant arrests — two for Scituate residents, and one each for a Marshfield resident and a Hull resident — as a result of the sweep noted in this week's police log.

Thumb cut

On Wednesday (July 12) at 9:30 a.m., dispatch received a call about an industrial accident at Hingham Lumber. Cohasset police, fire and the Hingham ambulance arrived and found a 40-year-old male employee who had severed the tip of his thumb with a table saw. Cohasset fire was able to recover the small, thumb tip and the man was transported to the hospital by Hingham rescue. (The Cohasset ambulance was out of town on another call).

"OSHA was notified and they are going to follow up," Sgt. William Quigley said. (OSHA stands for Occupational Safety and Health Administration).

Suspended license

Police have stepped up enforcement along the King Street part of Route 3A due to the large number of accidents along that stretch of highway. While working a fixed traffic post on King Street at about 7:15 p.m. Thursday (July 13), a police officer observed a vehicle go by with an expired inspection sticker and missing side-view mirror. The officer stopped the car and after a computer check, discovered the operator was driving on a suspended license. The officer arrested the 23-year-old Scituate man on charges of operating a motor vehicle on a suspended license (fourth offense); expired inspection sticker, and equipment violation (side-view mirror).

"After any vehicle stop, we check the license and this one came back that the operator was not supposed to be driving," Sgt. William Quigley said.

Police towed and impounded the vehicle. After a vehicle is impounded, the registered owner has to claim it or give someone permission to claim the vehicle. That person has to have a valid license and pay the towing fee. Cohasset police use two wrecker services, 3A Towing in Cohasset and McBrien's in North Scituate. The two companies alternate months and keep the impounded vehicles in a secure facility until police release them. Towing fees are $90 and are regulated by the state.

Unauthorized dip

Police suspect "pool hoppers" took an unauthorized dip in a pool at a house on Howard Gleason Road last Sunday night.

When the homeowners arrived home just before 10 p.m., they notified police after seeing their poolside was wet as though there had been kids swimming in the pool.

Police, who suspect youths scaled the fence to get to the pool, put on extra patrols in the area.

School bus and parking fees announced

On June 15, the School Committee announced that it would implement bus and parking fees for students as follows:

Bus fees, in the amount of $180 per student with a family cap of $540, would be imposed on those students choosing to use the Cohasset transportation system who meet the following criteria:

- Elementary school students who live less than two miles to their assigned school.
- All students in grades seven through 12.
- Elementary students who live equal to or greater than the 2-mile benchmark will be transported at no fee.
- For those students choosing to drive their own cars and park at the Middle-High School, there is a $180 parking fee, with a $540 family cap.

Letters and applications regarding parking permits have been mailed to students who will be enrolled in grades 11 and 12 next year. Parking spaces will be allocated to those parents/students who return applications with payment in full by Aug. 7. Seniors who return their applications and payments will receive first consideration, and juniors will be allocated permits on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Letters and applications for bus transportation will be in the mail the week of July 24.

All of this information, as well as sample applications and "frequently asked questions," will be on the Web site, www.cohassetk12.org. More information can also be obtained by calling the business office at 781-383-6108.

AdCom votes down school budget transfer

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Advisory Committee will not transfer $109,000 from the Reserve Fund to the school budget for the purposes of paying special education tuition bills from fiscal 2005 and fiscal 2006. While school department members pleaded their case before the board Thursday, July 13, ultimately the committee said it would not transfer the money without knowing how much of a surplus the school department anticipated before receiving the additional funds.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro attended Thursday's meeting with the Advisory Committee. While DeGennaro said the school department would close out fiscal 2006 in the black, he would not say how much of a surplus there would be.

However, by Monday's school budget sub-committee meeting DeGennaro was able to present an end-of-year surplus figure of $432,603. That number does not include the Foundation Reserve grant the school department has totaling $226,000.

The school department lost an appeal for a special education case, and is now responsible for paying the cost for an out-of-district special education tuition it was hopeful it would not have to pay. The school department had apprised the town of the case last year and said at some point, it could need help paying the bill. The schools had been given permission to use reserve fund money last year for a number of reasons, including utilities and unemployment costs, and it was left with a budget surplus. It used roughly $80,000 of that surplus to pre-pay special education tuitions for fiscal 2006 and then turned back the remaining $109,000. MacCarthy said the only reason the school department had a $61,000 surplus in its special education tuition line item this year is because it made the pre-payment last year.

During the appeals process for the special education case, the school department was not making tuition payments, and therefore now has $58,603 left to pay from fiscal 2005 as well as $118,365 in charges from fiscal 2006, for a total of $176,968. Thinking the reserve fund money was earmarked for its special education tuition, the school department asked to have the $109,000 back. By using the town's money to pay the bill, the schools would be able to use its surplus to pre-pay materials and supplies which were not able to be included in the fiscal 2007 budget, due to the failed override.

Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee pointed out the money in the Reserve Fund was never earmarked for the schools as it cannot be set aside for any specific use. The whole purpose of having a reserve fund is to have money available in an emergency situation. With DeGennaro informing the board there would be a surplus at the end of fiscal 2006, McGee said she hesitated handing over the money to the school department not knowing whether it would cause a major surplus.

Members of the Advisory Committee agreed and said if it looks as if the school department will have a surplus from fiscal 2006, it should pay the bills it has from fiscal 2006 with that money, not make pre-payments for fiscal 2007. "Every department has an obligation to pay its bills out of existing funds as they come due. I don't think you take surplus money and then turn a bill you have due over to the Advisory Committee so you can pay another bill," said Advisory Committee member Sam Wakeman.

> "I don't think you take surplus money and then turn a bill you have due over to the Advisory Committee so you can pay another bill."
> — Sam Wakeman, Advisory Committee

But MacCarthy said when schools have left over funds, there are two allowable actions: it can pre-pay supplies and materials or it can pre-pay special education tuition for the following year. McGee corrected MacCarthy, and said there are actually three options for surplus funds, as it could also be returned to the town.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters said he would prefer waiting to hear the final fiscal 2006 figures before handing over any Reserve Fund money. "I have no problem with where the money is being spent," he said, but added because the school department has freedom in its budget to move money between line items, there would be no harm done if it used fiscal 2006 money to pay its fiscal 2006 bills and came back later with a request to pre-pay fiscal 2007 special education tuition when the administration knew whether there were any surplus funds left.

When the school department used Reserve Fund money last year to pre-pay some out of district tuitions, members of the community were shocked, feeling as if the money belonged to the town and spending was approved for specific reasons, not as an insurance policy for the next year. Advisory Committee member Roger Hill said to regain that trust and a feeling of open budgeting in the community. "Procedurally, the question needs to be asked rather than the button just being pushed," adding the school department is currently tackling transparency issues and for lack of a better word, it should "ask for permission from the town."

Wakeman agreed and said he believed from a public relations standpoint, closing out fiscal 2006 with all the bills paid by the department's budget, then using all surplus funds to pre-pay the next year is the best course of action. "We need a whole budget, not pieces of it," he said, as the committee would need to have all fiscal 2006 information before approving a transfer.

The school department ended up with a surplus of $432,603 for fiscal 2006 and had also under-budgeted $136,600, which includes the $109,829 special education tuition. After paying for the under-budgeted fiscal 2006 costs, the school department will have roughly $296,000 in surplus funds. The schools have already spent $197,312 of that money on supplies and materials for fiscal 2007, as purchasing supplies from one fiscal year for the next requires they be delivered prior to June 30, the close of the fiscal year. This leaves $98,690 left to pre-pay special education tuition. Had the Advisory Committee approved the transfer, the schools would have had a roughly $207,690 surplus, in addition to the $226,000 it has in the Foundation Reserve account.

School department has $430,000 surplus of fiscal 2006. However, the special education transportation line item had been under-budgeted by $10,489, and the business and finance contracted services line item was under-budgeted by $16,283. Paying both those bills brought the surplus down to $405,831.

There was also a $109,829 deficit in special education tuition to the May Institute. The school department had appealed a case and lost, and had not been making payments during the appeals process, meaning it owed tuition for a portion of fiscal 2005 and all of fiscal 2006. The total charge for both fiscal years was $176,968, of which the schools had anticipated a Reserve Fund transfer would cover $109,829. However, DeGennaro and School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy came before the Advisory Committee Thursday, July 13 asking it to approve the transfer and it did not (see related story).

The major areas of surplus came from left over METCO grant funding ($80,000), left over special education tuition ($61,317), left over medical therapeutic services ($59,771) and middle-high school utilities ($84,771). There was also $17,540 left over from the professional development line item and $16,606 in the teacher tuition reimbursement line item, both of which troubled School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz. He worried teachers are not taking advantage of professional development opportunities and are not taking classes to better themselves. "Are they taking the classes and just haven't charged us yet?" he asked.

Walsh explained much of the professional development is done in-house with the district's own staff, which cuts down on the cost in the budget. However, Slanetz said the School Committee is always hearing about the importance of professional development and "They don't use it. It doesn't say much about teachers' motivation to improve themselves."

But ending this year on a positive note does not mean the same will be true next year. Walsh said already there are additional special education students pending for fiscal 2007 which have not yet been budgeted for, in the amount of $339,291. The paperwork has not yet been filed for the students, which is why they have not yet been included in the fiscal 2007 budget. Schools are only allowed to budget for the students they know they will be responsible for. The school department currently has $98,690 in its budget, which it will use to pre-pay the incoming fiscal 2007 charges, which will bring that deficit down to $240,601. However, Cohasset is slated to receive more than $250,000 Chapter 70 state funding, which the Board of Selectmen has said will all be turned over to the schools.

To clear things up in the future, members of the School Committee asked Walsh to provide an updated version of the budget, which spells out where the funding came from for every line item. They also said because many of the items which had been included in the fiscal 2007 budget were taken off when the overrides failed and have subsequently been purchased with left over funds, they would like an accounting of that as they are still being counted as items to purchase with the Reserve Foundation funds on some budget sheets.

College honors to crow about

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HELLO COHASSET.

First of all, thank you to all for the wonderful birthday message in last weeks paper. It was a wonderful surprise, someone or many someones got me! As I drove down to the water on Monday to reflect on the day, I was able to appreciate all that I have with my family and friends and to be so happy for all that I have in my life. It is all really cool.

THE BIG 4-0

Lordy, Lordy guess who else is turning 40? Miss Peg Litchfield on Monday, July 24th. Everyone wants you to have a special day Peg, Enjoy!

CURRY HONORS

Hats off to Leigh-Anne Walsh and Helen Pitts, both of Cohasset, on being named to the dean's list for the spring term at Curry College. To achieve this honor Leigh-Anne and Helen had to maintain a GPA of at least a 3.30 during the term. Awesome!

PROVIDENCE COLLEGE

Jefferson Barrett, a resident of Cohasset and member of the Class of 2008, has been named to the dean's list at Providence College for the Spring 2006 semester. To qualify for the dean's list at Providence, students much achieve at least a 3.55 grade point average.

Keep up the good work, Jefferson!

UVM STANDOUTS

Two more Cohasset residents are earning college honors. Congratulations to Sylvie Manning and Brenna O'Donnell, both of whom have been named to the dean's list for the Spring 2006 semester at the University of Vermont. Sylvie was a senior majoring in art education at the College of Education and Social Services and Brenna was a sophomore majoring in secondary education English at the College of Education and Social Services.

To earn dean's list status at UVM, Sylvie and Brenna maintained at GPA of at least a 3. 0 and have been ranked in the top 20 percent of their class within their respective college.

Congratulations!

AT DISNEY WORLD

Adam J. Haracz, son of Christina and William Haracz, recently began a three-month internship program with The Walt Disney Company in Orlando, Fla. Adam, a member of the Cohasset High School Class of 2005, has recently completed his freshman year at Purdue University, receiving academic honors by being named to the dean's list. Adam is a communications and criminal justice major.

While at Disney, Adam will receive valuable experience with RadioDisney as well as in the ABC and ESPN's radio and TV stations located in the Orlando area. After passing CPR and rescue classes, he will also be spending some time as a lifeguard at several of the resort hotels.

Don't forget the sun block, Adam!

SACRED HEART

Scared Heart University in Fairfield, Conn. has announced that Siobhan Hart-Kelly of Cohasset has earned dean's list honors for the spring semester. In order to achieve this honor, Siobhan must have achieved a 3.6 grade point average on a 4.0 scale.

Well done!

ROGER WILLIAMS

Lucy Gardner, a sophomore majoring in historic preservation, was named to the dean's list at Roger Williams University for the spring 2006 semester. Lucy had to maintain a grade point average of a 3.40 or better for this honor.

Great work, Lucy!

MERRIMACK HONORS

Hats off to Danielle Hinman of Cohasset on being named to the dean's list at Merrimack College for the spring 2006 semester. Danielle had to achieve a minimum 3.25 grade point average based on a 4.0 grading system to be awarded dean's list status. Good work!

That is all for this week. Have a great weekend and send in all of your news (PLEASE, even on Summer Break) no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m.

Happy Hookers net largest catch!

By Judy Wainwright
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We are an all female crew and call ourselves the Happy Hookers. Catching this amazing striped bass was a grand way to celebrate our 10th anniversary of competing in the Cohasset Yacht Club tournament. We are often asked three questions when we get a sizeable fish:

"Where did you get it?" "What did you use?" And "who got it?"

My stock answer for "who caught it" is all of us.

Coleby reeled it in, I netted it, Coleby, Susie and I carefully lifted the bass on board literally falling all over ourselves. Not taking any chances, we left the bass hooked and in the net, Coleby and Susie stepped on it so it wouldn't jump out of the boat as I headed back to the harbor at full throttle.

We truly were three Happy Hookers screaming with joy and anticipation of the weigh in! Only 2-1/2 hours into the 6-1/2 hours of the tournament, we had to return to the club, our boat The Tiny Miracle, the smallest of the 25 competing boats at 17.5 feet left no room in the stern for us and this awesome fish.

The fishing has been very sparse lately. More than 100 contestants and there were only four striped bass caught of legal size to weigh in. It is rare to catch such a grand size striped bass in the Bay area on a tube and worm. Davie Marks, the Cohasset Yacht Club Steward, said this was the largest striped bass on record ever brought into the Club with or without a tournament! Will we go again next year? We can hardly wait!

Mother-daughter piano recital

Olive Mullen and her youngest daughter Celia presented their first joint piano recital at the First Parish Church in Scituate, with students from Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, and Randolph. For Olive, it was her 48th recital and for Celia it was her first studio recital, after many years of performing in classical and jazz music ensembles. Some of you may remember her as the accompanist for the school choruses and theatre productions. Celia is also available for accompanying and playing at parties.

The program began with the musing "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and continued with 18th and 19th century classical pieces, and popular music from ragtime to radio hits, including family duets (parents too!) and even a student's own arrangement. With a nod to history, the program included a Mozart sonata in celebration of the 250th anniversary of his birth, and ended with Olive and Celia playing a 2-piano Polka by Dmitri Shostakovich in honor of his 100th!

ENGAGEMENT

Megan Connolly and Thomas Irwin

Connolly-Irwin

Betsy and Ed Connolly of Cohasset and Hyannisport announce the engagement of their daughter, Megan, to Thomas Irwin, son of Thomas and Monica Irwin of Orchard Park, N.Y.

The bride-to-be graduated from Catholic University of America in Washington, and is a specialty sales representative for Shire Pharmaceuticals in Manhattan.

Her fiancé graduated from Fordham University, and is an associate director for UBS Wealth Management in New York.

An August wedding is planned.

Blessing of Animals is July 22

"All Things Bright and Beautiful" will be the hymn of the day on Saturday, July 22, as House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main St., Hingham hosts its annual Blessing of the Animals at 4:30 p.m.

This year, weather permitting, there will be an outdoor worship experience under a tent, where noise and the occasional accident are easily handled. In case of rain, the service will take place indoors. Remember, animals must be leashed or caged and under control.

Staff from the Animal Rescue League of Boston will feature displays and information on pet care and adoption. Treats for the pets and refreshments for their owners, will be provided.

For more information, call the church office at 781-749-5533.

Contest winner donates bike to needy child

Sarah Gruber of Cohasset with Dependable Cleaners president Christa Hagearty, and Erin Svare, director of Annual Giving and Stewardship for the West End House Boys & Girls Club of Allston-Brighton.

As a weekly winner in the 8th annual Read to Ride summer reading incentive sponsored by Dependable Cleaners, nine-year old Cohasset resident Sarah Gruber, recently received a shiny new bike. A student at Deer Hill Elementary School, Gruber's winning entry was for reading "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire," by J. K. Rowling. However, instead of keeping it, Gruber decided to donate her coveted prize to a child in need through the West End House Boys & Girls Club of Allston-Brighton.

Gruber found out about the contest from Buttonwoods Books & Toys in Cohasset, which is distributing forms for Dependable Cleaners and providing gift certificates as runner-up prizes.

"Sarah loves to read everything, especially books that involve animals or fairies," her mother, Elizabeth, said. "Read to Ride is the perfect program for Sarah because she doesn't go anywhere without a book."

Read to Ride offers children, ages 6-15, the chance to win a bike and helmet with a retail value up to $275 for every book they complete during the program. Entry forms are available at all 17 Dependable Cleaners locations and participating bike shops, until July 21. Every Monday, three winners' names are drawn until July 24.

"The success of this program relies heavily on the cooperation of local libraries and YMCAs, as well as parents, by promoting regular reading habits over the summer months," said Dependable Cleaners president Christina Hagearty, herself a mother of three young children. "Many parents have reported that the program influenced their children to read a lot more than they normally would."

Read to Ride 2006 is sponsored by Dependable Cleaners in conjunction with: The Patriot Ledger; Radio Disney; WBZ News Radio 1030AM; Farina's Bicycle Center in Watertown; Anderson Bicycle in Quincy; Storybook Cove in Hanover; Buttonwood Books in Cohasset; The Braintree Book Rack; and Edaville USA. For more information or to print out an entry form visit www.DependableCleaners.com.

Audubon to access area big mouth

How much human history has the mouth of the North River seen since its opening during the Portland Gale of 1898, and how has wildlife adjusted to that change over time?

On Sunday, July 23, from 1 to 3 p.m., Mass Audubon educator and local historian John Galluzzo will lead an exploration of the mouth of the North River from all angles – Fourth Cliff, the North River Wildlife Sanctuary, the Scituate Maritime & Irish Mossing Museum, and Third Cliff – uncovering stories of shipwrecks and shipbuilding, Irish mossing, salt-haying and storms; and catching glimpses of wildlife in the region – now a state IBA or Important Bird Area. All Around the Mouth of the North River leaves from the North River Wildlife Sanctuary and costs $13, $10 for Mass Audubon members. For more information call John Galluzzo at 781-837-9400 or visit southshore@massaudubon.org.

Cohasset residents to ride in Pan-Mass Challenge

Eight Cohasset residents will ride in the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge, a bike-a-thon for charity, on Aug. 5 and 6. They will be among the more than 4,500 cyclists who will ride in the 27th annual event with the collective goal of raising $24 million for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

To become a volunteer, a virtual rider or make a financial contribution to a rider, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE. Checks can be made payable to PMC, 77 Fourth Ave., Needham, MA 02494.

To make a donation to a rider from Cohasset, visit the Web site at www.pmc.org and enter their egift identification.

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like confidence, in the form of Teaberry Knoll's therapeutic riding for disabled children. Achievement, through our continuing work with Special Olympics. And support, with things like our CVS/pharmacy Charity Classic golf tournament, which has raised millions of dollars for hundreds of family and children's charities. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live. This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

CVS/community. Working in it. Working for it.

What lies beneath

Next to the Town Common, it is tough to find a more pristine site than Cohasset Harbor. Like the common, it is the epitome of New England charm especially when the lobster boats are at their moorings. No one could imagine Cohasset without its harbor – and luckily, we don't have to. There is no danger of the harbor disappearing anytime soon and while it is surrounded largely by commercial development – harbor views are still available to all, especially from Government Island and along parts of Border Street.

Yet below the surface there can lurk increased levels of bacteria, dubbed enterococci. Testing for enterococci started several years ago, after tests determined the bacteria group was a better indicator of health risks than fecal coliform.

The Board of Health samples the water for this microorganism and closes beaches when the results exceed certain thresholds.

That is why you might see a yellow flag flying below the American flag on the pole at Government Island.

Posting signs has not proved successful because the signs are stolen shortly after being installed.

So it is important to look for the yellow flag that means the beach or swimming area is closed. However, that does not necessarily mean people heed the warning and stop from taking a dip, especially on a hot summer's day.

However, the health effects of swimming in water contaminated with high levels of enterococci are not pleasant. Those effects could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

It is no surprise that Bassing Beach is currently closed to swimming. Historically, this area — which attracts boaters who pull their boats ashore there to swim and is popular with Cohasset and Scituate residents — yields higher levels of contaminants.

Weekly water samples for Bassing Beach are taken from the end of the Cohasset Sailing Club dock.

On Tuesday, Black Rock Beach was also closed when tests showed its waters exceeded safe limits. The Board of Health has been testing the beaches in town for the past six weeks and will continue to test all summer long.

Testing results that close beaches to swimming can occur in two ways. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water is one way. Also, if tests over a five-week period reveal a "mean" that is higher than 35 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water is another way.

Bassing Beach tests show a mean over five weeks of 53, meaning the conditions are consistently less than ideal. And Tuesday Black Rock tests showed a spike of 166, which exceeded the 104 maximum limit.

The Harbor Health Committee continues to study the harbor to determine causes and sources of pollution and what can be done to ensure our harbor is as beautiful on the surface as it is underwater.

In the meantime, if you are unsure about whether it is safe to go swimming, look for the yellow flag or call the Board of Health at 781-383-4116.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Kudos to Advisory Committee

TO THE EDITOR:

Thank you to the Cohasset Advisory Committee for convincing School Committee Chair, Adrienne MacCarthy that surplus school funds should be utilized before coming to request town Reserve Funds. Cohasset Reserve Funds are to be used during the fiscal year for emergency purposes that must be dealt with before a town meeting.

In brief, at the end of FY'05 the school department revealed a $190,652 surplus after receiving $222,083 of town Reserve Funds to pay reported deficits. They returned only $109,000 of the excess payment to the town. The remaining $81,000, which was basically free cash and not included in the school budget, was spent to prepay FY'06 SPED expenses.

Certain school officials and administrators believe the school should have received the $109,000 Reserve Funds no matter the circumstances. The intent of the $109,000 Reserve Funds was for FY'06 budget deficits if needed, not to be used to supplement a budget surplus.

At a school committee meeting on July 17, it was disclosed that the school department ended FY'06 with a surplus of $432,000 plus another $226,000 in a Foundation Reserve Account. These amounts total $658,000.

Most of the $432,603 has been used to prepay expenses for FY'07, namely $197,312 for supplies and materials. Some, $109,829, was used to settle a SPED case that Cohasset lost and $26,771 was put toward a deficit in the business office and SPED transportation. Of the $432,603, there is an additional $95,000+ unspent, that will be used to further prepay FY'07 SPED expenses.

The $226,000, which was awarded to the town through Chap 70 grants is still available

Those who have gone to the school website:www.cohassetk12.org to view the newest FY'07 budget information were misled, as the school committee members were when reviewing this document. A great many of the indicated "cuts" were actually paid in advance from the FY'06 surplus and thus not "cuts" at all. .

I was amazed at the unprofessionalism exhibited by the superintendent and the business manager when meeting with the school committee this week to discuss the current financial situation. They did not take the time to prepare an up to date, accurate budget and from my observations, the meeting proved to be confusing and time wasting.

Schools playing hide and seek

TO THE EDITOR:

Once again the School Committee, according to the July 14 Mariner, has shot itself in the foot by dismissing the request of the Advisory Committee for open communication with the town about expenditures. Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy cited a lack of trust between the town and the schools as her reason for not sharing information. School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said "No one's saying why, they just want to see it."

The issue is very simple: people want to see where the money is going because it is our money. The School Committee's strategic plan is predicated on taking more of our money through overrides. Since they want more and more of our money, they should not be playing hide and seek with the spending details. Stonewalling creates suspicion, not trust. According to quotes in an article on page 5, even School Committee members have trouble following the money through the maze of the schools' budget.

However, Committee Member Steve Fusco was right on when, as quoted in the Mariner on page 4, he said, "If we take a defensive posture, they'll think we have something to hide." Everybody understands this simple truth. The school leadership has driven their share of our taxes up to 62 percent with no end in sight. The townspeople are now demanding accountability. The town values education and has always been very generous to the schools. We spend more per student than benchmark school systems that have higher results on standardized tests. How about some reciprocity; how about opening up?

Some harbor reflections of my youth

COHASSET MEMORIES

MARJORIE RITTER

As long as there is ebb and flow,
The harbor is the place to go.

My memories of growing up are in, on, and around the harbor. I was born at home on Higgins Court (now Margin Court) in 1927. My first dunk in the water was when my father tied an empty can on my back and lifted me over the side of the boat. I couldn't swim, but the empty can held enough air to keep me afloat. I really learned to swim at the Margin Street float. The ropes crisscrossed to hold the float. You could hang on until you found you didn't need them anymore. That was it. I was there morning to night.

I remember Barbara Ahearn walking up to catch the train. After work she'd put on her bathing suit and join me for a dip. She was a beautiful girl.

Sometimes during the day I would lie on the float and watch the flat silver fish darting in and out of the green feathery growth on the float. Little green crabs would scurry here and there.

Real early I'd see old Tony Figueiredo standing up rowing, pushing his oars backwards. He was going to haul his lobster traps.

We could tie our skiff to the first buoy by the breakwater and look down and see the flounder flip their tails in a flurry of sand. The water was so clear! My father used to tap an oar on the bottom of a certain place. The flounder would all come and he would feed them.

I must tell you I was quite something in my wool bathing suit, wearing a string of pearls. I have a picture to remind me.

In the afternoon we would go to Bassing Beach. Sometimes we would play with Frances Martin. She lived with her family in the house that still stands on the point. We would go clamming on the flats, nice white ones, razor clams and in the eel grass pools you could reach down, while floating on your stomach, and gather quahogs one after another.

When enough kids showed up, we played baseball when the tide was out beyond the breakwater. We had to be careful because the tide would come in behind us. We weren't very tall, so we had to get across. The older kids would wait and swim. Out beyond the flats the sand dollars grew. They were all fuzzy and purple color. They grew in a pretty wide row.

Town Lot to close two days next week

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush FLASH! – The Town Parking Lot will be closed for about two days starting Monday, July 24th. CBB will be grinding the surface and re-grading the lot with reclaimed asphalt. Essentially, this means that the old asphalt will be removed and ground up into very small pieces. The contours of the lot will be re-graded and the old asphalt will be spread and compacted as a base for new asphalt surface. This is common practice and minimizes the waste from the project and the need for new petroleum-based asphalt. In addition, reclaimed asphalt, when compacted, forms an excellent sub base for paving. (This same practice was done for the recently completed Village Revitalization.) The parking lot will be reopened for use before the final paving is done. So, at some time in the future, it will be closed again for final paving and striping.

Greenbush Dispute Resolution – As we mentioned before, the Town is waiting for the MBTA and the Executive Office of Transportation to set a time and place for the second round of Dispute Resolution with our Board of Selectmen. For a while it almost looked like we needed a new Dispute Resolution to set a place for our Dispute Resolution meeting. Now, it appears that it may be in Cohasset during the week of the 24th of July, most either Wednesday July 26th or Thursday, July 27th. If you are interested in attending, since this is a public meeting, call the Board of Selectmen at 781-383-4105 to find the final time / date / place.

Rocky Lane – The CBB has notified us that they will be doing underground utility work in the track area on the present Rocky Lane access road. Originally, this was not to have been started until the new bridge was opened. However, as we have seen all along the project in Cohasset, the absolute project priority is the construction of the track area. If an area is not critical to the rail bed construction, they are pushing that work off into the future. That's why the road at Lower King Street lies partially completed. They did enough work to lay the rails and will finish the roadwork sometime in the future. At Rocky Lane CBB has guaranteed that open access will be maintained by doing construction in only half of the road at a time.

Spring Street – We've mentioned this before, but this is a reminder that Spring Street near the Ellms Meadow skating pond will be closing temporarily for underground utility work under the right of way. It will reopen when work starts at Spring and Pond streets. When Pond Street is finished, Spring Street at the skating pond will close for good. Originally the Pond Street work was to have been done first, but there is a utility pole that is causing big problems. As you drive down Pond Street you will notice a pole on the right side of the road near Spring Street. That's the culprit. There are guy wires fastened into the ledge that support this pole. This pole needs to be moved and the guy wires removed so that the ledge can be cut away. Until this pole at least has the guy wires removed, no further work can be done at Pond Street. That's why CBB is working on the Ellms Meadow section of Spring Street.

Beechwood Street — With all of the rain early this summer, we discovered that some of the street drainage is not working too well. Originally we had street drainage going down driveways because the MBTA had set them lower than the street. We all then found out that water does indeed go downhill. To prevent this, they constructed small berms at the driveway. These were designed to deflect the rainwater away from the driveway. However, after the berms were constructed we learned that the streets didn't quite drain the way they were supposed to. Instead, the storm water just pooled in the street at the berms. So, back to the drawing board. We'll see what the next solution will be. We're looking forward to a good solution that will properly drain the street and will keep the water from entering driveways.

Requiem for the penny

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

There has been a penny lying in the street in front of my house for, oh, the past few weeks. People have seen it, I'm sure, yet no one has made a move to pick it up. That would require effort, and the minimum wage for just stooping over has long since passed the penny mark.

That's one of the reasons Representative Jim Kolbe of Arizona plans to file legislation to eliminate the penny since "it has no use as a medium of commerce." Like how often do you get pennies in change down at Dunkin' Donuts?

I got one the other day in my change and I felt like putting it away under glass like a relic from an age long past that had been discovered in Pharaoh's grave and saving it for future generations to get rich on its rarity.

Like many Americans, I, too, empty my pockets of loose change at the end of the day and put it in class jars to save for who knows what. I've noticed recently that even the quarter jar is filling faster than the penny jar, which certainly tells you something.

Like many Americans, I, too, empty my pockets of loose change at the end of the day and put it in class jars to save for who knows what.

I've heard of a recycling plant is Florida that finds $1,000 a week in pennies mixed in with the household trash, and Harvard Economics Professor N. Gregory Mankiw notes that people leaving stray pennies behind at the cash registers.

When I last looked, U. S. mints turned out 7.7 billion pennies in 2005 and had to hold some of them back for lack of demand.

As Shakespeare so deftly put it, there's the rub.

It's costing your old Uncle Sam more to produce the penny than the penny is worth. Every time he manufactures a one-cent piece it's costing him 1.23 cents, and you don't have to be a very sharp businessman to know what that means.

The present penny is made up of 2.5 per cent copper and 97.5 per cent zinc. Right now, the value of the metal is not much more than one cent, but sooner of later, it will reach a point where the metals in the coins will be worth enough to be melted down and sold separately.

Each side, of course, has its organized supporters.

The pro-penny group is the Americans for Common Sense, sponsored, not surprisingly, by the zinc industry; and the anti-penny group is the Coin Coalition, supported by the convenience store and the vending machine industries.

The Coin Coalition not too long ago was behind a bill filed in Congress, which would have required that most charges for goods and services be rounded off to the nearest nickel. It didn't make it.

Perhaps it will still make it if we make the change gradually by reviving the two cent piece.

We had one for nine years once, between 1864 and 1873, you know.

Or the three cent piece. We had one of those, too, from 1851 to 1889.

We had a half cent piece, too, from 1793 to 1857, and be sure to let me know if you see one from 1796 lying around on the street in front of your house. It is worth anywhere between $20,000 and $85,000.

HEALTH NOTES

Parkinson's and pesticide exposure

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Although the causes of Parkinson's are not well understood, it has long been suspected that environmental factors play a large role.

Parkinson's disease, first described in the early 1800s by British physician James Parkinson as "shaking palsy," is among the most prevalent neurological disorders. In a recent article in Scientific American, "According to the United Nations, at least four million people worldwide have it; in North America, estimates run from 500,000 to one million, with about 50,000 diagnosed every year. These figures are expected to double by 2040 as the world's elderly population grows; indeed, Parkinson's and other neurodegenerative illnesses common in the elderly (such as Alzheimer's and amyotrophic lateral sclerosis) are on their way to overtaking cancer as a leading cause of death. But the disease is not entirely one of the aged: 50 percent of patients acquire it after age 60; the other half is affected before then. Furthermore, better diagnosis has made experts increasingly aware that the disorder can attack those younger than 40.

"As its 19th-century name suggests — and as many people know from the educational efforts of prominent Parkinson's sufferers such as Janet Reno, Muhammad Ali and Michael J. Fox — the disease is characterized by movement disorders. Tremor in the hands, arms and elsewhere, limb rigidity, slowness of movement, and impaired balance and coordination are among the disease's hallmarks. In addition, some patients have trouble walking, talking, sleeping, urinating and performing sexually."

A major cause may be pesticide exposure. According to research published in Annals of Neurology, people who have been exposed to pesticides are 70 percent more likely to develop Parkinson's disease than those who haven't. The results suggest that any pesticide exposure, whether occupationally related or not, will increase a person's risk of the disease. This means that using pesticides in the home or garden may have similarly harmful effects as working with the chemicals on a farm or as a pest controller.

The new study provides the strongest evidence to date of the link between pesticide exposure and Parkinson's. The work included over 143,000 men and women who completed extensive lifestyle questionnaires beginning in 1982, and follow-up surveys through 2001. All subjects were symptom-free at the beginning of the project, when they were asked about their occupation and exposure to potentially hazardous materials. Since then, 413 of them have developed confirmed cases of Parkinson's, with a greater incidence of the disease in those who spent time around pesticides. "Low- dose pesticide exposure was associated with a significant increase in risk for Parkinson's disease," says lead author Alberto Ascherio of the Harvard School for Public Health. "I think this is one reason to be careful about using pesticides in general."

Although the causes of Parkinson's are not well understood, it has long been suspected that environmental factors play a large role. Animal studies have shown that chemical compounds commonly used as pesticides can cause a degeneration of dopamine-producing neurons. In Parkinson's, a shortage of dopamine causes the disease's characteristic motor abnormalities, including muscle tremors and muscle rigidity. Previous small-scale human studies had suggested a link between pesticides and Parkinson's, but this new study is the first to establish a clear correlation in a large patient population.

The researchers also looked for links between Parkinson's and other environmental contaminants, including asbestos, coal dust, exhaust, formaldehyde and radioactive material. They found no correlation between the disease and any of the materials besides pesticides, however. Because of the design of the questionnaires, the study was not able to determine how the frequency, duration, or intensity of pesticide exposure affected the incidence of Parkinson's. The next step, according to Ascherio, is to figure out which class of chemicals is actually causing the disease, so that people can reduce their exposure. —Karen Schrock, Johns Hopkins University

So far researchers and clinicians have found no way to slow, stop or prevent Parkinson's. Although treatments do exist — including drugs and deep-brain stimulation — these therapies alleviate symptoms, not causes. In recent years, however, investigators have linked proteins to genetic underpinnings of the disease. Such findings are feeding optimism that fresh angles of attack can be identified.

Pesticides kill plants and insects; it takes no leap of faith to conclude that they might do something to humans.

Team Eagle: It's much like a business

SAILING FOR BEIJING

MARK LEWIS

If sailing were the only concern for Team Eagle, it wouldn't be a challenge. In fact, launching and running a sailing campaign is much like running a business. Teamwork, people management, marketing, and raising capital are just some of the parallels.

From the beginning I have approached this endeavor as a businessman. Sailing is second when it comes to a campaign; it's something you can always work on. You can't sail if you do not have the support.

When we first launched this campaign, I was concerned with creating an identity. I thought this would be important when we started to raise funds. Without an identity companies and individuals wouldn't know how to help and support us.

To market the Team Eagle identity, I've created several marketing materials. This includes a brochure, web site, business cards, and media exposure. To date, our story has been featured in several local newspapers, FOX25 Morning Show and CBS 4 Sports.

Our friends at DBMS are also working on a Team Eagle documentary for promotional and learning purposes. Hingham friends of Team Eagle will be holding an exciting fundraiser at the hottest nightclub in Boston, The Rack, on Thursday, Aug. 10 from 6-9pm. There will be food, pool, music, and of course plenty of adult beverages (cash bar), and if you are lucky, a celebrity or two. We will be raffling off various prizes and a fantastic door prize just for showing up. Tickets may be purchased online in advance for $20, using a credit card. Tickets will also be available at the door for $25. We also have a golf tournament fundraiser coming up on Sept. 25, sponsored by Stars and Eat Well Inc. For the last 18 years, Stars on Hingham Harbor has run a popular golf tournament. This year's Fall golf tournament will benefit Team Eagle. Breakfast at Stars, 18 holes of golf at the South Shore Country Club, and dinner at Tosca is an experience not to be missed by any golfing enthusiast. Individuals that are interested can sign up at Stars on Hingham Harbor for $125.

Mark Lewis, at the stern, and his teammate Maureen McKinnon-Tucker are thrilled with the performance of their new boat, the SKUD 18.

Please contact mark@teameagle.org for inquiries about corporate sponsorship, hole sponsorship, cart sponsorship and more. This is an exciting opportunity for you and your business to reach out to a select demographic.

Back to sailing. Maureen and I are heading down to Newport, R.I. this week for a Martin 16 regatta. This is the last time we will cross train in the Martin 16, since we have our new SKUD 18.

Lastly, the first SKUD 18 event will occur July 27-30 as part of the Lands End NOOD/Marblehead Race Week in Marblehead. We are excited this event is so close to home and look forward to getting on the starting line with other SKUD 18s.

'Small Actors' on 'Our Town'

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, members of the Cohasset Middle School Drama Workshop will perform their award winning one-act play "Small Actors." Members of the cast and their director, Middle School Teacher Stephanie Noble, will also share their feelings about recently taking the gold medal at the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild.

Tune in to enjoy this delightful performance and see some of Cohasset's most talented middle schoolers! Be sure to tune in at OUR TOWN's new times of 9p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays all on Comcast channel 10.

Crew from OUR TOWN recently filmed the Class of 2006 graduation ceremony at the South Shore Music Circus. To order a copy, please contact Pat Martin at pat@wellspringhull.org.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

Jack look-alike at Marshfield Fair

TO THE EDITOR:

I so enjoyed the supplement contained in last week's paper. It brought back wonderful memories.

We had a cottage down in Green Harbor, and several friends visited one weekend during the filming. One of the visitors had a hobby of purchasing old stretch limos and restoring them. He brought one with him that weekend. We (the group) decided to attend the Marshfield Fair, which was conducted at the same time as the filming over in Cohasset, so we all piled into Paul's limo.

One of our guests, Bob Clark, is a dead ringer for Jack Nicholson and a real cut-up, so Bob assumed a position in the back of the limo and donned dark sunglasses and proceeded to wave to passersby. I am quite sure many people that day returned to their homes saying that Jack Nicholson waved to them.

When we approached the Marshfield Fair grounds, we found that all the parking was marked "Full", but never fear . . . as we approached the main gate to the fair grounds, we were waved into the Fair Grounds, and found we were assigned parking in the middle of the horse racing rink — all, thanks to our friend Bob Clark, who I am sure the powers-to-be at the Fair assumed they were welcoming Jack Nicholson himself. Many hours later, we left the fair and found it dark, so my friend Bob Clark simply put on the light in the back seat of the limo, assumed his "pose" and continued to wave to the people passing by.

Fond memories of a great time.

More bloviating on the Big Dig

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week's Mariner quoted me, accurately, as saying "considering the size and complexity (of the Big Dig), it is amazing how little has gone wrong." I didn't mean to imply that what did go wrong was acceptable, or unavoidable.

When managing a huge project, with hundreds of engineers and a labor force of thousands, one has to assume that each and every moment some one of them is about to foul up, hence procedures have to be in place to forestall errors or detect and correct errors if they do occur. Quality is not achieved solely by inspection of the work; quality can only be achieved by putting in at the front end of the process, and all during the process of design through construction. Some harbor reflections of my youth

FROM REFLECTIONS, PAGE 10

Something bumped my leg one day while standing knee deep in the water. It was a sea turtle passing by. I had never seen one up close before.

At certain times of the year, the tinker mackerel would invade the harbor. The smelt would also have a run. We'd take a bucket and a line and go down to the float. We could cast a line and hook them one after another. We never used bait. What a thrill for us children!

When night came, we'd get in the mossing dory. It was a double-ended, high-sided, heavy boat. We would row around watching a myriad of liquid diamonds slide off the oars with each stroke. Masses of brown bubbles clung together in little islands as they came from the falls on an outgoing tide.

In those days the restaurant was as it is today. It's over the water on pilings. We would row under it and sing and sing. The era of the big bands had started and the porch above us held the orchestra. We had to be careful and watch the incoming tide because our boat had a high bow and stern. We had to have room to get out.

Once outside you might hear a mandolin playing. In those days all the large boats had captains. My father, Lloyd Higgins, was one. One of the crew played for his enjoyment. Some nights there wasn't much wind, but enough to hear the rigging on the sailboats slap the mast and tinkle like a bell.

Winter came. Ice covered the harbor out to the breakwater. We used to skate on it. There was a boat frozen in the harbor, so we would sit on the rail and rest. The older guys got an old Model T on the ice. They skidded around and had a great time.

Harry Silvia and I got off the school bus. I bet him a penny he couldn't cross the harbor on the ice cakes. Off he went. He went from one cake to another. Thank goodness he walked back around Border Street.

George Jednick used to call me the "white harbor duck." Most ducks were brown. He once sent me a picture of a white duck out front leading the brown ones in a line.

I was with my sister on the Margin Street float when we had the 1938 hurricane. I thought she would be blown off. Needless to say, we went home.

I grew up and married a Navy man. When he had a new boat built in Stonington, Maine, he brought it down over the water. Not being boating season, he came into the Yacht Club float so I could christen it. Just as I swung the bottle, Cliff Dickson shot off the cannon. What a surprise!

The stories are endless.

My husband later became Harbormaster for many years. I could be found singing at the organ bar at the Hugo's Restaurant, the one I used to sing under.

So lower the Cohasset flag for all the people I have mentioned by name. My husband and I don't live there right now. We're still sailing along; we just can't get in the boat. "I saw those Harbor Lights, they only told us we were parting," but we have made arrangements to come back to 143. Let's pray the Harbor does, too.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on ten roll calls from the week of July 10-14.

SEND UNIVERSAL HEALTH CARE PROPOSAL TO COMMITTEE (S 4)

The House and Senate sitting as a Constitutional Convention voted 118-76 to send to a special committee a proposed constitutional amendment ensuring that universal health care is available to all Massachusetts residents. The proposal requires the Legislature and governor to approve laws to ensure that no Massachusetts resident lacks comprehensive, affordable and equitably financed health insurance coverage. Supporters of sending the proposal to committee said that the Legislature should delay action on this very broad and vague measure until the recent historic health care law approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Mitt Romney is given a reasonable opportunity to work. Opponents of sending the proposal to committee said that universal health care should be a permanent part of the state's constitution in order to ensure that the new law is implemented properly and is not watered down in the future. They argued that sending the proposal to committee essentially kills it. The proposal needed the votes of only 50 legislators in order to go on the 2006 ballot. Its future is now uncertain. (A "Yes" vote is for the sending the proposal to committee. A "No" vote is against sending it to committee).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: Y

POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO CHANGE VOTER-APPROVED LAWS (S 7)

The House and Senate sitting as a Constitutional Convention voted 1-193 to reject a proposed constitutional amendment to change the portion of the constitution that allows the Legislature to unilaterally repeal or make changes to any law approved by voters on the ballot. The proposal would permit the Legislature to change a voter-approved law only with the approval of a majority of the voters on a statewide ballot or a majority of the ten original signers of the petition that created the law. Supporters said that it is unfair that the Legislature can unilaterally change laws approved by the voters and argued that the proposal would limit this arbitrary power. Opponents said that the proposal is misguided and would put too much power in the hands of ten citizens. They noted that circumstances change and that the Legislature, elected by the voters every two years, should have the flexibility to change these laws at will. (A "Yes" vote is for the proposal limiting the Legislature's power to unilaterally change a voter-approved law. A "No" vote is against the proposal and favors the Legislature's unilateral power to change voter-approved laws).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: N

FILL VACANCIES IN STATEWIDE OFFICES (S 8)

The House and Senate sitting as a Constitutional Convention voted 33-161 to reject a proposed constitutional amendment that would require a special statewide election to be held within six months to fill vacancies in the offices of Attorney General, Secretary of State, Treasurer, and Auditor. The proposal would allow the Legislature to appoint a temporary successor until the election is held. Current law provides that the Legislature appoint a successor for the remainder of the official's term and does not allow a special election. Supporters said that the voters should have the power to fill these vacancies as soon as possible and argued that the Legislature is unwilling to give up this enormous power. Opponents said that the proposal is well-intentioned but is poorly drafted and conflicts with a current section of the constitution without eliminating that current section. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring a special election within six months. A "No" vote is against requiring it).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: N

INCREASE LEGISLATORS' TERMS (S 11)

The House and Senate sitting as a Constitutional Convention voted 66-125 to reject a proposed constitutional amendment that would increase the terms of legislators from two to four years. Supporters said that the increase would allow legislators to focus on their work and their constituents and not be tied up with campaigning and fundraising every two years. Opponents said that the increase would make senators and representatives less accountable and give voters fewer opportunities to remove them. (A "Yes" vote is for four-year terms. A "No" vote is against four-year terms).

Senator Hedlund: N — Representative Bradley: N

RECESS CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION UNTIL NOVEMBER 9

The House and Senate sitting as a Constitutional Convention voted 100-91 to approve a motion to recess the convention until November 9— shortly after the state's general election. The convention recessed without acting on the controversial proposed constitutional amendment to ban same-sex marriages by defining marriage as between a man and a woman. The proposal needs the votes of 50 legislators in this year's session and the 2007-2008 session in order to appear on the November 2008 ballot. Legislators had various motives for their vote on recessing. Many legislators who voted to recess are supporters of same-sex marriages. Some of those legislators would prefer that the ban never be allowed to come up for a vote. Other same-sex marriage supporters indicate that they would favor eventually allowing the vote but want more time to lobby same-sex marriage opponents in hopes of changing their minds. Some opponents of adjournment favor the ban on same-sex marriages and want a vote on it now because they feel that they have the 50 votes to move the ban to the next step. Other opponents of the recess actually oppose the ban but feel that the Legislature should be democratic and take a vote on it. (A "Yes" vote is for the recess until November 9. A "No" vote is against the recess).

INCREASE MINIMUM WAGE (S 2632)

House 156-0, Senate 36-0, approved and sent to Gov. Romney a bill hiking the minimum wage from $6.75 per hour to $8 per hour over two years. Supporters said that this long overdue bill would help thousands of families that are living near the poverty level despite the fact that the breadwinner works in excess of 40 hours weekly. They argued that a minimum wage hike is the best anti-poverty programs available. The vote was unanimous but many business groups lobbied against it and said that it would also hurt consumers by forcing businesses to raise prices. They argued that this unnecessary hike is unfair to businesses that are already faced with skyrocketing health care and the nations' highest unemployment insurance premiums. (A "Yes" vote is for the minimum wage hike).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: Y

JUDICIAL PAY RAISES (H 5093)

House 157-0, Senate 29-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a bill giving the state's judges a 15 percent pay raise retroactive to the beginning of this year. The bill includes an increase in salaries for trial court judges from $112,777 to $129,694 and a hike from $131,239 to $151,239 for the chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court. Supporters of the pay raises said that judges have not had a pay hike in eight years and argued that higher salaries are necessary to retain and attract qualified judges. Opponents said that the 15 percent retroactive hike is excessive and noted that they support Romney's proposal that would provide a more reasonable 4.1 percent hike. (A "Yes" vote is for the pay raises for judges. A "No" vote is against the pay raises).

UNSIGNED CIRCULARS (H 126)

House 132-24, Senate 30-6, overrode Gov. Romney veto of a bill repealing the current state law that prohibits the distribution of unsigned circulars and posters supporting or opposing any candidates for public office. Supporters of repealing the law said that it violates the First Amendment and noted that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled it unconstitutional. In his veto message, Romney said that the current law should stay in effect because it requires persons or organizations to take responsibility for statements in circulars and posters that are designed to help or defeat a candidate and discourages them from making deliberate misstatements. (A "Yes" vote is for allowing unsigned circulars and posters. A "No" vote is against allowing them).

GENETIC COUNSELORS (H 4326)

House 136-21, Senate 35-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a measure creating a state board to license and regulate genetic counselors who work with individuals and families on the risk of passing on a genetic predisposition for birth defects and disorders to future generations. Supporters said that this increasing popular practice should be regulated and licensed by the state in order to protect against fraud and to ensure that these counselors are qualified. In his veto message, Romney said that two national organizations already certify these counselors and argued that it is unnecessary to create another costly state bureaucracy. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill creating a state board to license and regulate genetic counselors. A "No" vote is against the bill).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: Y

BIG DIG CRISIS (H 5187)

House 150-3, Senate 33-2, approved and Gov. Romney signed into law a bill giving the governor the authority to oversee the inspection of the failed ceiling system in the I-90 Connector tunnel. The measure also gives the Romney administration, rather the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, the power to decide when to re-open the closed tunnel to traffic and provides $20 million to carry out a complete safety audit of the entire Big Dig. Supporters said that the recent ceiling collapse has shaken public confidence in the entire tunnel system. The measure was filed by Romney who said in a written statement that the Turnpike Authority has lost credibility and that it is important to get oversight of tunnel safety that is independent of the Authority. Opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

Senator Hedlund: Y — Representative Bradley: Y

Y = Yes; N = No; NV = No Vote

How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). A value of zero indicates that the staffing data was not available or that the community did not have firefighters in that category. "Ranking Officers" includes captains, deputy chiefs and the chief.

This chart shows the breakdown of Cohasset's firefighters, lieutenants and ranking officers per 1,000 residents in 2005. Please note that communities can have full time firefighters, call/ volunteer firefighters, or some combination. This chart includes all firefighters. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By comparing staffing by position with similar communities, one can get a sense for how Cohasset organizes its fire department and leadership.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

must be independently reviewed. And of course all material, equipment and fieldwork must be inspected for conformance to specifications. Even more importantly, the qualifications of the workmen and their supervisors must be established before significant work is done.

All this may seem obvious, but it is very costly and difficult to achieve, considering the usual flaws of organizations and those who people them. But is must be thoroughly done on projects that concern public safety, and as it has been done so successfully in our nuclear industry. (The Three Mile Island plant responded as it was designed to do in the event of equipment malfunction. The structure and hazard abatement equipment performed flawlessly so that the public was unharmed. Chernobyl, on the other hand, starkly displayed the results of incompetent engineering, project management, quality control and operational fecklessness).

The responsibility for ensuring that all the myriad actions, decisions, design objectives, corresponding designs, execution of designs in the factory and at the job site; all the communications, specifications, and instructions; all the selection and supervision of contractors, lay with Bechtel/Parsons/Brinkerhoff. In theory, that management consortium reported to the Owner's representative, Matt Amorello. But, in practice, the arrangement seems to have been structured so that the Owner's real control was limited. Instead of removing Amorello, the State officers who established the management concept, and failed to strengthen it, should be pilloried.

As to the fatal anchor bolt detail, good engineering management would have avoided designs that are too sensitive to improper installation and for which improper installation technique is not clearly evident in after-the-fact inspection. Better a simple bolted connection between two steel components, where it is clear that a bolt of the proper size and type is (or is not) in place.

The slurry walls are a brilliant and economical solution to a difficult problem, but rely on scrupulous and detailed care in doing the work, otherwise can create big trouble. Maybe scrupulous care was used in most of the slurry wall work, but it should have been exercised in a full 100 percent of the slurry wall work. The "minor" instances of inattention to quality have bequeathed major problems, probably not all yet revealed.

Good project management would have recognized the dependence of success of the slurry technique on 100 percent scrupulous care, and would have ensured that such care was exercised.

It is tragic that a project that successfully dealt with many difficult problems will be remembered for the problems (and much less difficult problems) that it flubbed.

School board cancels joint budget meeting

Does not want sole spotlight

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and School Committee have a lot to talk about. To that end, the three boards were scheduled to attend a joint budget meeting Monday, July 24, but that meeting was cancelled by the School Committee Tuesday.

Early Tuesday, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy put out the word her committee would not be available to attend the meeting. In a prepared statement she said: "As Chair of the School Committee, I spoke with (Selectmen Chairman) Ralph Dormitzer this morning and explained to him that it was the consensus of the School Committee that we would be happy to attend an economic summit about the fiscal outlook of the town as we prepare for fiscal 2008 and how the schools fit into that picture. But at this time, we do not feel a summit meeting solely about the schools is necessary.

"We have made the necessary adjustments to our fiscal 2007 budget to live within our Town Meeting appropriation and are out of the gate running. As you heard last night, the school department will be closing fiscal 2006 in the black. In the meantime, the School Committee, through a sub-committee approach, will be hard at work revisiting and perhaps revising some of its policies, standards and goals for the Cohasset Public Schools and look forward to sharing these as we begin to build our fiscal 2008 budget."

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he was unhappy to hear the School Committee wanted to call the meeting off. "As far as I know, this was as much their idea as ours," he said, as one of the items on the agenda was the fact that state Chapter 70 funding figures were just released and the Board of Selectmen has agreed to give 100 percent to the school department.

Dormitzer added, currently the Board of Selectmen is going through each individual budget to determine whether the town is receiving the services it wants for the price it is paying. He said with all the boards being looked into, it makes sense to include the school department budget in the discussion.

"It seems as if the schools simply don't want to address the serious problem of why two overrides have not passed in a row," he said. "It is regrettable we can't talk about the schools alone."

When trying to finalize an agenda for the meeting, Dormitzer said he sent out an e-mail asking all participants of all three boards to come prepared with questions submitted in writing. He said he would take the questions anonymously if people chose to do so. He said any concerns at all could be brought up and everyone would have the opportunity to make themselves heard, as a first step in getting all three boards on the same page.

"It is important that the three boards get together, specifically with the schools, to help us sort out what it is we want to bring forward to the town next April. We need to decide, what are our goals and how do we reach them while satisfying the taxpayers?" he said.

Voters did not pass either a $725,000 or $1.495 million override this spring, which has left both the town and schools to balance their budgets without it. Moving the town forward without the funding will be a challenge and the meeting was supposed to be the first step in addressing concerns. Town Manager Bill Griffin attended the Advisory Committee's meeting last Thursday and said he had some concerns of his own he would like addressed.

Griffin said state funding amounts were recently released and the Board of Selectmen has already agreed to give the school department all of the Chapter 70 funding which came in, but having the discussion is still important. In addition, he said he and the board would like an update on where the school department stands in terms of having leftover money to pre-pay some special education tuition bills and supplies and materials. He also said the boards will need to talk about linking the town and school department budgets through the same database, as there has been some resistance from the school department in making that happen.

Town side balances budget from within

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Advisory Committee is frequently asked to approve fund transfers. More often than not, it is the committee that supplies the money from its Reserve Fund to supplement another budget.

However, at its July 13 meeting the committee was pleasantly surprised to hear the town ask for approval to transfer money not from the Reserve Fund, but within its own budget.

Fiscal 2006 ended June 30, and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he and Director of Finance Michael Buckley identified a roughly $104,000 deficit, spread throughout different departments. However, they were also able to find enough surplus monies to cover the areas of deficit.

The town's budget is different from the school budget in that the schools may move money between line items at any point during the course of the year while the town allocates specific money for every line item that is then locked in. However, the state allows towns to move money between line items once per year, provided the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee approve the action. Both boards gave the go-ahead for the transfer last week.

"These budget-to-budget transfers are in lieu of impacting the Advisory Committee's Reserve Fund," said Griffin to Selectmen July 10. "It appears that most or all of the Reserve Fund will be needed to address a shortfall in the school department's special education out-of-district tuition budget." However, the Advisory Committee did not approve transferring the $109,000 into the school budget July 13, and subsequently the school department has reported it ended the year with a $432,000 surplus. (See relates stories).

The town needs to transfer $104,390 into 12 different accounts which are currently experiencing shortfalls. The largest budget shortfall to be addressed is the snow and ice deficit of $46,773. Griffin said by making the transfer, "We will not have a snow and ice deficit that would have to be addressed when setting the fiscal 2007 tax rate."

The snow and ice budget is the only budget for which the state allows towns to have a temporary deficit. However, towns must find a way to pay for that deficit before setting the next year's tax rate, and in Cohasset that money usually comes from free cash. "The Commonwealth will allow us to provide for this at a later Town Meeting, but we should do it now," said Buckley.

The Town Manager clerical budget covers all secretarial and clerical help in town hall. This year, the town incurred a deficit of $2,519 due to the extended absences of two staff members. Buckley said the number could have been substantially larger, had it not been for the efforts of the remaining staff.

The selectmen's telephone budget, which is actually an appropriation for most telephone lines in town government (except the schools), has a deficit of $3,404. The budget includes landlines and cellular phones. The account has been historically under funded or over-expended. "We need to eliminate all services wherever possible and in the future, budget this cost by department," said Buckley.

As of June 30, the selectmen advertising budget is in deficit by $796. The town is required to advertise for non civil service job vacancies and competitively bid contracts. "This is another area where our history shows a need for a budget increase," he said.

Police overtime currently has a deficit of $23,573. The department has experienced two extended term sick leave vacancies this spring.

Recent construction activity has required the services of the plumbing and gas inspector on a greater scale than anticipated. Buckley estimates the town owes him $3,920 more than is available in the account, as the town has not yet received a final invoice. The wiring inspector account is also in deficit in the amount of $1,200, as the town was required to hire additional inspectors during the year.

The harbormaster vehicle and boat maintenance budget is in deficit by $1,126. The town spent a substantial amount on maintenance of the department's truck, which has since been taken off the road. In addition, outboards on both boats required extraordinary maintenance.

At the close of business June 30, the appropriation for public works motor fuels was $14,732 in the red. "This budget is for all town vehicles, with the exception of the school department, and should be apportioned in the future. This account will probably need a supplement next year as well because our bid price will increase Sept. 1," said Buckley.

Primarily due to increased construction and demolition disposal costs at the Bourne facility, the public works solid waste line item is in need of a transfer of $5,000.

Buckley's estimate for the unemployment transfer at the December Special Town Meeting was short by $1,275. "We are again this summer experiencing a large amount of claims by school department personnel," said Buckley.

Fortunately, there are surplus funds from other line items, which will be able to cover the deficits. The police department has been very diligent in restraining spending wherever possible, in anticipation of having high overtime costs. As a result, the police department expenses account has a $15,000 surplus to help offset other costs.

The town also refinanced sewer debt with the Water Pollution Abatement Trust, which freed up $25,758.

Health insurance enrollment was lower than anticipated and subsequently, there is $58,980 available. Buckley said that is primarily due to turnover and reductions at the police, fire and school departments. Turnover has also led to a surplus of $17,732 in the Medicare tax account.

The shift to self-insurance for police and fire medical expenses was successful this year, which has left the town with a $5,000 surplus.

Members of the Advisory Committee were impressed with the presentation given by Griffin. "Why are things so good?" asked member Pat Waters. Griffin replied the town is still facing many issues, but it was able to forecast accurately and spend according to where deficits were projected. He also said the town had a good year, bringing in more revenue than anticipated. "We had a recent rush on trash bags," he joked, as the price for pay-as-you-throw RTF bags has increased this fiscal year.

School bus and parking fees announced

On June 15, the School Committee announced that it would implement bus and parking fees for students as follows:

Bus fees, in the amount of $180 per student with a family cap of $540, would be imposed on those students choosing to use the Cohasset transportation system who meet the following criteria:

- Elementary school students who live less than two miles to their assigned school.
- All students in grades seven through 12.
- Elementary students who live equal to or greater than the 2-mile benchmark will be transported at no fee.
- For those students choosing to drive their own cars and park at the Middle-High School, there is a $180 parking fee, with a $540 family cap.

Letters and applications regarding parking permits have been mailed to students who will be enrolled in grades 11 and 12 next year. Parking spaces will be allocated to those parents/students who return applications with payment in full by Aug. 7. Seniors who return their applications and payments will receive first consideration, and juniors will be allocated permits on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Letters and applications for bus transportation will be in the mail the week of July 24.

All of this information, as well as sample applications and "frequently asked questions," will be on the Web site, www.cohassetk12.org. More information can also be obtained by calling the business office at 781-383-6108.

Anderson strikes gold at Bay States

Wins 16-and-under singles tennis tourney; also earns silver at doubles

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It took just over 24 hours for Meg Anderson to win two medals at this summer's Bay State Games.

After winning gold last Saturday at the courts of Harvard University in the 16-and-under singles division, Anderson teamed up the next day with regular doubles partner and fellow CHS junior-to-be Sally Meehan to earn silver medals in the doubles tournament.

After winning gold in last year's Games, the Anderson/Meehan duo teamed up for success again this year following another long run in the spring's MIAA individual tournament.

"We have a lot of experience together; we're real comfortable playing with one another," Anderson said Wednesday. "We've both had a lot of doubles training, and I think our games complement each other well. I'm very consistent and she hits a lot of power shots."

Anderson, who is also playing in several USTA tournaments this summer, played four one-set matches on Saturday, and two more with Meehan on Sunday.

Have a story and/or photo from the Games you'd like to share? E-mail sports editor Mark Goodman at mgoodman@cnc.com.

World Cup leaves game with questions

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

How best to encapsulate the 2006 World Cup?

Plenty of good, plenty of bad, with a dash of ugly mixed in.

To be sure, there were numerous moments and games that will long live in the memory of football fans around the world.

The competition started with a thrilling 4-2 victory for Germany, with the hosts and Costa Rica going at one another with some incredible goals. Long-distance strikes from Philipp Lahm and Torsten Frings were two of this Cup's best.

The top two, however, both go to Argentina. The "24 pass" goal during the 6-0 thrashing of Serbia and Montenegro was a lesson in how the sport should be played, and Maxi Rodriguez's volley to beat Mexico in overtime may be the best goal these eyes have seen.

Argentina and Germany played the most consistently proper football of the Cup, and it was unfortunate they had to meet one another in the quarterfinals – it was a final-worthy matchup. One gets the feeling that had this competition been played in any other country – or had manager Jose Pekerman not bungled his substitutions so badly against the Germans – Argentina could very

All-Scholastic softball team

Christina Pinkus named among area's elite

Marinterland All-Scholastic teams consider public school athletes from our 13 towns: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: baseball.

Christina Pinkus – Junior Pitcher – Cohasset

Battled through an injury to the thumb of her pitching hand to have another impressive season for the Skippers…While the injury limited her pitching duties during the middle of the year, Pinkus kept things going at the plate, belting five home runs…One of those homers accounted for Cohasset's only run in its Division 3 South first round loss to Greater New Bedford Voc. Tech… Struck out nine GNB hitters in that game as well…Hit a home run May 21 in win over Avon that clinched a postseason berth for the Skippers…Two days earlier, knocked in four runs in 13-3 win over Holbrook…A South Shore League All-Star this season…Also plays soccer for CHS

Shelley Franey – Senior (Capt.) Utility – Abington

Though she spent the bulk of her senior season either on the pitching mound or behind the plate, Franey played all nine positions this spring for the Green Wave and played them all well…Started her AHS career as a second baseman/pitcher for Abington, before jumping to full-time hurler this spring…On the hill, Franey went 5-2, striking out 39 batters in 52 innings and posting a 1.75 ERA…She tossed a two-hitter in a 16-0 win over Carvert, which tied the SSL consecutive wins record with 62-straight…The Green Wave record ended at 67, but the they won their sixth-straight league crown…At the plate, Franey was once again among the leading hitters in the South Shore League with a .545 average…The three-time league All-star could hit just about anyone, nabbing a pair of singles against Duxbury ace Jamie Ducinski in a 5-2 loss…Also a talented soccer and basketball player at AHS, Franey plans to continue her softball career at the American International College where she will major in nursing.

Lauren Conway – Senior (Capt.) Centerfielder – Abington

The catalyst on the Green Wave team, Conway once again shined from the lead-off spot…Led the Abington squad in hitting and was second in the South Shore League with a .571 average…Was among her team's leaders in RBI's with 16, despite being the lead-off hitter…A very quick athlete and a great bunter, Conway was also a very solid defensive centerfielder, making almost a seamless switch from right field last season…A three-year starter and two-year SSL All-star terrorized opposing pitchers throughout the year, but shined in a four-game stretch in May in which she went 13-for-18 with seven runs scored and four RBI, leading Abington to four wins…Was a major part of the Abington program that broke the consecutive wins record in the SSL with 67, besting the previous mark of 62…Until a 6-3 loss to Carver on May 25, the Green Wave had not lost a league game since April 29, 2001…A standout soccer and basketball player at AHS, Conway plans to continue her soccer career at Bridgewater State College next fall.

FROM SOFTBALL, PAGE 17

Courtney Foster – Senior
Pitcher – Abington

In the Abington system as a reserve player the last two seasons, Foster stepped into the spotlight this year and played like she'd been there all along…As one of the two aces of the Green Wave staff, Foster compiled a record of 9-2 for Abington, which snatched up its sixth-consecutive South Shore League title…A hard-throwing right hander, Foster struck out 95 batters and allowed only 13 earned runs in 62 innings pitched…Her ERA of 1.47 placed her tops among her teammates and the South Shore League…Foster was on the mound when the Green Wave broke the SSL consecutive wins record (63) in a 10-0 win over Cohasset…The streak ended at 67…Despite getting the loss, Foster pitched a gem against unbeaten Hanover, tossing six innings and surrendering only a trio of hits and striking out eight in a 3-1 defeat…At the plate, Foster was a solid contributor from the No. six spot in the order, going 23-for-57 for a .404 average and 16 RBI…An SSL All-star, Foster played summers with the Drifters and will continue her softball career at Bridgewater State College next year.

Liz DiMascio – Freshman
Pitcher – Braintree

Bay State Conference hitters can't be looking forward to the prospect of facing DiMascio for another three years after a sterling freshman campaign in 2006…Was at her best down the stretch and into the state tournament, highlighted by 12 innings of three-hit, 19-strikeout, shutout softball in Division 1 South first round upset of second-seeded Milton…Struck out eight and allowed just two unearned runs in quarterfinal loss to Durfee…Tossed five no-hit innings in preliminary round win over Quincy…Threw a complete game no-hitter with 18 K's on May 25 in 6-0 win over Framingham…Racked up another 14 strikeouts in win over Apponequet…Finished with a 16-4 record for the season, and picked up a couple saves along the way while pitching in relief early in the season

Merry MacDonald –
Senior (Capt.)
Third baseman – Braintree

Rebounded from early-season finger and facial injuries to have another strong season atop the Wamps' lineup…Scored the only run in tournament upset over Milton; after leading off the top of the 12th inning with a double, MacDonald eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by fellow All-Scholastic Kelsey Souza…Had two hits and a run scored in Division 1 South quarterfinals loss to Durfee…Knows how to get on base, can hit for power and brings a lot of speed to the basepaths…Also a defensive standout at the hot corner…MacDonald was also a Marinerland All-Scholastic this year for volleyball and basketball…A starter and second-leading scorer for the state champion basketball team… Will play softball and volleyball at Wheaton College

Kelsey Souza –
Senior (Capt.)
Shortstop – Braintree

Ended her athletic career at Braintree High in style with an impressive season at shortstop for the Wamps…Batted over .300 in the heart of Braintree's order, and was also rock solid in the field…Her sacrifice fly in the top of the 12th inning of the Division 1 South first round game with second-seeded Milton gave Braintree the win, knocking in fellow All-Scholastic Merry MacDonald…Also had an RBI in quarterfinal loss to Durfee…Racked up a season-best four hits in playoff win over Quincy…Souza also played soccer and ice hockey at BHS, and was a starting defender for the state champion soccer team last fall…Will continue her softball career at Rhode Island College

Ashley Messina –
Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher – Hanover

Voted the Boston Globe's Div. 2 Player of the Year and for good reason…Messina was virtually un-hittable this spring, registering a record of 22-1 and guiding her Lady Indians to their fourth-straight Patriot League title (14-0) and an appearance in the Div. 2 South semifinals…Messina's off-speed, finesse style kept several opposing batters off balance this season, resulting in an untouchable 0.35 ERA and 20-0 regular season record…A three-year PL All-star, Messina racked up 117 strikeouts while walking no batters…Her career numbers find her with a record of 52-6…Tossed a no-hitter in a 2-0 victory over Pembroke, which clinched the PL crown…Was brilliant in a 2-1 victory over rival Duxbury in the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South tourney, surrendering just three hits and one earned run in seven innings…Ten of her wins were shutouts and Messina only allowed more than one run in two regular season games…The Lady Indians finished the regular season unbeaten at 20-0…An honor roll student throughout her four years at HHS, Messina will continue her softball career at Bentley College next year and major in finance.

Kelly Downs –
Senior (Capt.)
Catcher – Hanover

To put it simply, Downs has been one of the staples for the Lady Indians over the last three seasons…The No. 3 hitter in the lineup, Downs was a force at the plate, hitting .478 this season, while driving in 31 runs…The two-time Patriot League All-star goes down as one of Hanover High's best ever hitters with a career .455 average with eight homeruns and a school record 104 RBI…Packed with power, Downs was also a very patient hitter…Came up huge in several games this season, notching a two-run double to give the Lady Indians a 3-1 win over rival Abington…The senior captain also got a rally going against Apponequet in the opening round of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney with a single…Hanover went onto win the game in extra innings, 4-3, and reach the semifinals, where they were edged by eventual state champs, Norton…Behind the plate, Downs worked closely with fellow All-Scholastic pitcher Ashley Messina in rendering battlers helpless en route to a 20-0 regular season and 14-0 PL title…Downs threw out 90 percent of base stealers, allowing only one this season…Also a talented field hockey player at HHS, Downs plans to play both sports at Bridgewater State College next year.

Angela Stearns –
Senior (Capt.)
Third baseman – Hanover

Was among the leading hitters in the Patriot League again this season, guiding the Lady Indians to their fourth-straight title…The No. 2 hitter, Stearns was known for her power-packed swing, garnering a .404 average with 23 hits in 57 at-bats…A two-time PL All-star and captain her senior season, Stearns was a solid extra-base hitter notching six doubles and smashing two homeruns this spring, while driving in 15…One of the highlights of the season came when Stearns broke a 6-6 tie with rival Abington via a seventh inning three-run homerun to right center, leading the Lady Indians to a 9-6 win…A three-year starter at third base, Stearns was a defensive stalwart, who rarely made mistakes in the field…Solidified a defense that shut out 10 opponents and allowed only two teams to score multiple runs this spring…Hanover finished the regular season with an unblemished 20-0 record while going 14-0 in the Patriot League…The squad knocked off Apponequet and rival Duxbury to reach the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where they fell to eventual state champ, Norton…Stearns was also a talented field hockey player at HHS…She plans to continue her softball career in college.

Lesley Guenard –
Sophomore
Shortstop – Hanover

Already playing well beyond her years…Guenard is a two-year starter, playing second base last year…Got the starting shortstop gig this season and made a near seamless transition, recording only a trio of errors at the highly active infield slot…The lead-off hitter for the Lady Indians, Guenard went 39-for-71 this season for a .549 average to lead the Hanover squad…Guenard's speed on the base paths was uncompromised, stealing 24 bases, and her patience at the plate resulted in only four strikeouts…Was a consistent hitter throughout the season, but also came up big when needed most…Notched a game-winning grand slam in a 5-1 win over Marshfield, breaking open a once very close 2-1 game, and laced a single to right field to drive in the game-winning run in a 2-1 victory over rival Duxbury in the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South tourney…Her consistent performance at the plate and in the field helped the Lady Indians record a 20-0 regular season and 14-0 Patriot League mark, winning their fourth-straight title…A PL All-star on the soccer field and the basketball court, Guenard still has two more years to dominate at HHS.

Jean McIntyre – Senior
Catcher – Marshfield

Though her numbers slipped a bit from last season, McIntyre was still one of the most consistent performers for the Marshfield squad…The senior leader from the catcher's position, McIntyre hit .322 from the lead-off spot in the Lady Rams' order…A terror on the bases, McIntyre scored 17 runs this spring, while driving in six others…McIntyre hit a triple and a homerun this season…Behind the plate, McIntyre was one of the most accurate catchers in the Old Colony League in terms of throwing out would-be base stealers…This season, the OCL All-star caught 14 base runners, including nabbing a pair at third base…Beyond her skills, coach Kathy O'Donnell said her leadership will be perhaps more difficult to replace…"Her ability, knowledge of the game and leadership, I honestly don't know how I'll replace it. I never had to worry about things when she was in the game. I was actually dreading the last game for that reason," said O'Donnell…McIntyre was a three-sport athlete at MHS, also playing volleyball and basketball…She plans to attend college in the fall.

Taryn Asta – Sophomore
Shortstop – Marshfield

Another player who performs like a veteran, Asta is making the All-Scholastic team because of her stellar defensive contribution to the Old Colony League Marshfield squad…Just a sophomore, the Lady Rams rarely had to worry when a ball was hit in Asta's direction as the first-year starter recorded only six errors at the high volume position…The OCL All-star's quickness and ability enabled her to record a triple play in a game this season, catching a line drive, stepping on second and throwing to first to catch a runner off the bag…Came up big defensively several times during the year, but shined in a 2-1 nine-inning loss against the hard-hitting Hanover team, recording eight putouts… Her slick defense kept the 6-14 Lady Rams in several games this season, with five losses settled by two or less runs…"Taryn is so graceful out there," said coach Kathy O'Donnell. "She never loses a step. She just goes out there and gets the job done. If she makes a mistake, she shakes it off and doesn't let it bother her. Her presence and demeanor on the field were incredible."…Hit over .300 for most of the season, scoring 12 runs and driving in six…Asta was also a starting guard on the MHS girls basketball team this past winter, which won the OCL title.

Chelsea Bracchi -
Senior (Capt.)
Third Base - Pembroke

Despite only being a program for just two short years the Pembroke softball team has made a name for itself as a consistent tournament contender, and Bracchi is a main reason why. Having served as team captain for both seasons she is a fine example of leadership being willing to play any position on the field before settling in at third base during the course of this season and excelling at the hot corner.

Bracchi was also one of the leading hitters on the team this season forming a formidable 3-4 combo with fellow all-scholastic Caitlin Flaherty. Her leadership qualities were also on display on other sports as she captained both the field hockey and basketball teams, while earning all-star recognition for field hockey.

Bracchi is an honor roll student who also enjoys movies, art and music in addition to sports.

Caitlin Flaherty -
Senior (Capt.)
Catcher – Pembroke

The most important position on the field for a young team with a young pitching staff is behind the plate, and Pembroke was blessed this season with an experienced senior catcher in Flaherty. This season she led the Titans in hitting while helping the team to its second straight postseason berth for the young program. She was also a helpful influence on the young pitching the Titans had and was named team MVP for the second straight year after being named rookie of the year as a sophomore at Silver Lake.

Flaherty is active in the community as she is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution as well as the New England Press Association. She has won awards for sports writing and news writing, and won the Will McDonought essay contest this past year.

She was also a member of the volleyball and girls basketball teams this year, and hopes to continue her softball career in college while focusing on her writing talents.

Kristina Borelli -
Senior (Capt.)
Second base – Silver Lake

Kara Burden - Senior Catcher – Silver Lake

Katelyn O'Donnell -
Senior (Capt.)
Shortstop – Silver Lake

Katie Corey –
Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher – Weymouth

Honorable Mention:

Cathy Greenough – Jr. – Second base – Abington
Erin Foster – Sr. – Rightfielder – Abington
Maegan Cook – Sr. (Capt.) – Centerfielder - Braintree
Katie Jenkins – Sr. (Capt.) – Catcher – Braintree
Melissa Crowley-Buck – Sr. (Capt.) – Outfielder - Cohasset
Lindsay Mallett – Sr. – Rightfielder - Hanover
Joanna Riley – Sr. – Centerfielder – Hanover
Emily Bulman – Sr. (Capt.) – Catcher – Hingham
Kristina Prusik – Jr. (Capt.) – Catcher - Holbrook
Taylor Kerr – Jr. – Pitcher – Marshfield
Nichole McIntyre – Sr. – Second base - Marshfield
Katelyn Green – Sr. (Capt.) – Shortstop - Pembroke
Crissa Morton – Sr. (Capt.) – Catcher – Rockland
Katie Stanley – Fr. – Pitcher – Silver Lake

World Cup leaves game with questions

well have won it all.

But they didn't, and the Italians were right there to take over. Marcello Lippi's side deserves credit for adapting its game to the situation that was calling for it. Whether it was going into a shell while playing with 10 men against Australia, or going all-out for the win against Germany to avoid penalties, Italy did everything it needed to do to bring home the trophy.

Looking back, it is astonishing to think that the United States' best performance (by far) came against the eventual champions. The boys in the red, white and blue showed a level of heart and attacking verve that was embarrassingly lacking against the Czech Republic and Ghana.

As was expected, Bruce Arena took the hit, and deciding on his successor will be one of the most important decisions the United States Soccer Federation has faced in its history. What is needed most is a coach with the tactical wherewithal to bring the best out of Landon Donovan, DaMarcus Beasley, Clint Dempsey, Bobby Convey and Eddie Johnson. All except Dempsey and occasionally Convey looked rather lost in Germany last month.

Seeing how Ghana performed against Brazil took a little of the sting off the Yanks' loss to the Africans in Nuremberg. Ghana vastly outplayed its South American counterparts only to go down in an unjust 3-0 defeat. With no one in its core of top players – including Michael Essien, Stephen Appiah, Sulley Muntari and Haminu Draman – older than 25, the Ghanaians figure to improve on their second round showing in 2010.

And who can forget the sublime play of Zinedine Zidane in the knockout stages, carrying the French to the final with wins over Spain, Brazil and Portugal? It was a one-man clinic, and a display for the ages.

Of course, no one will forget Zizou's red card in the final after headbutting Marco Materazzi, either – which leads us to the not-so-good side of the tournament.

The number of red and yellow cards brandished during this Cup shattered previous records for the competition. Some were just, others not, but more amazing still is the number of dastardly deeds that went unpunished.

If FIFA is to take one thing away from this tournament, it should be to take a more proactive stance to punish wrongdoings missed by the match referee. How is Luis Figo allowed to play against England after headbutting Holland's Mark van Bommel in the second round? How is Thierry Henry not admonished for his dive against Spain that led to the game-winning goal?

It is one thing when lesser players "cheat" in an attempt to gain an advantage. But there is no excuse for world class players like Henry and Cristiano Ronaldo to be diving and flopping like fish out of water.

Spanish defender Carles Puyol barely touched Henry (on the sternum, no less) on that play in the 82nd minute, yet the Frenchman grabbed his face and fell to the ground like he had been punched. It was an absolute disgrace, made more shameful by the fact that players of Henry's caliber should not have to resort to such fiendish activities.

One of the images I will always take from this World Cup was the sight of Portugal's Deco and Holland's Giovanni van Bronckhorst - both sent off with two yellow cards - sitting together and watching the end of their teams' second round match, both with bewildered and disappointed looks on their faces. Looking back on it, as much blame as referee Valentin Ivanov deserves for overseeing that circus of a match, the players were just as responsible – if not more so – because of their dishonest actions that made a mockery of the game.

If the sport is to progress, this phenomenon of diving must be stopped. It is nearly impossible for a referee to discern a dive from a legitimate foul during the run of play; any questionable tactics must be reviewed on tape after the match, with any guilty parties automatically suspended for a game.

There was much talk during the Cup about this very subject, which sufficiently distracted us from another major problem: a lack of goals.

The goals per game average was the second-lowest in World Cup history, thanks largely in part to extremely conservative coaches who were afraid to let their teams play the game.

It amazes me how many coaches went with a 4-5-1 formation despite overwhelming evidence that it simply doesn't work. It was the classic axiom of playing not to lose rather than to win, and it stands to cause significant damage to the game of coaches don't get their acts together.

The next major international tournaments come next year in Venezuela with the Copa America and with the Euro '08 competition in Austria and Switzerland. Hopefully, these matters will be resolved by then.

The Best 11

Keeper – Gianluigi Buffon (Italy)

Buffon allowed just one goal by an opposing player for the entire tournament. Yes, the defense in front of him had a lot to do with that, but Buffon came up with huge saves against Australia, Germany and France, with his stop on Zidane in the final's first overtime ranking as perhaps the tournament's best save.

Defenders – Fabio Grosso (Italy), Fabio Cannavaro (Italy), Ricardo Carvalho (Portugal), Gianluca Zambrotta (Italy)

It is hard to argue against the dominance of the Italian back four throughout the Cup. Cannavaro was a rock for all seven games, and Zambrotta switched from left to right back and was always a presence. Grosso gets the nod for his part in three of the Italians' most critical plays: drawing the penalty against Australia, scoring a fabulous game-winning goal in the 118th minute against Germany, and slotting home the final penalty kick in the win over France.

Carvalho was the sound presence amid the inanity that was Portugal's run to the semifinals. His play against a more talented Dutch side was perhaps the biggest reason for that monumental victory.

Midfielders – Bastian Schweinsteiger (Germany), Andrea Pirlo (Italy), Zidane (France), Appiah (Ghana)

Playing on the left flank, the 21-year old Schweinsteiger came to symbolize the younger, more ambitious approach to the game that coach Jurgen Klinsmann brought to the German side. Pirlo was as immaculate as ever in the middle of the park for Italy, his passes always finding their mark and his spot kicks always wreaking havoc on the opponents' defense.

Appiah barely gets the nod over teammate Essien. Who knows what may have happened against Brazil had the latter been able to play?

Strikers – Miroslav Klose (Germany), Fernando Torres (Spain)

The whispers of "overrated" were beginning to surround Torres heading into the World Cup, but "El Nino" put those to rest with a terrific display in Germany. He scored three goals in four games and was always a threat with his size and remarkable speed. Manchester United has come calling for his services, as sure a sign as any that Torres, just 22, is among the elite strikers in the world today.

Klose led the tournament with five goals, including a clutch equalizer against Argentina.

SPORTS NOTES

South Shore Soccer Camp and Squirts Camp

Cohasset Recreation Department has announced that registrations are being accepted for South Shore Soccer Camp's summer clinics, which take place for one week only, Monday, July 31, through Friday, Aug. 4. Jon Anderson will direct the camp again this year at Milliken Field, Cohasset.

There are two camps offered this summer for two different age groups. For boys and girls, ages 7 to 14, the SSSC will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The boys and girls camps are operated separately. The one-week session is $255 per participant, with a $20 discount for a second child. The fee includes a shirt and a ball for each participant, available the first day of camp. For boys and girls ages 4 to 6, the Soccer Squirts Camp will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m., each day. The price is $90 per Squirt, with no discount for a second child.

Complete the application form in the brochure at the Cohasset Recreation Department office to register. Space is limited – early registration is advised.

AAU Girls Basketball Practice Combines

We welcome girls from Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate, Weymouth, and all surrounding towns that were born after January 1, 1992 for instruction, drills, fun competition, and full-court games at the Weymouth Naval Base, Sunday nights, starting July 30 and continuing Aug. 6, 13, 20, 27 from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

AAU tournaments begin after Labor Day. Contact Jack Wholey for more information at 781-956-7473 or ywholey@aol.com.

IT'S HAPPENING

Minnesota artist to play carillon

The fifth recital in the Summer Series of concerts from the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset will take place on Sunday, July 23, at 6 p.m., and will feature David Johnson, carillonneur of the House of Hope Presbyterian Church, St. Paul, Minn. Johnson earned his certification as a carillonneur member of the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America on the Cohasset carillon in 1996, and Sunday's recital will mark his second appearance as recitalist on the regular Summer Series. His program will include original carillon compositions by John Knox and Stephen Paulus, transcriptions of works by F. G. Handel and Adger Williams, pieces based on Appalachian White Spirituals, a group of hymn tune arrangements, a medley of popular tunes, closing the program with "American, the Beautiful."

The hour-long recital is free of charge and will take place rain or shine. Listeners are invited to bring law chairs, blankets and picnic suppers to the Cohasset Common or to the church courtyard on Highland Avenue extension. If it rains, listen to the bells from parked cars. Printed programs, schedules and brochures are available in a stand by the courtyard, and will also be distributed on the Common. Visitors are invited to meet the carillonneur after the recital, and there will be an Open Tower tour and carillon demonstration at that time for anyone interested in climbing the 45 steps to the playing level.

For more information, call St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083 weekdays, between 9 a.m. noon, or the carillonneur, Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599, or the assistant carillonneur, Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599.

Buttonwood Books hosts writing program

Buttonwood Books & Toys and Grub Street, a Boston independent writing center, will present Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a program for writers. The next seminar will take place Tuesday, July 25, at 7 p.m. The topic is Flash Writing and the instructor is Linda Button.

Looking for a spark to get writing again? This workshop focuses on tricks and tactics to get pen to paper and let it flow. Participants can walk away with good starter material to build on later. The program is for new writers and experienced writers who want a little refresher jolt.

Button's stories have appeared in several literary magazines, including Cimarron Review and Passages North, which nominated her fiction for a Pushcart Prize. Three of her plays have been performed in BU's annual Playwrights Marathon.

This is a free event. Reservations are appreciated. Call Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 781-383-2665 for reservations or more information.

Concert Band to perform July 25

A make up concert will take place Tuesday, July 25, at 7:30 p.m., for the concert that was postponed on July 11. Performing will be the 30-piece South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Richard P. Whitmarsh.

The concert is free of charge and sponsored by the South Shore Playhouse Associates and the American Federation of Musicians. The performance will take place on Cohasset Common.

Attendees can bring their own lawn chairs or blankets to sit on. Should weather concerns prevail, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109, after 1 p.m., on July 25, for the status of the concert.

Energy committee to take request to Town Meeting made), but it concerns me you haven't talked to them about this," said Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee.

Advisory Committee member Pat Waters concurred. "I haven't really heard much about it," said Waters of the work being done by the energy committee. He added he was not sure what the money would be spent on, as it was unclear whether the person would be a town employee or a contracted consultant, how many hours that person would work and how long he or she would work for.

Members of the committee Mimi White, Mike Bliss and Andrew Willard said they envisioned having a person to work between 16 to 19 hours per week for six months, at which time their services would no longer be needed. They said having one person that can coordinate energy audits and carry out ideas that committee members could not as they are working during the day, would greatly benefit the town. However, there was no job description drafted, which the Advisory Committee said it would like to see.

Advisory Committee member Merle Brown said he has attended some of the Alternative Energy Committee's meetings and he thinks the work it is doing is a great asset to the town. Much research has been done regarding the use of wind turbines as well as partnering with National Grid to conduct regular energy audits. However, "I have a problem with your coming to the Advisory Board at this time," he said, adding the Reserve Fund is supposed to be spent on unforeseen or emergency matters and he doesn't see that this request completely qualifies. He said he doesn't see the harm in waiting until Town Meeting to ask the residents if they will support funding the position. "We don't know if there will be an emergency and the tow n might need it," Brown said of the funding.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said where the energy committee is so new, the territory is uncharted for everyone. "It's very complicated," he said of the issues which are being brought up at the meetings, adding it might make sense to have a professional on board who can help explain some of the issues. He added if everyone agrees to bring the request to a Town Meeting, he would be happy to write the article for the committee for the fall Special Town Meeting.

Advisory Committee member Roger Hill said he thought it was a great idea to bring the matter before Town Meeting, and that he would support approving the funds transfer in that venue. However, he added the energy committee would need to bring all the facts to the table to really explain why the position is needed and what the person would do in the role. "When people are confused, their first instinct is to vote it down," he said.

Advisory Committee member Sam Wakeman said he agreed with Hill. "I would support this as an article at Town Meeting, but not as a Reserve Fund transfer tonight."

The town of Hull currently has two wind turbines generating electricity. Cohasset's Alternative Energy Committee has been conducting research into whether Cohasset could use a similar kind of alternate energy source. The committee came before the Advisory Committee last week, asking for a Reserve Fund transfer to hire a point-person to take the lead on some of its initiatives.

Commuters finding smooth sailing

Express has supplemented its service with additional vessels during peak times.

Two tunnels have been closed since Monday, July 10, when a ceiling section of the Interstate 90 connector came down, crushing a car and killing the female passenger who was traveling to the airport with her husband.

The MBTA, which is building the Greenbush Line that will restore commuter rail service to the area, contracts out the Quincy service to Harbor Express and the Hingham commuter boat to Boston Harbor Cruises.

McGurl explained commuters who work nearer Government Center, the North End and the Faneuil Hall Marketplace also use the Harbor Express service which docks behind the Marriott Long Wharf near Columbia Park to get to work and back. The Hingham commuter boat, which draws upwards of 3,000 daily commuters, docks at Rowes Wharf.

Alison Nolan, general manager at Boston Harbor Cruises, said the day following the tunnel failure, commuter boat ridership was up 13 percent.

"The day following that and through today, we are seeing a 2 to 3 percent increase," she said Tuesday.

Tom Maloney of Hingham, who has taken the boat to work for 11 years, said he could see the increase in riders.

"I take the 6 a.m. almost daily and it is usually quieter," Maloney said. "Now it is as crowded as the 7:45 a.m. boat which is always the busiest boat during the morning."

Several other commuters surveyed said they noticed a definite increase in riders while others said it was hard to tell, noting that ridership is usually up in the summer.

Nolan notes the boats are a wonderful way to commute in the summer because commuters can sit outside on the deck and enjoy Boston Harbor.

Both Nolan and McGurl said boat service is competitive in light of gasoline prices and parking fees.

The average commuter from Hingham pays $5.40 each way plus $1 to park. The trip takes 35 minutes on the ferry and 25 minutes on the catamaran.

The Harbor Express trip on the catamaran from Quincy to the airport is $12 each way. The Massport shuttle bus that takes travelers to their plane terminals and back to the dock is free.

Martha Bewick of Harbor Consultancy International, a consultant in ferryboat systems, said what happened this past week illustrates the need for more ferry service in Massachusetts.

"On 9-11, when the Hudson River transit system was closed down, New York Waterway ferries increased ridership from 30,000 that day to 200,000," she said.

"When transit strikes are threatened in New York City, a call goes out to ferries throughout New England and along the East Coast to position themselves for backup to carry Manhattan commuters.

"When San Francisco transportation planners realized how popular the ferries became as an alternative to the Bay Bridge, which had collapsed in the earthquake, they moved on to make the new routes permanent," Bewick said.

"I hope Governor Romney and his team will eventually come to understand how our underutilized harbor and bay rights of way can be made a more integral part of a redundant transit system, critical links in keeping us going in times of need," she said.

McGurl, who praised the MBTA for working with Harbor Express to expand the service over the past week, said the boat is a great transportation alternative. "It's a great way to start and end your day or your trip," he said.

Cohasset's Barbara Canney could not agree more.

"We don't go often, but the Quincy boat to the airport is the only way to go," she said. "We love it. It's nice to come home to a relaxing transition on the boat."

Boston commuters disembark from the Aurora at Hewitt's Cove in Hingham on Tuesday evening. Most commuters surveyed through the Cohasset Mariner and Hingham Journal Readers Advisory Networks have seen an increase in ridership on the commuter boat since the Big Dig tunnel failure last week.

Local teens like life on the farm

work. They are also asked to prepare a meal for family and friends using the produce and herbs they harvested at the farm themselves.

"You learn a lot about planting and how to take care of the farm and its animals," said Tina, as Holly Hill farmers not only tend to more than 100 different varieties of plants, they take care of many animals including hens, roosters, goats, a bunny, dogs and a Welsh pony named Pumpkin. In addition, through a partnership with the Weir River Farm in Hingham, the students are able to travel to that farm for one day and take care of its extensive livestock lineup, as it has everything from cows, to horses, to pigs, to llamas.

Both Tina and Hannah participated in Holly Hill's Young Farmer's program last summer, and this year enlisted Melissa to join the fun. All three participated in a school field trip to the farm in the sixth grade and said they had such a good time, they were excited to come back. This week, they harvested a large amount of garlic, helped build a shelter for the goats and sowed lettuce seeds. They have also been weeding the herb garden and feeding the animals.

The girls have taken a special liking to the hens, and each has her favorite. "They're really cute," said Tina, adding she has named her favorite reddish-brown hen, "Chico." Hannah's favorite is a white and black hen named "Oreo" and Melissa's favorite is also a reddish-brown hen named "Alessandro."

The farm was awarded its organic certification in 2000 for following the guidelines provided by the National Organic Program of the USDA. This means it promises not to use any synthetic fertilizers, pesticides or herbicides, and guarantees the farm to be free of genetically modified organisms. The Young Farmers' Program teaches those who participate about the importance of not using chemicals when growing produce and the effects of chemicals on the environment.

Young Farmers help add to the compost pile at the farm, which is used as a natural fertilizer for the farm's plants. "It has very good nutrients," said Hannah, without adversely affecting the environment. The girls have also learned about the importance of crop rotation, which has farmers planting in different areas each year to ensure the soil does not have all its nutrients stripped from it and it can provide the food growing plants need.

At the end of the program, the girls will make a meal using the produce they have tended to and harvested over the course of the week. Last year, Tina and Hannah said they made pizza with pesto, and this year all three girls plan to make garlic bread and may even try to bake some zucchini bread as well. Of course, salad is a must with all the fresh greens, carrots, tomatoes and herbs for making dressing.

The program is for children entering grades seven through nine, which means this will be the last year for all three girls to participate. However, they said they would recommend the program to anyone with an interest in farming because it teaches important lessons, but is also a lot of fun.

Holly Hill Farm is a working, for-profit farm with a non-profit educational branch, and the two work together to educate the community on the benefits of local and organic farming. There is one session left of the Young Farmer's Program, which runs the week of July 24 through the 28. For more information on the farm or any of its programs, please contact either Educational Director Jon Belber or farmers Ben Wolbach or Hannah Hobbs at (781) 383-1455 or visit the farm's Web site at www.hollyhillfarm.org.

LIBRARY CORNER

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center presents "Full Spectrum," a collection of recent oil paintings by local artist Judy St. Peter, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; closed Wednesdays.

Knitting Group – Come join the knitting group on Thursdays, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., in the library's Historical Room. This is a fun group for all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring a knitting project and join like-minded friends at the library.

Library Book Group – Join the group for coffee and discussion of Marilynne Robinson's "Housekeeping" on Thursday, July 27, 10 a.m., in the Meeting Room. The book is about Ruth and her younger sister, Lucille, who grow up haphazardly, first under the care of their competent grandmother, then of two comically bumbling great-aunts, and finally of Sylvie, the eccentric and remote sister of their dead mother. Ruth and Lucille's struggle toward adulthood illuminates the price of loss and survival, and the dangerous and deep undertow of transience.

Library via email – Sign up to receive the new library newsletter via email. Learn of programs for children or adults. Receive up-to-date information about library news by visiting the Web site, www.cohassetlibrary.org, and click E-Mail List Registration. Music with MamaSteph – MamaSteph will perform in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Mondays, at 10:30 a.m., through Aug. 7. Music with MamaSteph is open to all ages and communities. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

FOR CHILDREN

Puzzle Club – Marjorie Murphy will once again host Puzzle Club, which is for is for students going into grades three and older. It is a drop-in program. The library has all new jigsaw puzzles, from 100-piece puzzles to challenging 500-piece puzzles. Bring a team of puzzle makers or come alone and join a team. Puzzle Club meets in the Story Hour Room from 7 to 8:45 p.m. Prompt pick up is required. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Animal Adventures – On Tuesday, July 25, at 5 and 7 p.m., Animal Adventures will feature a hands-on approach to learning about backyard and exotic animals. Animal Adventures vision is dedicated to making the world a better place for all living things. Join the adventure as it begins at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Space is limited, so adhere to the time and age requirements. The 5 p.m. show is for ages 6 and younger; the 7 p.m. show is for age 7 and older.

Reading Lists – The summer reading lists for grades six through 12 can be found on the library Web site. Go to cohassetlibrary.org, click on Young Adult and then click on Cohasset Public Schools' Summer Reading List. Don't wait until the last minute to do summer reading; popular books are going fast. Old Ship birthday picnic

Since Hingham Old Ship Meeting House soon will launch a celebration of its 325th anniversary, it is only fitting that this National Historic site was part of Hingham's Fourth of July Parade.

Thus, a float bearing a replica of the familiar gothic structure will herald the beginning of the celebration – a town-wide picnic on July 29, 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., on the lawn of the church. Included will be a timber-raising, samples of period food and children's games, tours of Old Ship and the Hingham Cemetery, a tribute by the Hingham Militia and a few brief speeches.

Queen of the Atlantic

Ocean liner makes passengers feel like royalty

By Fran Golden

ABOARD THE QUEEN MARY 2 — My relatives came over in steerage generations ago, but for my first trans-Atlantic voyage, I packed my fanciest clothes and headed to London and then south to Southampton, U.K., to cross the Atlantic on this hugely fabulous Cunard Line ship to New York. I felt downright royal.

There is something about a Crossing: a tradition to uphold, conquering the Atlantic. And it just has to be on every experienced traveler's must-do list.

Yet I boarded the Queen Mary 2 with some trepidation. Would I be bored with six days at sea? Would I get seasick? Would we encounter icebergs or rogue waves?

Still, Uma Thurman had recently upheld the celebrity/rich and famous-end of the tradition of going a Crossing, in her case after finding an invite for a freebie in her Oscars goodie bag. I, too, would go for it.

The Queen Mary 2, as befits her ocean liner status, is not your typical cruise ship.

For one, the $800 million vessel, owned by Carnival Corp., is really, really big, one of the largest ships in the world at 151,400 gross tons and nearly four football fields in length and with a passenger capacity that tops 3,000. She has a hard hull to deal with the sometimes-rough Atlantic (of which she is the only cruise ship to cross on a regular schedule) and more activities offerings than anyone could possibly imagine doing in six days — including lectures hosted by Oxford University, acting classes with graduates of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and shows in the ship's planetarium.

But the biggest difference is her old-fashioned ocean liner class system. Guests are assigned dining rooms based on their cabin status.

My friend Kim and I were in a Princess Suite, which meant a nice-sized cabin with private balcony and chilled champagne awaiting our arrival. And, that we dined in the Princess Grill, a nice restaurant where the wait staff was perfectly versed in pampering (including finishing some dishes like excellent steaks and lamb chops tableside).

In fact, our entire experience on the Queen Mary 2 involved fine service and pampering.

Above us were Queens Suites, with Queens guests dining in the Queens Grill, similar to our Princess venue but with the added advantage of hot and cold running luxuries, including caviar.

Below us were the normal passengers, dining in Britannia, a perfectly nice, large, two-story dining room with a Titanic ambience.

We decided it was worth it to upgrade to Princess if you can if for no other reason than to feel a tad superior to the masses.

Given the sense of history that a Crossing inspires, Kim and I were a little surprised to hear a Caribbean band playing "Hot, Hot, Hot" at sailaway. And that the crowd, the vast majority British and American (the Brits outnumbering Americans by a few hundred) was, well, a little cruise ship-y.

We wanted Elizabeth Taylor dressed in a little black dress and pearls, holding a white poodle (there is such a photo on display on the ship), not people in shorts and jeans doing a conga line. We did spy one person at the sailaway in a cocktail dress; we weren't, however, sure whether it was a man or woman.

Soul-searching on the Promenade Deck

It did in fact turn out that the overall atmosphere on the Queen Mary 2 was not as formal as we had anticipated. And this was something some passengers complained about and others seemed to rejoice in (like the folks in the pub who showed up in casual attire even on the three formal nights).

The reality is you could find fancy if you wanted it, especially in the Queen's Room, the ship's ballroom, where ballgowns and tuxes were on full display — and man, could these people dance. The ship's big band playing, we even observed a pair of kids, the young man in a white tux, his tiny partner in a long black dress with black gloves, impressively waltzing across the dance floor.

At the captain's cocktail party for Princess and Queens guests, one well-dressed couple (from England but transplanted to the United States) complained to Kim and me that the shipboard ambience was not as luxurious as they anticipated. Sipping on free champagne, they then went on to complain how Americans are butchering the English language. OK, whatever.

Kim and I quickly established our favorite shipboard spots from the long list of lounges and bars and entertainment venues.

Topping the list was the Canyon Ranch SpaClub, where (for a fee) guests can soak in the warm bubbling waters of the Thalassotherapy Pool. So relaxing was the experience, I was practically hallucinating (or maybe it was all the Dramamine I took as protection against slightly rocky seas; although for all but one day of the trip the Atlantic was pretty darn smooth).

The spa also has a whirlpool, fantastic aroma steamroom and herbal sauna. And in between visits to these, you can scoop ice from a fountain and — if you are like me — when no one else is looking, pretend to be Kim Basinger in "Nine 1/2 Weeks."

Another favorite spot was the Golden Lion pub, where you can chow down on excellent fish and chips washed down with beer on tap while you watch sporting events on the TV screens or passengers playing darts. We happened to be onboard during the World Cup and moaned and groaned with a sizeable crowd when England lost its final match — one man sat at the bar, tears rolling down his cheeks.

The pub is also the ship's nighttime karaoke venue, where Ken from the U.K. did a decent "Summertime Blues" with a strong British accent, and one girl butchered Roberta Flack so badly she was "killing us softly" with her voice.

The G32 disco, where one "Graham Cracker" was the not-very-exciting DJ, attracted the vessel's small late-night party crowd. The casino — with its Monte Carlo-ish card room and Carnival Cruise-ish slots area — also had attendees in the wee hours.

Boston's contribution to the Queen Mary 2 is Todd English's eponymous restaurant, Moroccan-inspired in decor and serving such Todd treats as "potato love letters" (creamy potato and truffle-filled ravioli: scrumptious) and a warm, melting chocolate cake. ($30 extra charge for dining here at dinner, $20 at lunch).

Rather than stay inside and do the machines in the well-equipped gym, I decided to walk off calories on the Promenade Deck, where one lap around the ship equals a third of a mile. On several days I braved winds and ocean spray, but I set my goal at 2.2 miles a day and stuck to it (on the one day when rain and winds closed the deck, I devised a route inside the ship).

On one of my walks, I kept passing a man with binoculars looking out to sea and finally asked what he was looking at. "Anything," he replied. And then he pointed to a cargo ship in the distance. We had not seen land for five days. And we were somewhere off the coast of Newfoundland. It was not until later that I realized our conversation took place near the site of the Titantic.

About those icebergs, I chatted with Commodore Ronald Warwick, who is retiring this month as Master of the Queen Mary 2 (he was onboard our cruise as a guest) and he said he couldn't remember ever seeing one during his 36 years at sea.

"As far as ice is concerned it has always been my policy to plot a course around 20 to 25 miles south of any known ice — we get the ice forecasts from the International Ice Patrol and several weather stations," he said.

He did, however, encounter a 90-foot rogue wave once, as captain of the Queen Elizabeth 2.

"But the ship was built very strongly, so there was only superficial damage to the vessel and no one was injured. And most people slept through it as it occurred at 2 in the morning," Warwick said.

The last day of our trans-Atlantic cruise was truly memorable. Folks got up at 4:15 a.m. (or just stayed up all night) to see the ship enter the waters of New York. At about 4:30 a.m., the ship sailed under the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, so close that those on top felt they could practically jump up and touch it. And then Manhattan came into view. And then there she was: Lady Liberty standing proudly before us just as the sun began to rise.

My grandparents or their parents saw this view. I felt lucky to be seeing it while wearing a plush bathrobe provided by this luxury liner, on which I was treated like a princess.

The Queen Mary 2 makes six-day trans-Atlantic crossings to and from New York from May to November. Rates are from $1,419 to $4,459 for Britannia cabins, $4,999 to $7,309 for Princess Suites and $7,379 to $37,159 for Queen's Suites. The ship also sails in Europe, the Caribbean, Canada/New England and South America, and will make her first World Cruise in 2007.

Social Lubrication jazzes up Jamie's brunch

CD release party set for July 30

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

A one-man musical industry - that's how Braintree drummer Brian Kelley has been described more than once in by local music critics.

It's not off the mark, as the versatile musician currently splits his time recording and/or club-gigging with three regular bands, namely Social Lubrication (jazz), The Part Time Lovers (blues, R&B) and his own Brian Kelley Group (formerly Majic — pop, Top 40, commercial).

Kelley also is or has been a freelance musician, producer, educator/clinician and owner of his self-founded LSK Records and Brian Kelley Music, from which he has produced three full-length Social Lubrication CDs via his home studios in Braintree — including 2001's "Ketchup & Rivets," "Get Enjoyed" in 2004 and the new release "A Life on the Way."

These discs — the most recent two performed in a spare, traditional acoustic jazz trio format including Kelley (drums) and bandmates Ken Cook (piano) and (on the latest) Kendall Eddy (bass) — suggest that despite his diversity, Kelley is really a jazzman at heart. Social Lubrication will hold its official CD release party for the band's new disc Sunday (July 30) with a return to the Jazz Brunch at Jamie's Pub in Marshfield from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The new disc is aptly named as the 32-year-old musician and his wife are expecting their first child in September.

"The knowledge that my wife and I have our first child coming in September, I think, somehow brought out a new kind of excitement in our playing as a trio in the studio for this disc," said Kelley. "Especially in my own drumming. I felt there was a certain energy there that was even more than usual."

CD cover for the new release "A life on the Way"

The new disc offers a fine blend of originals and covers over its 35 minutes. The covers include obscure nuggets by Miles Davis ("Nardis") and John Coltrane ("Lonnie's Lament") plus Steely Dan's ballad "Home at Last," all adapted nicely for the acoustic jazz piano, bass and drums settings. And the band's two originals, "Maplewood" and "Splinter," find compatibility with the disc's overall bebop/cool-jazz style.

Lubrication also functions as a true band unit over the five tunes, as all three players trade off equally in the lead instrument and solo spot roles.

"These songs sort of typify the kind of music we've been playing on our most recent club dates. We believe these particular songs lend themselves to the way we've been playing as a trio lately, which we think is much more open and with much more freedom to take the songs wherever we want them to go. The band has really developed at this point and our playing on this disc is indicative of the way we function as a trio unit," Kelley said.

The band is currently using the new disc for promotional purposes only and thus the album is not for sale through the usual source at www.briankelleymusic.com, said Kelley. But the band will have a special offer available for those who come out for Sunday's disc release party — any attendees who purchase copies of either of Social Lubrication's previous two discs will receive a free copy of "A Life on the Way."

Along with the CD release party, comes news that the band will enjoy national promo representation through Bose sponsorship. The high-tech audio gear company recently contacted Kelley to offer and request licensing of one Social Lubrication track for use in a promo campaign —"to demonstrate superior sound quality," as Kelley put it — at the company's headphone listening kiosks in music and audio retail outlets nationwide.

Kelley licensed the company with "Oakland Stroke," a track which he describes as "a funk jam in the vein of Tower of Power and Herbie Hancock's Headhunters," from Ketchup & Rivets. The instrumental piece will represent jazz at the Bose listening posts alongside genre representative tunes by the Dave Matthews Band, Alison Krauss and other artists.

Social Lubrication's CD Release Party will be held Sunday, July 30 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Jamie's Grille, Route 139 in Marhfield. For more information on the band or Brian Kelley visit the site www.briankelleymusic.com.

Movie review

The newlyweds crasher

"You, Me and Dupree" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

In the unoriginal "You, Me and Dupree," Owen Wilson of "The Wedding Crashers" is now crashing newlyweds.

He's Randy Dupree, a New Age free spirit too spiritual to work for a living. After attending the fabulously expensive Hawaiian wedding of lifelong pal Carl Peterson (Matt Dillon) and Molly Thompson (Kate Hudson), Dupree loses his job, gets evicted and moves in with the newlyweds in their jewel-like, Los Angeles arts and crafts cottage on a strictly "temporary" basis.

Before long, Dupree is changing their answering machine greeting, upgrading their cable, sleepily mooning his hosts and teaching the neighborhood kids the meaning of dude-ness.

Dupree, you see, is a kind of homespun self-help philosopher, poet and motivational guru spouting the sort of jibberish only Hollywood screenwriters could manufacture.

Directed by Anthony and Joe Russo, whose anarchic previous effort "Welcome to Collinwood" is an undiscovered gem, and written by newcomer Michael LeSieur, "You, Me and Dupree" addresses such issues as the "domestication" of young married "bucks" by their long-suffering wives, and the finding of your true inner spirit — or, as Dupree would put it, your "ness."

All of this is, of course, complete nonsense.

Carl is supposed to be a designer, while Molly teaches at an inner-city school. But they might as well be lumberjacks for all the interest in designing or teaching this insincere film has.

The film's real purpose is to milk laughs, at times successfully, out of two clogged toilets, a "starched" sock, a porn collection and Dupree's supposed deflowering of an unseen Mormon librarian. The film also means to entertain the men in the audience with the admittedly attractive sight of buff, tawny-limbed Hudson in a variety of skivvies and — in a sexy dream sequence featuring Lance Armstrong — a skimpy bathing suit.

Pesky houseguest Dupree (Owen Wilson) tries to smooth things out by serving breakfast to his hosts (Matt Dillon and Kate Hudson).

In addition to dealing with Molly's escalating anger and desire to get the freeloader out of her new home, Carl must contend with jealous father of the bride Mr. Thompson (Michael Douglas in Gordon Gekko mode). He is not only Carl's new father-in-law but also his boss at Thompson Land Development.

Now, many ambitious young men would find marrying the boss's daughter the perfect means of moving up in the world, and indeed Carl is given a plumb assignment that will make him rich. But Carl is terribly unhappy about all of this because it stifles his eco-friendly self-expression. Right.

Dillon, who is ready-made for that live-action Samurai Jack movie I've been clamoring for and whose work in "Crash" was justly acclaimed, and Hudson play straight to Wilson in the eternal-boy/man/moppet role. As Carl's hen-pecked friend, Seth Rogen ("The 40-Year-Old Virgin") is amusing if underused.

As many will note, "You, Me and Dupree" is in many ways an uncredited reproduction of Paul Mazursky's 1986 hit "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" (with Nick Nolte in a Dupree-like role), itself an update of Jean Renoir's "Boudu Saved From Drowning," a 1932 French farce about a tramp (the great Michel Simon) saved from a suicidal plunge in the Seine by a bourgeois couple.

Instead of paying homage to that classic, "You, Me and Dupree" inadvisably shows us the famous scene in William Wyler's "Roman Holiday," in which Gregory Peck, in a role intended for Cary Grant, frightens Audrey Hepburn's princess by putting his hand into the stone "Mouth of Truth."

These images had the predictable effect of making me wish I were watching Wyler's glorious film instead.

Rated PG-13. "You, Me and Dupree" contains profanity and sexual references.

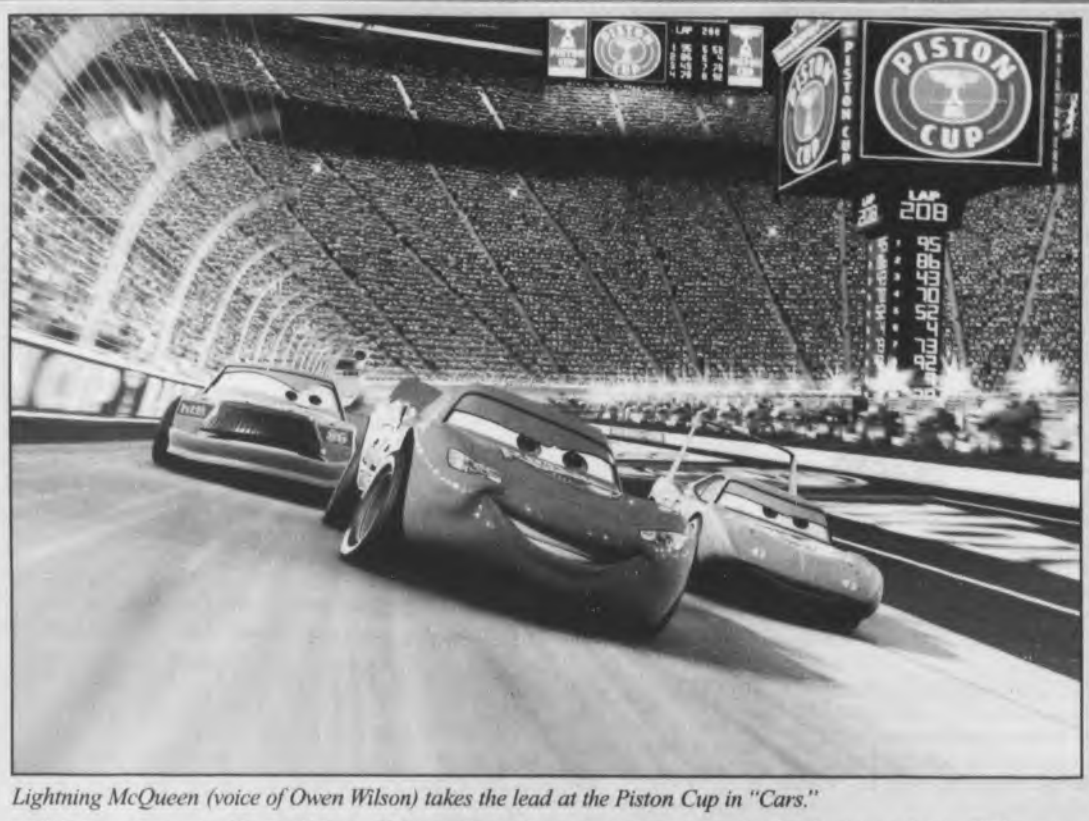
Quick Flix

All reviews by James Verniere, unless otherwise noted



Lightning McQueen (voice of Owen Wilson) takes the lead at the Piston Cup in "Cars."

New Releases

THE HIDDEN BLADE (A)

"The Hidden Blade" is not a violent gorefest, but an occasionally comic, surprisingly tender love story. Brooding, psychologically scarred Munezo Katagiri (Masatoshi Nagase) is a lower-caste samurai in a backwater town. With the woman he secretly loves is being starved to death, Munezo is required by his shogun to learn the basics of Western artillery and rifle fire, and he's been ordered to divulge the names of anyone on familiar terms with fellow samurai and ex-friend Hazama (Yukiyoshi Ozawa), a convicted traitor to the shogun. All Munezo can do is follow the path of the samurai and his heart, however difficult or perilous that path might be. In Japanese with English subtitles. (Rated R)

LEONARD COHEN: I'M YOUR MAN (B-)

"Leonard Cohen: I'm Your Man" is an amiable documentary about the poet laureate of folk-rock singer-songwriters. It's a Cohen lovefest, featuring a concert that took place in Sydney, Australia, in January 2005. Comprising home movies, archival footage, still photos and Cohen tunes covered by such artists as Rufus Wainwright, Nick Cave, Linda Thompson, Kate and Anna McGarrigle and Bono, the film is a by-the-numbers blueprint for a tribute DVD. (Rated PG-13)

LITTLE MAN (B)

Harmless and silly, "Little Man" is the simple story of Calvin (Marlon Wayans), a pint-size ex-con who uses his skimpy stature to break the law. Dressed in diapers, Calvin plants himself on a couple's doorstep and makes the phrase "goo-goo-ga-ga" his motto. He soon finds his newfound caregivers make him a little misty-eyed for his parentless past. "Little Man" may reach below the belt for its laughs but knows how to soften the blow with good performances and funny horseplay. (Rated PG-13.) -Chelsea Bain

Ongoing

THE BREAK-UP (C+)

Oversized, overaged frat boy Gary (Vince Vaughn) and his art dealer girlfriend Brooke (Jennifer Aniston) break up but continue to share a condo. In this anti-romantic comedy, tabloid-linked stars Vaughn and Aniston have nowhere to display their chemistry, except in anger. Between the hijinks that ensue as Gary and Brooke try their best to hurt one another, you end up sitting back and checking off the product placements or trying to figure out how many endings the director shot. (Rated PG-13)

CARS (B+)

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson) is a Corvette-like rookie race car with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup. But after getting lost on Route 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., Lightning is assigned to perform community service in Radiator Springs, a semi-ghost town. The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot's various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking. (Rated G)

CLICK (D)

With the help of a new remote control, architect Michael Newman (Adam Sandler) finds that he can mute people, freeze action and restart it at will, fast-forward past unpleasant things and rewind to past events. Much of the action in this uninspired, gratuitously gimmicky and derivative comedy is so mean-spirited that it suggests a movie made by people who killed college classmates in fraternity hazing incidents. I'd say fast-forward through "Click." But you'd be better served by just hitting the "Off" button. Click. (Rated PG-13)

THE DA VINCI CODE (C+)

"The Da Vinci Code," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. The key elements of Dan Brown's fabulously fun novel are all here: Harvard symbologist Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) and police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) investigating a 2,000-year-old conspiracy concerning Jesus' true nature; a murder plot involving a psychopathic, albino monk (Paul Bettany); and clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces. But director Ron Howard's film is too long and too stuffed with scholarly pedantry. "The Da Vinci Code" comes off as a book, rather than a movie, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book, at that. (Rated PG-13)

THE DEVIL WEARS PRADA (B+)

"The Devil Wears Prada" is a stiletto-heeled, high-couture hoot. Dowdily innocent, aspiring journalist Andy Sachs (Anne Hathaway) arrives in New York City and is offered a job "a million girls would kill to have." That is, being second assistant to ultrachic diva and Runway magazine editor Miranda (Meryl Streep), a dragon lady with a tongue like a knife. As she struggles to make Franken-Miranda happy by meeting her outrageous demands, Andy is pitied by the magazine's art director Nigel (Stanley Tucci) and made over into a new age Eliza Doolittle. (Rated PG-13)

THE FAST AND THE FURIOUS: TOKYO DRIFT (B)

This third installment of the popular franchise takes its car chases and souped-up engines to the Far East. High school troublemaker Sean (Lucas Black) is shipped to Tokyo to avoid jail time and live with his strict, military officer dad (Brian Goodman). Once there, Sean befriends Twinkie (Bow Wow), an army brat with a pimped-out car, and is soon driving a new set of wheels and getting on the bad side of mafia-affiliated DK (Brian Tee) and falling for his girl, Neela (Nathalie Kelley). Sure, it's not the wittiest, smartest or most memorable piece of cinema. But "The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift" delivers everything it promised: loud music, loud cars and a whole lot of glitz. (Rated PG-13) - Chelsea Bain

GARFIELD: A TALE OF TWO KITTIES (B-)

Two cats are better than one in "Garfield: A Tale of Two Kitties," which brings Jim Davis' fat cat back to the big screen in a reasonable riff on "The Prince and The Pauper." This time, the action is in London, and Garfield (voiced again by Bill Murray) is recruited to take the place of Prince (voiced by Tim Curry), the king of England's ancient Carlyle Castle, after he's targeted by the greedy, ignored nephew Lord Dargis (Billy Connolly), who can't wait for the cat's death to assume control of the ancient castle and turn it into a high-rise development. (Rated PG) -Stephen Schaefer

THE GREAT NEW WONDERFUL (C+)

"The Great New Wonderful" is neither great, new nor wonderful. More like a misconceived play than a movie, it charts the post-9/11 malaise of a group of New Yorkers (Maggie Gyllenhaal, Tony Shalhoub, Edie Falco, Judy Greer and Olympia Dukakis). "The Great New Wonderful" aspires to be a quirky, multi-character, mosaiclike indie in the "Crash"-"Magnolia" manner. But the film's unsubtle point is that the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks have left psychic scars, a pervasive sense of meaninglessness and deep-seated desire for payback. That such feelings are a virtual universal part of the human condition is not acknowledged. (Rated R)

AN INCONVENIENT TRUTH (B+)

"An Inconvenient Truth" or "Al Gore: Superstar" is either a piece of rhetorical brilliance proving the case for global warming or an attempt on Gore's part to position himself as the savior of the world. Brandishing a big Mac Powerbook and impressive PowerPoint presentation, Gore mounts a sufficiently entertaining and enlightening combination of a Doomsday tent revival, production number, new age Sermon on the Mount, belated campaign speech and Al Gore Whole Earth Concert Tour. (Rated PG)

THE LAKE HOUSE (B-)

Kate Forster (Sandra Bullock) is a lonely physician who, in 2006, moves out of a small, glass-box-like suburban house suspended over a picturesque lake. After leaving a note to have her mail forwarded, Kate discovers the responses she gets are coming from someone who lives in the house in 2004, a hunky, frustrated architect named Alex Wyler (Keanu Reeves). Over the course of their time-traveling correspondence, they fall somewhat convincingly in love. This romance by the numbers is complete nonsense. But the premise — that there's someone out there who is your true dream boy or girl — will make a lot of girlie-girls and girlie-men weep into their popcorn. (Rated PG)

MRS. PALFREY AT THE CLAREMONT (A-)

Mrs. Palfrey (Joan Plowright) moves to London to be near her 26-year-old grandson, who, oddly, doesn't show up. Instead, Mrs. Palfrey persuades aspiring young writer Ludovic Meyer (Rupert Friend) to impersonate her grandson to deflect the attention of busybody hotel residents. A rare friendship develops between the lonely widow and young artist. Brimming with warmth and intelligence, "Mrs. Palfrey" is small film, yet completely delightful. (Not Rated)

NACHO LIBRE (B+)

Behold Nacho Libre, the summer's most winning superhero. Nacho springs from the wacky netherworld of Lucha Libre (masked Mexican professional wrestling). An orphan who grew up in a monastery, Nacho, also known as Ignacio (Jack Black), is now the orphanage's cook and caretaker, and yearns to get fresher ingredients for the children's food. Hoping to win the big Battle Jam and use the money to help the orphans, Nacho trades in his monk's robes for "stretchy pants" and the trademark, lace-up mask of the Mexican luchador (wrestler). (Rated PG)

THE OMEN (C+)

Power-couple Robert (Liev Schreiber) and Katherine Thorn's (Julia Stiles) infant child dies soon after his birth in a Rome hospital. A grief-stricken Robert, at the behest of a priest, agrees to switch the dead child with a newborn whose mother has died. But we soon know the "switched" son is strange because his parents name him Damien and people start getting knocked off in the most gruesome ways imaginable. This remake of the terrific 1976 B-movie has its moments. But it mostly takes everything that was ambiguous and subtle in the original and makes it so obvious that it's often unintentionally funny. (Rated R)

PIRATES OF THE CARIBBEAN: DEAD MAN'S CHEST (A-)

"Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest," the second installment in Disney's "Pirates" trilogy, is the best and most spectacular summer blockbuster thus far. The plot is a potpourri of piratical nonsense involving the arrest and escape of Will Turner (Orlando Bloom) and Elizabeth Swann (Keira Knightley), that mysterious chest, a Monte Cristo-like escape by Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp), a cannibal tribe, a Kraken and, best of all, the legendary Davy Jones himself. This funny, imaginative, witty and action-packed film is overlong by at least 30 minutes. But overall it's that rarest of summer behemoths: a sequel superior to its predecessor. (Rated PG-13)

A PRAIRIE HOME COMPANION (B+)

An instant cult film, the charming if surprisingly toothless "A Prairie Home Companion" takes Garrison Keillor's enduringly popular Minnesota-based National Public Radio program and transforms it into a Robert Altman film. Keillor plays himself, a singer/host/master of ceremonies on an old-timey radio program. He's joined on stage — and for the most part upstaged — by Altman's cast, including Meryl Streep, Lily Tomlin, John C. Reilly and Lindsay Lohan. Altman's artistic vision is perfectly suited to this backstage comic fable about quirky showbiz characters. But the film is uninspired and conceptually flawed, which is too bad given its genuinely moving valedictory tone. (Rated PG-13)

A SCANNER DARKLY (C+)

Set in near-future Orange County, Calif., this film is a dystopian vision of an Orwellian future in which virtually every American is hooked on a drug known as Substance D (D as in despair, desertion and death), and everyone else is a narc trying to root out the suppliers. Director Richard Linklater rotoscopes his actors (including Keanu Reeves, Winona Ryder and Robert Downey Jr.), turning them into crudely animated versions of themselves. The results have a deadening effect. You know what they say about hanging with people who are stoned when you're not. Many viewers of this listless, unpleasant-looking "Scanner" will wish they were on Substance D, too. (Rated R)

STRANGERS WITH CANDY (C-)

In this prequel to the Comedy Central cult TV series, Jerri Blank (Amy Sedaris), a freakishly grimacing, polymorphously perverse 46-year-old ex-junkie, resolves to make up for her "32 years of depravity." She goes back to high school to begin again, and is ostracized by the cool kids and bonds with the losers. At times while watching this, I felt I had been transported to the Epicenter of Unfunny. At others, I was merely bemused by the sound of one person (not me) laughing. (Rated R)

SUPERMAN RETURNS (B-)

Not a bird nor a plane, "Superman Returns" is a misguided missile — a $200 million-plus tribute to a mediocre movie. The film covers much of the same ground as its 1978 predecessor, as Superman (Brandon Routh) attempts to thwart his nemesis, Lex Luthor (Kevin Spacey), from killing Superman and submerging the United States under water. The film is kitsch with nostalgic cameos and the biggest stiff in the superhero catalogue. "Superman" has no heart and soul, and the film's best moments are in the trailers everyone has already seen. (Rated PG-13)

Parking Dispute

MBTA, town at odds over spaces

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Town officials had hoped to meet with the MBTA Wednesday afternoon to talk about municipal parking and take a walk around the town parking lot so all involved could visualize the situation.

But the MBTA sent word — and followed up with a letter — that it would not participate, preferring to have the issue discussed in executive session because it could involve future litigation.

What is at stake is the future of 21 parking spaces, which the town says the MBTA agreed to build in its Greenbush mitigation agreement with the town.

The mitigation agreement provides for 182 spaces and the MBTA is installing 161, including about 30 in the former "Roy lot," a parcel of land across Pleasant Street.

The MBTA, which is building the Greenbush Line through town, says a 2003 letter from then Town Manager Mark Haddad is binding. The letter stated parking along the former ABB Optical building could be used to make up the spaces.

Haddad's letter was apparently sent without the selectmen's knowledge or approval, and has put the town in both an embarrassing and difficult position.

SEE PARKING, PAGE 8

Fire Lt. Bob Protulis carries the pinky schooner up the ladder of the fire truck to where it will be installed as part of the new weathervane for the Cohasset Historical Society, which is housed in the Pratt building on South Main Street. Capt. Bob Silvia, at the top of the ladder, secures the base.

Weathervane raising

The Cohasset Fire Department installed the new weathervane on the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Library building on Saturday morning.

The vane replaces the old mackerel weathervane, which is atop the new Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Ripley Road.

The new Cohasset Historical Society weathervane depicts a pinky schooner, the Lady Washington, a 52-ton vessel built in Cohasset in 1817 by Levi Tower. The schooner was one of the first of Cohasset's mackerel fleet, which at one point landed 17,000 barrels of mackerel making the town the fourth fishing port in Massachusetts, next only to Boston, Gloucester, and Wellfleet.

Flood of stormwater issues

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"I would like to see the town think of new ways of dispersing stormwater and get it out of our larger bodies of water."
— Karen Quigley, Harbor Health Committee

Water Commissioner John McNabb organized a summit Tuesday evening that tried to get its arms around the issue of what to do about stormwater and the pollution it often carries along with it.

To that end, joining McNabb at the table were representatives from the Harbor Health Committee, Planning Board, and Water Resources Protection Committee, and Board of Health, along with a consultant to the Water Commission.

In the audience were concerned citizens, including some Hull residents, and environmental officials from Coastal Zone Management, a state agency.

What came out of the meeting was the need to establish a Stormwater Management Committee and a sense of urgency that the different boards, along with state agencies, needed to look more "globally" at the issue.

Jim Kinch of the Water Resources Protection Committee noted while each committee had a piece of the issue, it was critical that the big picture be in focus. He said the common thread resonating in the community is the concern about maintaining the town's character without destroying its natural resources in light of increasing development.

The "Mothers Day Flood", along with the wet spring and early summer did little to boost confidence that flood control measures and drainage systems in town are doing their job, the officials said.

An Elm Street woman in the audience described the recent overflow of the sewer treatment plant and subsequent pollution of Jacobs Meadow. She said the health department found alarming levels of fecal coliform and enterococci in her backyard, where her kids run and play.

"My kids splashed in those puddles," she said. "It's scary."

She also questioned how more homes, such as the Little Harbor neighborhood, could safely be connected to the town's sewer system that can overflow during a heavy rain event.

Karen Quigley of the Harbor Health Committee struck a chord with other members of the panel when she talked about looking at new ways to handle stormwater runoff. Traditionally stormwater is funneled through drains into the harbor and ocean, carrying its pollution problems along with it. Pollution can range from animal waste, to oil and gasoline washed from paved roads.

"I would like to see the town think of new ways of dispersing stormwater and get it out of our larger bodies of water," she explained.

The term "subsurface infiltration" sounds complicated but essentially means allowing stormwater to be absorbed back into the ground which filters it before recharging the ground water, and subsequently the watershed.

"We would not have a problem if we weren't bringing all the stormwater into Jacobs Meadow," Quigley said.

Mark Brennan, who is a town liaison to the Greenbush and village projects, said the town also needs to maintain its catchbasins, which can play an important role in controlling pollution.

In Cohasset, which is rocky and does not have good soil conditions in many areas, much of the drainage is directed to Jacobs Meadow, which flows to the harbor. Tide gates control the flow

9-year-old runs business

Christian Cunnie, 9, has made a name for himself selling frosties at the Cohasset Farmers Market.

When life handed 9-year-old Christian Cunnie lemons, he made lemonade. When life handed him a slushy-making machine, he made a business. Yes, Christian Cunnie enjoys responsibility and commitment and, to him, "work" is practically "play."

His father, Michael Cunnie, remembers, "As strange as it sounds, Christian has always liked to 'work'. As a small child, Christian liked to pretend he was a carpenter or a policeman, and he always asked his [mother and I] to 'work with him'."

Needless to say, Christian demonstrates a drive that is unique for his age group. At three, he began to fervently offer to help around the house. He would assist with cooking, cleaning, and doing laundry. Just a few summers ago, while most of his friends were spending their vacations at the beach or at camp, Christian asked for his parents' permission to start selling lemonade in their front yard. Christian explains, "When

Two more 3A accidents on Monday morning

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police responded to two accidents on Route 3A Tuesday morning — the second crash occurring shortly after the first one.

At 8:04 a.m. Tuesday (July 25), the dispatch center received multiple calls about a head-on accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Crocker Lane.

The elderly driver of a 1990 Dodge Caravan was traveling northbound when he attempted to make a left into the doctor's office at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Witnesses said, and police investigation confirmed, he failed to yield to southbound traffic and was hit head-on by a Jeep that was traveling at 45 m.p.h., police said.

Both drivers, the 79-year-old Cohasset man driving the Caravan, and the driver of the Jeep which was out of Hull were transported by Cohasset ambulance to South Shore Hospital with non-life threatening injuries.

The Cohasset man was issued a citation for failure to yield to the right of way on a state highway; failure to use caution when turning on a state highway; and seatbelt violation.

Police said the Cohasset man had injuries including facial lacerations consistent with not wearing a seatbelt.

Both vehicles appeared to be totaled.

The accident was not age-related, police said, but had more to do with careless driving.

The crash caused complete gridlock on Route 3A for about 50 minutes. Police directed traffic around the accident scene. They also had to wait for MassHighway to clean up an oil spill that was the result of the accident.

"We chose not to detour 3A traffic and kept it moving as best we could," Sgt. William Quigley said.

At about 9 that same morning, a second accident — a chain reaction, rear-end collision — occurred in front of Sunrise Assisted Living. Dispatch received multiple calls about the three-car accident, Sgt. William Quigley said.

Cohasset police, fire and the Hull ambulance responded; the Cohasset ambulance was out of town with the victims of the earlier crash.

Traffic was still slowed due to the first accident when a Lexus SUV stopped in the northbound lane due to the congestion. The next car behind the Lexus, a 2005 Honda Pilot SUV slowed to stop when it was hit by a 2001 GMC SUV that pushed the Honda into the Lexus.

The driver of the GMC, a 43-year-old Norwell woman was transported to the hospital with back and neck injuries. Both the Honda and the GMC were towed from the scene.

The Norwell woman was cited for following too close on a state highway.

Multiple incidents of vandalism reported

During the early morning hours of Wednesday, July 26, vandals slashed the tires on approximately 15 motor vehicles from all over town. Three of these vehicles were student transport vans owned by the Town of Cohasset School Department.

Owners of vehicles from Cedar Street, North Main Street, King Street and Beechwood Street reported that when they awoke they found that an unknown person(s) had entered their driveways and flattened their tires. Some vehicles had damage to one tire and others had damage to two tires.

The student transport vans, which are owned by the Cohasset School Department, were parked at the town DPW facility on Cedar Street when the damage occurred.

In addition to the slashed tires, a Jerusalem Road resident reported that her mailbox was maliciously set on fire during the night. Two other mailboxes in town were smashed.

These incidents are under investigation by the Cohasset Police Department's Criminal Investigation Division. Any person with information regarding these criminal acts is urged to call the Cohasset Police Department's anonymous tip line at 781-383-1055, ext. 1050, or send an anonymous email to info@cohassetpolice.com.

Go-cart heist

At 9:50 p.m., Wednesday (July 26) a passing motorist called the station about seeing two youths attempting to steal a go-kart from Joseph's Hardware on Route 3A . Police said there have been a couple of prior go-kart thefts from Joseph's; the vehicles were later found in the woods.

When police arrived at the scene Wednesday night, two boys were seen running into the woods between Joseph's and Majestic Auto.

K-9 units from Hull and Weymouth were called in to assist but lost the trail in the woods due to heavy brush and thorns, police said.

The police officer, who got a good look at the youths, described as being in their mid-teens, will work with the detectives to try and identify the suspects.

Overzealous PI

A private investigator dressed in camouflage, who fled from the scene, caused a stir on Woodland Drive last Wednesday (July 19), police said.

The subject, who was working for a Private Investigation firm and was dressed in full camouflage, parked his vehicle on Woodland Drive and went into the woods between houses to video a person working in the area.

When people saw him, he apparently became concerned and ran from the scene with his backpack, leaving his car behind. A 9-1-1 caller alerted police about the suspicious activity.

Police responded and checked the vehicle, which was registered out of East Longmeadow. Not knowing if the car was stolen or what the subject had been involved in, police then requested the State Police K-9 unit for assistance.

But within a half hour and before the K-9 unit arrived, the private investigator returned to his car with his boss, whom he had telephoned and was also working in the vicinity.

The officers at the scene, including the detective sergeant, interviewed the private investigators and determined they were legit, The K-9 unit was cancelled.

"Private investigators usually check in with us first and that was not the case here," Sgt. William Quigley said. "They were brought up to speed about how they should conduct their business in Cohasset."

Dog incident

A man walking in Wompatuck State Park by the Doane Street gate on Saturday morning (July 22) called police after he was menaced by a woman's dogs that were off the leash.

The man, who had had recent surgery on his leg, was nervous when the dogs charge toward him, so he kicked one of the dogs.

The dog's owner became angry and threatened him, he told police.

The responding officers spoke to the man and the Environmental Police who have jurisdiction in the State Park. The woman later called police and complained about the man who kicked her dog.

According to the Environmental Police, dogs in that part of Wompatuck are required to be leashed.

Cohasset police turned the matter over to the Environmental Police and notified the Animal Control Officer.

The dog was not seriously hurt and the man was not bitten. There was no deliberate animal cruelty, Sgt. William Quigley said. "The man was just trying to protect himself."

Snake in the kitchen

A garter snake caused a stir at JJ's Dairy Hut last Friday evening. Police got a call about 7:15 p.m. about a snake in the kitchen of the popular ice cream shop. Police who dispatched to the scene could not find the snake that had apparently gone into hiding. However, descriptions were consistent with the creature being a garter snake. Another call from JJ's came in about 30 minutes later saying the snake had reappeared. JJ's was told to call an exterminator or a wildlife removal service.

Erratic driver

Police said a walk-in at the station told police he had followed an erratic driver from Weymouth to a house on Border Street. Police went to the house but were unable to contact the driver.

"Motorists who see an erratic driver should call 9-1-1 on their cell phones which will be routed to the nearest police station," Sgt. William Quigley said. "That way police can catch the person while the incident is happening."

Seasonal officers

Cohasset police hire five summer special officers who work from May 1 to Sept. 15. The summer program has been in place since 1995 and frees up the regular officers from having to deal with all the parking complaints during the summer months.

The special officers patrol Parker Avenue, Government Island, Sandy Beach and the village for parking violations; they also patrol the Mill and Cunningham bridges for jumpers. They are paid $14 an hour and usually work Friday through Sunday.

The special police officers are certified to carry a firearm, receive 200 hours of training through the Reserve Intermittent Police Academy, and are first responders in first aid and CPR trained.

Hike in state aid earmarked for schools

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Selectmen and Town Manager Bill Griffin support increasing the school budget by about $207,000, which is the net increase in "state aid" the town will receive in fiscal 2007.

Of the $401,466 total increase in state aid over fiscal 2006 — of which $332,000 is in Chapter 70 funds — increases in state assessments will eat up $194,423 of that, leaving $207,043, officials say.

Chapter 70, lottery and the other state aid accounts are considered general receipts of the town and are not specifically targeted to any one department.

However, Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said the Legislature was quite specific that when it added to Chapter 70 funds the money should go to the schools.

"Although the town is not obligated to give the money to the schools, we would be remiss if we did not," said Dormitzer. He noted part of the formula determining the amount of Chapter 70 aid is based on school population.

An affirmative vote at the fall Special Town Meeting would be needed to increase the school budget.

The news is good for the schools in light of last spring's failed Prop. 2-1/2 overrides.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the money would be used to replace retiring teachers.

"The School Committee has already instructed the Superintendent to move forward with the replacement of retirees' positions rather than cut these positions as part of the $1.2 million in reductions," MacCarthy said, explaining the cuts were needed to bring the school budget into balance with the Town Meeting appropriation.

"Therefore, the additional Chapter 70 state aid will need to be utilized toward salaries for fiscal 2007," she said adding the School Committee appreciates the support shown by the Board of Selectmen and Town Manager Bill Griffin.

According to state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who represents Cohasset and seven other towns, the old formula for Chapter 70 funds was unfair to towns like Cohasset that saw explosive growth in property values after the Education Reform Act was passed some 13 years ago.

The Legislature has now "tweaked" the formula, benefiting Cohasset and other communities where property valuations disproportionately exceed income levels, he said.

"This formula is designed to correct the historic inequities that have disadvantaged certain communities for many years," Hedlund said.

Under the plan, the amount of state Chapter 70 assistance delivered to each district would assign equal weight to aggregate income and aggregate property wealth.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, who represents Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and one precinct in North Scituate, said while he is happy local aid figures are going up, he will continue to advocate for a bigger overhaul of the Chapter 70 funding formula so it is more equitable.

While the Chapter 70 news was good, on the other side of the equation are assessments, which are also on the rise, and are subtracted from the town's total local aid number.

For example, the state pays 90 percent of retired teachers' health insurance premiums that are then billed back to the town as "assessments" and deducted from the town's local aid figure. In other words, the town reimburses the state for the cost of providing a life and health insurance plan for retired municipal teachers. The retired teachers' co-payment is 10 percent, which is subtracted from his or her pension payment.

Because of a large number of newly retired teachers in Cohasset, the assessment for retired teachers' health insurance premiums is going up 34.24 percent from $544,229 in fiscal 2006 to $730,560 in fiscal 2007. That means $730,560 — or $186,331 more than last year — will be deducted from Cohasset's total local aid.

When adding in other offsets and assessments, Cohasset's net local aid increase will be $207,043.

In addition to retired teachers' health insurance premiums, other assessments include: MBTA ($144,030 up almost $5,000); Mosquito Control Project ($30,158 up $293) and Registry of Motor Vehicles non-renewal surcharge ($6240 up $840).

Cohasset will receive a total of $1,552,631 in Chapter 70 funding in fiscal 2007.

 Retired teachers health insurance is provided through the state's Group Insurance Commission, while retired town employees stay on the town's health insurance plan until they reach 65. The difference is while retired town employees continue to have 69 percent of the premium for a family plan paid by the Town until age 65, the retired teachers have 90 percent of the premium paid by the state (and then charged to the town). That is because the state through the Group Insurance Commission pays 90 percent of the premium for other state employees.*

About Chapter 70

- The Chapter 70 program is the major program of state aid to public elementary and secondary schools. In addition to providing state aid to support school operations, it also establishes minimum spending requirements for each school district and minimum requirements for each municipality's share of school costs.
- Cohasset will receive a total of $1,552,627 in fiscal 2007 Chapter 70 aid, a 27.7 percent increase or $332,000 over fiscal 2006.
- The town will receive a total increase of $401,466 in state aid, including Chapter 70 funds. But state assessments are going up by $194,423 – leaving a net increase of $207,043.

Town Hall offices swap their staff

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Some employees at Town Hall must feel as if they are in a big game of musical chairs. With the loss of the override this past spring, money has been tight for the town and some staff members are doubling up their duties, covering the offices for more than one department at a time.

Currently the new administrative assistant for the Planning Board is also putting in hours in the Building Department office. Soon the administrative assistant to the Sewer Commission will also be putting in hours in the Building Department. The assistant in the Board of Health office currently doubles as the assistant to the Sewer Commission, but that will soon change.

In the meantime the town is managing without a Town Planner. Liz Harrington, who worked part-time, resigned in May to accept a position in another town.

Town Manager Bill Griffin explained without the override, only $10,000 is available to fund the position.

"We have $10,000 in the budget for it, which doesn't even get us a full day," he said, adding the override would have added $10,000 more for the position. Voters rejected both a $725,000 and a $1.495 million Proposition 2-1/2 override last spring.

"Losing that vote really affected us," he said. "If I had $20,000, things would be different."

Moving forward, not having a planner is an issue Griffin said must be addressed. Recently, Griffin said Planning Board member Peter Pratt and Selectman Fred Koed were approached by a member of the Hull Planning Board at a meeting of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council to see if the town would be willing to share a Town Planner. Hull is currently in the process of interviewing and selecting a new town planner.

"They're getting closer to making a selection," said Griffin, adding once Hull has made its decision, Cohasset would have the opportunity to meet with the new hire and, subject to review of qualifications, decide whether the person would be interested in working for Cohasset on a part-time basis.

"We are keeping that $10,000 budget money and are trying to find someone to provide town planner services on a contractual basis to the town," Griffin said.

But for now, Griffin said Town Hall is making due.

The Planning Board's administrative assistant, Jo-Ann Pilczak is working 27 hours for the planning board and eight in the building department. Sandra Murray, who had run the building commissioner's office for 23 years, recently retired.

"This way, we're not closing the doors as often" without anyone to run the offices, Griffin said.

Murray, who worked 21 hours a week, served the building department office and processed Zoning Board of Appeals applications.

Eight of those hours have been shifted to Pilczak; four will be added to the new sewer department administrative assistant to help Pilczak deal with the two offices (planning and building).

The responsibility for ZBA administration has been shifted to Jennifer Oram in the Selectmen's office.

Tara Tradd is being split between her duties in the Board of Health office and the Sewer Commission office, but not for long. Griffin said the demands are so great for the Board of Health that the town is hiring a new Sewer Commission administrative assistant. The money for the 15 hours for Sewer Commission administrative assistant position is included in the sewer budget and comes out of the sewer enterprise fund, not taxation. Whoever fills the sewer position will also spend four hours in the building office, as mentioned earlier.

"It's like a chess game," said Griffin, adding the problem of not having enough staff "is an issue we will need to address in the future."

GOOD NEWS!

Hey Cohasset. How is everyone doing this week? There are a lot of proud people to write about in the column between school announcements and a new baby girl, etc. Keep sending in news and information, it is all wonderful to read and hear about.

BABY GIRL

Congratulations are in order for Daniel and Sheryl (Saef) Stone of Mashpee (Sheryl was formerly a Cohasset resident and a 1994 CHS grad) as they welcomed Abigail Patricia Stone to their family. Abigail was born on April 14, 2006 at South Shore Hospital. She arrived at 11:04 a.m. weighing in at 7 lbs. 4 oz. and 18 inches long. Abigail has a big brother named and her grandparents are George and Patricia Saef of Hull and Thomas and Kathleen Stone of Scituate. Welcome to the world little one!

'CINDERELLA' ON STAGE

Don't miss your chance to be swept away by the enchanting story of "Cinderella" presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Drama Workshop from Friday, Aug. 4 to Sunday, Aug. 6. The cast of 34 consists entirely of young people, ages 7 to 18, and hailing from Cohasset, Scituate and Hanover. Everyone is particularly excited about this production as it brings to life Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein's original story and musical score, and in which Julie Andrews originated the role of Cinderella onstage. The ensemble has been rehearsing 3-4 evenings a week since mid-June, while also participating in educational drama workshops on vocal training, how to prepare to audition for a show, staging and stage direction, improvisation and sound and lighting effects. The show takes place at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. Show times are Friday at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10, and are available at Buttonwood Books, Cohasset, Front Street Books, Scituate, or by calling 617-697-2115.

OUT OF BEIRUT

There's one happy and relieved grandmother in Cohasset. Katherine Stanton's granddaughter Andrea Stanton made it safely out of Beirut by taxi to Damascus,,Syria on Saturday the 14th. She told of her exploits on Time's World Website on Sunday the 23rd. Andrea is a doctoral candidate of Columbia University, studying Modern Middle East History and has spent 3 years in the region. Andrea is the daughter of Jerry and Darlene Stanton of Waukee, Iowa. Welcome Home, Andrea, everyone is so happy that you are safe and sound!

MASSASOIT

Massasoit announced the dean's list for the spring 2006 semester and Alexander D. Barnes of Cohasset was on that list. Good job.

INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

Congratulations to Leslie Thornton who received a bachelor of arts in international studies with a focus on international peace and conflict resolution, and Spanish and Latin American studies from American University's School of International Service in May 2006. Leslie is the daughter of Helene and Gregory Thornton and is a 2001 graduate of the South Shore Charter School.

NEW GRADUATE

Michael McMillen recently graduated from the New England Institute of Art with an associate in science degree in audio production.

UVM DEGREES

University of Vermont recently awarded degrees to local students: Connor R. Avery, who received a Bachelor of Arts degree in mathematics in the College of Arts and Sciences. Whitney T. Cook, who received a Bachelor of Science degree in environmental studies in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. Sylvie A. Manning received a bachelor of sciences in art education in the College of Education and Social Services. Matthew J. Pescatore received a Bachelor of Science degree in community and international development in the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences. Great work to all!

EARNED BA

Daniel Steele of Cohasset was among those awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree in sport management during Saint Leo University's commencement in May.

BC GRADUATES

Boston College graduates include: Caroline Carter with a Bachelor of Arts degree in elementary education and math/computer science; Gregory Donovan with a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science; Cara Foley with a Bachelor of Arts degree in communication; Alexander Johnston with a Bachelor of Science degree in marketing; Daniel Littauer with a Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude in theology and philosophy; Robinson Murphy with a Bachelor of Science degree magna cum laude in English and philosophy; and Kelly Stone with a Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology.

OFF TO UT

David Silvia, son of Don and Jennifer Silvia of Cohasset, graduated recently from Bridgton Academy, in Bridgton, Maine. David, who is a member of the academy's golf team, also served as an admission ambassador. He earned high honors during the first semester, and honors during the second semester. David will attend the University of Tennessee.

GOLF MARATHON

Tyler Smith of the Cohasset Golf Club will play in the Ouimet Fund's Golf Marathon XIV at Stow Acres Country Club on Aug. 9. Fundraisers and players have begun fundraising campaigns for the Marathon in support of the Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund, which is considered, "The Golf Charity of Massachusetts." The Marathon is a fund-raising event in which golfers, clubs and organizations in Massachusetts play a minimum of 100 holes of golf or more in one day at Stow Acres. Players and fundraisers solicit pledges contributions in support of their efforts on behalf of The Fund. The event is America's Largest Golf Marathon and has held that title for the past 13 years. In 2005, 48 golf clubs, individuals and organizations raised over $300,000 for The Fund. Contact the Ouimet Fund at 774-430-9090 for further information.

DEAN'S LIST

Hats off to Laura Marks, daughter of Dave and Kathy Marks for being named to the dean's list at Emmanuel College for the spring 2006 semester with a 3.75 GPA. Congratulations Laura!

Christopher Clark, a junior next fall at Emmanuel College in Boston was named on the Spring 2006 dean's List for a GPA of 3.6. Chris is a Global Studies major and plans to spend a semester next year in Prague. Chris also plays soccer for the Emmanuel Saints and is looking forward to the fall season. Chris' very proud parents are Melissa and Douglas Clark. Great job Chris.

That is it for this week. Make sure to send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m.

ENGAGEMENT

Jennifer Doyle and Christopher Grant

Doyle – Grant

Jennifer Doyle, the daughter of Justin and Jeanne Doyle of Hull, and Christopher Grant, the son of Terry and Donna Grant of Plymouth, have announced their engagement.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Hull High School, and is employed as office manager for the Cohasset Police Department.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Plymouth North High School, and is employed as assistant supervisor of emergency 9-1-1 dispatch for the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments.

A May 2007 wedding is planned.

'Fancy Nancy Soiree'

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, will host a Fancy Nancy Soiree on Wednesday, Aug. 2, at 6:30 p.m., at Buttonwood. This is an author-less event celebrating the book "Fancy Nancy" by Jane O'Connor, illustrated by Robin Preiss Glasser.

"Fancy Nancy" is a book about a little girl who loves to be fancy. She loves fancy clothes, fancy words ("everything in French sounds fancy") and fancy accessories. Why dress in yellows and blues when you can wear fuchsia and magenta? Nancy's perfect accessoire is a boa draped around her shoulders, sparkly shoes and lots of glitter. Her room is adrift in a sea of fluff and flounce. Unfortunately, her mère, père and soeur are not fancy. Nancy decides they need a fancy night out and Betsey has agreed to help.

Come to Buttonwood in boas and tiaras, and fancy schmancy clothes, and help Nancy show her family what glitz is all about. There will be a reading of the tome, (a fancy word for book), learn to speak French (bonjour and merci), some fancy activities and the pièce de résistance, parfaits (that is French for ice cream sundaes).

Reservations are necessary and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665. The fee is $3 per person. Suitable for children ages 4 and older.

Cinderella is coming to Cohasset

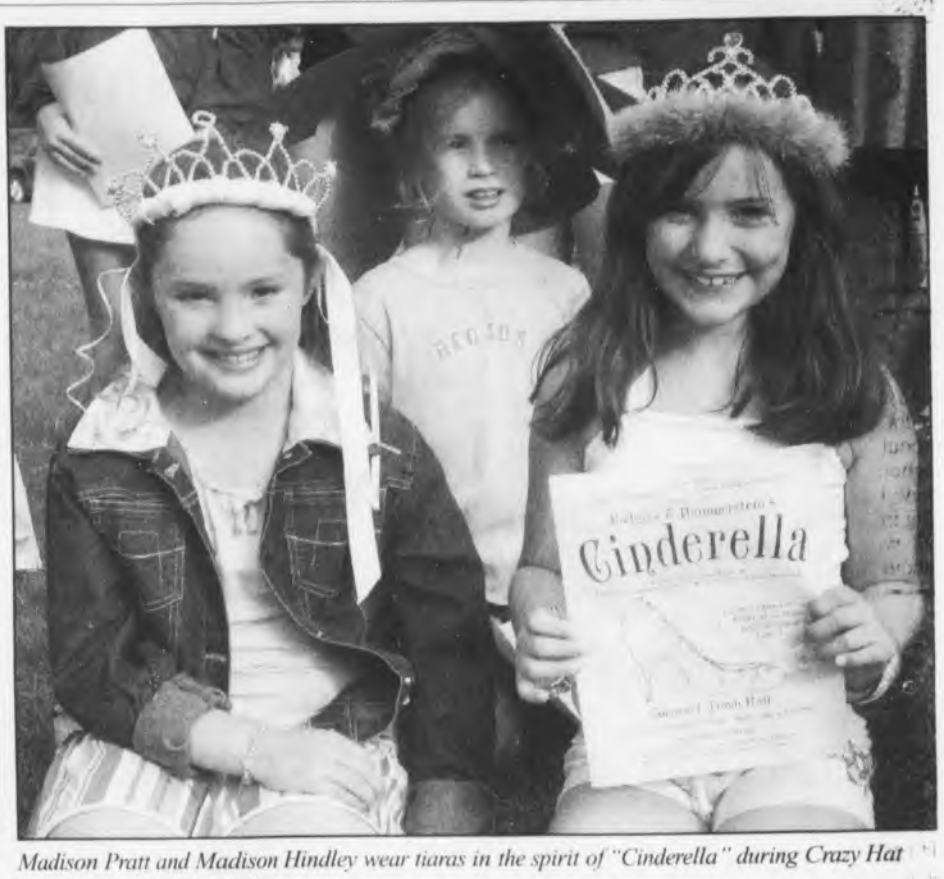
Members of the cast of the Cohasset Dramatic Club and Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Drama Workshop take a break from their rehearsal schedule for their annual "Crazy Hat Day," or more aptly to suit this year's performance, "Crazy Crown Day!"

You see, this summer's production, scheduled for Friday, Aug. 4 through Sunday, Aug. 6 is the enchanting Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Cinderella," in which Julie Andrews originated the title role onstage as a teenager herself. The cast is made up of kids ages 7 to 18 hailing from Cohasset, Scituate and Hanover.

They have been rehearsing three to four evenings a week since mid-June, while also participating in educational drama workshops on vocal training, how to prepare to audition for a show, staging and stage direction, improvisation and sound and lighting effects. It has been a fun-filled learning experience for all, and the result is a wonderful production with full costumes, music and the traditional story suitable for families of all ages. The show takes place at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium on Friday (Aug. 4) at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., Saturday (Aug. 5) at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday (Aug. 6) at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10, and are available at Buttonwood Books, Cohasset, Front Street Books, Scituate, or by calling (617) 697-2115.

Staff photos by Elsa Allen

Emily Badger and Chris Barba, as Cinderella and Prince Charming, head out with the rest of the cast to publicize the upcoming production.



Madison Pratt and Madison Hindley wear tiaras in the spirit of "Cinderella" during Crazy Hat Day at the Farmer's Market.

The "Cinderella" cast performs songs from the show at the Cohasset Farmers Market.

Taylor Fredrick, 9, sports her crazy, beach-themed hat as she passes out flyers for the upcoming "Cinderella" production by the Summer Drama Workshop.

MBTA parking dispute is a 'lot' of headaches

The problem is the ABB site — now James Brook Crossing, a group of shops — is privately owned and its parking area is not available for additional municipal parking, selectmen say,

The parking space dispute is close to reaching a stalemate with selectmen saying they are unwilling to budge and will hold the MBTA to its promise of providing a total of 182 spaces, the number the MBTA agreed to in the mitigation agreement.

Selectmen say the mitigation agreement should carry more legal weight than Haddad's letter and that a reduction of 15 percent in parking spaces qualifies as a "material change."

Adequate parking is seen as a critical component to the continued vitality of Cohasset Village, where a new "streetscape" is in place.

In order to provide the additional parking in the town lot, the MBTA would have to blast some ledge on a town-owned acre of land behind the Red Lion Inn. The project could cost as much as $220,000.

Money, selectmen believe, is the crux of the issue.

However, selectmen stressed Wednesday that either way the MBTA would have to spend the money. The only way to get the additional parking from the former ABB site would be through a "land taking." The Haddad letter and accompanying map also showed a road between Pleasant Street to Smith Place that the MBTA would install. Selectmen estimate the land-taking and road construction could cost as much as the ledge removal for the additional parking in the town lot.

"This is an issue that is very important to the town."
— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

But with its July 26 letter postponing the powwow with Cohasset officials, the MBTA threw the ball back in the town's court.

Selectmen' Chairman Ralph Dormitzer, who made it clear he preferred the meeting be held in open session, said the board needed to find out from Town Counsel if an executive session would qualify under the state Open Meeting Law. The Open Meeting Law allows several narrow exemptions that include discussing strategy regarding pending litigation.

"This is an issue that is very important to the town," Dormitzer said. "I don't think we can presuppose litigation — it is not about litigation, it is about resolution."

But Selectman Gary Vanderweil said all efforts should go toward meeting with the MBTA as soon as possible. He said if an executive session is legal, then the town should agree to meet with the MBTA in closed session.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would ask Town Counsel to look into the legality of conducting the meeting in executive session.

In any case, there was a consensus among the board that if the MBTA had legal counsel at the meeting — which is dubbed "Second Stage Formal Dispute Resolution" — then the town should also have its lawyer present.

Al Bangert from Scituate was on hand Wednesday to share some "Scituate stories" about that town's dealings with the MBTA including issues in North Scituate. Although he phrased his words cautiously, he summed it up by saying "if I am painting a picture of the MBTA as uncooperative — then I'm using the right colors."

Selectmen will first determine if the meeting with the MBTA can be held in executive session. They also said they would prefer to have the MBTA come to Cohasset to meet where officials could conduct a site visit.

If the second stage dispute resolution fails, the town could go to court, a process that could take years. The downtown merchants also have the right to enter into arbitration with the MBTA over the parking issue.

The dispute of the parking spaces is unlikely to hold up the train, which is expected to start service in late 2007.

Flood of storm-water issues

into the harbor. If there is an extreme rain coupled with a high tide, then there is no place for the water to go and Jacobs Meadow fills up, literally backing up into people's yards and through storm drains into parts of the village and other areas.

There was also concern expressed at the meeting about whether the MBTA, which is governed by state environmental regulations, is doing enough to control and direct drainage related to the Greenbush project. Greenbush liaisons Brennan and Tom Gruber said they are continuing to look at the facts relating to the train.

Another area of concern raised by several Hull residents in attendance was Straits Pond and Cohasset housing developments that add to the runoff there, polluting that water body.

Peter Pratt of the Planning Board said his board needs zoning tools in the form of town bylaws so the Planning Board can require certain stormwater control practices at the subdivision or even single-home level.

John Beck of the Sewer Commission said "I & I" (inflow and infiltration) in older sewer pipes and connections is an expensive and serious concern. He said reducing I& I would help prevent sewer plant overflows. There is also the question of illegal sump pump connections to the system.

The Sewer Commission will discuss overflow issues at the Treatment Plant at its meeting at 6 p.m., Monday (July 31).

What's next:

Monday's panel will request that the Selectmen appoint a temporary eight-member, Stormwater Management Committee composed of representatives from the following: Selectmen, Water Commission, Conservation Commission, Board of Health, Harbor Health Committee, Water Resources Protection Committee, DPW, and Planning Board

The charge of the committee over the next 12 months would be to survey the situation and make recommendations to the Selectmen and Town Meeting on:

- measures such as installing raingardens to alleviate existing stormwater problems;
- adoption of bylaws to prevent additional stormwater issues, such as the Model Stormwater Bylaw (used in some other towns);
- creation of a permanent Stormwater Management Committee or Commission to have jurisdiction over stormwater issues.

IT'S HAPPENING

'Idol' contestant prefers 'the Pops'

"Being on American Idol and seen before 35 million people was wonderful, but singing with Keith Lockhart and the Pops at the Esplanade was the highlight of my singing life," notes 18-year old Ayla Brown, of Wrentham. Last August, Brown, who will be attending Boston College in the fall on a full basketball scholarship, competed against 125,000 other people from throughout the country and was selected to perform as one of the 24 finalists on the number one-rated Fox TV program, "American Idol." Brown was eventually eliminated in 13th position.

Known for her hard work, grace and poise, Brown has made public and private appearances over the past year, and has done a large amount of charity work. The talented young singer has also been writing songs and lyrics, and will be in the recording studio on Aug. 24 to complete her first CD.

Daughter of State Senator Scott Brown and WCVB TV-5 reporter Gail Huff-Brown, the Massachusetts native will be singing the National Anthem with Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops at South Shore Music Circus July 29.

The following packages are available through the South Shore Art Center by calling 781-383-2787:

Premium Concert Package – $450 per person, $300 is tax deductible.

- Backstage Champagne Reception with Maestro Lockhart, 6:30 p.m.
- Premium concert seating
- Gala Reception with Keith Lockhart at the Art Center, following the performance
- Round-trip trolley shuttle between the Art Center and Music Circus

Post Concert Package – $300 per person, $150 is tax deductible.

'Sound of Music' tryouts Aug. 6 and 7

Tryouts for the Hingham Civic Music Theatre's fall production of "The Sound of Music" will be held Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 7 and 8, at 7 p.m., in Hingham Town Hall's Sanborn Auditorium. Monday's audition is for ages 8 to 16, and Tuesday's will begin casting roles for those older than age 16. Call-backs for both groups will be on Wednesday, Aug. 9, at 7p.m. in the Sanborn Auditorium. For auditions, singers should prepare 16 bars of a song that shows their range, and bring their own sheet music. An accompanist will be provided.

The Rodgers and Hammerstein classic will be directed by Bill Boyer, with music direction by Mark Bono and choreography by Liz Tronni, with six performances on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 20-22 and Oct. 27-29.

On Friday and Saturday, Aug. 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. in the Sanborn Auditorium, HCMT singers will join with Hingham's South Shore Men of Harmony barbershop group for "Summer Showcase." Open to all for a $20 per ticket donation. For tickets e-mail Pat Sherman at stagemomma@adelphia.net, or call 781-837-1499.

Top Ten Reasons To Give Blood On A Regular Basis:

- Because the need for blood is growing every year.
- Because most people don't donate blood at all.
- Because many formerly regular blood donors can no longer give blood.
- Because it makes you part of the solution.
- Because blood has a limited "shelf life" and cannot be stockpiled.
- Because it's a great way to monitor your own health on a regular basis.
- Because we enjoy getting to know you better.
- Because it allows you to take advantage of the many fun promotions we offer each month.
- Because if every donor gave regularly, it would eliminate blood shortages once and for all.
- Because it saves lives.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

Wellesley student juggles her dreams

By Danielle Ameden
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

Life isn't a cakewalk, but Molly Nanabah Heavilin knows how to juggle reality and dreams better than most people her age.

The 24-year-old waddled across Wellesley College's graduation stage to accept her bachelor's degree diploma in June, just three days before the birth of her daughter, demonstrating she can balance marriage and motherhood with full-time higher education.

And her goals keep climbing.

After five years of "going, going, going," the mother of 7-week-old Elise and 4-year-old Myles now has the summer to relax with her children and husband, Randall, in South Natick before continuing on the next leg of her education, returning to the college in the fall to complete Wellesley's "fifth year" teacher certification program.

"I've had a lot of (life) experience, just having the responsibility of being a mother and having to show everyone in some way that I can do this," she said. "I can finish, I can pay rent, I can juggle all these different things and still do what I want to do."

The Kayenta, Ariz., native's eventual goal is to weave together her interests in anthropology, education and medicine, and return to her home on the Navajo Nation reservation in Arizona where she knows she can make a difference.

And a difference is needed, she says.

Heavilin, who has dreamed of being a doctor since she was in seventh grade, wants to use the "traditional values and traditional methods of medicine, the way that they used to," to practice medical anthropology on the reservation. "I'd like to be a bridge between traditional ways and modern medicine on the Navajo Nation," she said.

She said the current state of medicine there is flawed because the medical professionals arrive sporadically, stay for a short time and aren't able to appreciate or work with natives' medicinal and cultural values.

"(There's) a lot of conflict for patients who are Navajo and have a completely different belief system," Heavilin said. "You have a lot of non-Navajo doctors coming in and staying for a year or two. There's such a high rate of turnover. When I was growing up, I never had the same doctor twice."

Heavilin wants to pursue her medical degree at an Ivy League school on the East Coast or a local university in Arizona. In the meantime, she plans to get her teaching certificate at Wellesley while her 27-year-old husband finishes his last year at Berklee College of Music studying cello and music business.

Balancing education and family life is a commitment that Heavilin and her husband have vowed to stick to, despite the logistical challenges.

"Two students and two parents going to school full time, it was very difficult," she said. "My husband and I just knew we were going to get there soon if we just stick together and keep going."

Heavilin enrolled as a traditional student at Wellesley College in the fall of 2001, and completed two semesters before taking a year off to marry, and give birth to son, Myles, who was born in July 2002.

From the summer of 2002 to the summer 2003, the young family returned to Navajo Nation, an area that is spread out across Utah, Arizona and New Mexico and covers 27,000 square miles, where both have family, and Heavilin and her husband attended the University of Arizona in Tucson full time, taking Navajo language classes in their Native American program.

With her college dean's advice of "we can make it work," Heavilin decided she wanted to return to Wellesley to finish her bachelor's degree, so the family came back to Massachusetts three years ago, working to juggle everything from thesis papers to family time.

"Once you're in it, there's no other way around it," she said. "It was pretty difficult seeing my peers and my classmates who didn't have to go home and make dinner and take (their) son to the park."

She enrolled in Wellesley College's Davis Scholars program for non-traditional students, and with one year of classes already under her belt, completed the program in three years.

According to Heavilin, a good college financial aid package with grants, loans and scholarships, including a full-tuition Indian Health Service scholarship from Navajo Nation, helped her afford her education.

And she said it took the support of friends and professors, stamina and creativity to make the whole situation work, testing her and her husband. "We alternated sleeping-in days, and we worked our way through it," Heavilin said. "Once my son was (sleeping), we'd pick up our books and study," she added.

Heavilin said attending classes while pregnant wasn't difficult.

"Things didn't really change, except for my mood swings and food cravings," she said. "Professors were great; they were really supportive of me. I was finishing my education the way I chose to."

And, her quest for knowledge won't end.

After taking the summer off, Heavilin plans to obtain certification through the one-year education program at the college and begin teaching next spring at Sprague School in Wellesley. The medical degree will come later, and fit with her husband's equally ambitious plans, which include pursuit of an MBA.

Heavilin has three siblings who have ambitions as big as hers to come home to the Navajo Nation and make a difference. Her older brother is in law school at the University of New Mexico and dreams of practicing environmental law. Her younger sister wants a career in education, and she thinks her youngest brother, who is in high school, will return to Navajo Nation, too.

She said it was Wellesley College's "empowering" and fostering community that drew her to eastern Massachusetts. Besides courses, the commuter student says she connects to campus by attending lectures, and bringing her children to cheer on friends at plays and soccer games.

Heavilin also worked with two other students to revitalize the campus' Native American Student Organization, NASO, which involved penning a constitution, selling T-shirts and traditional fry bread at fund-raisers, and doing lots of planning. The group is orchestrating cultural events for the fall like pow wows and traditional Native American musical and dance performances on campus.

Being involved in NASO was one more thing added to her schedule, but Heavilin said it helped keep her connected to her heritage while being 2,400 miles away from her family and home.

"It makes me feel good that I'm doing something in a very small way, and being connected somehow," she said.

She stays in touch with reservation news by listening to KTNN, the nation's AM radio station, and reading their online newspaper.

Heavilin says she misses the food, the culture and the people of the reservation, but believes the education she and her husband are getting is invaluable even though the distance from home is hard. "The ways we can impact the Navajo Nation when we return will be huge, so this is well worth our time," she said.

Heavilin is close to fluent in the Navajo language, after being exposed to it all her life, including in her elementary education reading and writing curriculum. She further studied Navajo language skills, writing, history and culture for one year after high school at Navajo Nation's Dine College in Tsaile, Ariz., after graduating from high school in Kayenta, a small town 250 miles north of Phoenix.

She said she embraced the opportunity to learn more about her heritage and culture for anthropology class assignments at Wellesley. She did ethnographic research on her nation, and interviewed her grandmother, mother and aunts for an oral history project during the spring semester.

"It was really fascinating hearing the life stories of these women that have always been in my life, and who are deep rooted in Navajo culture," she said. "I learned a lot about my culture."

The Navajo Nation, she said, is the largest reservation in the United States and home to 200,000, comprising a unique landscape of people.

Nine-year-old familiar face at Farmer's Market

I started out, my parents were really supportive and even let me use their lawn. They saw how much I enjoyed it and I would sell drinks five or six times a season."

Chores and lemonade still failed to satiate Christian's burning desire to fulfill his ultimate dream: to create his own business. After a visit to a local home furnishing and appliance store, Christian was drawn to a machine that made flavored ice drinks, and he knew it was time to take his innate passion and his knack for selling refreshments to the next level.

Now, every Thursday, Christian sets up shop at the Cohasset Farmer's Market and sells an average of 60 homemade "slushy" drinks every week.

"He is our youngest vendor and what he's been able to accomplish at this age is amazing to all of us."

— Anna Abbruzzese, Farmer's Market

His mother, Karin Cunnie, recalls, "It all started when a friend of mine told Christian that the Market allows vendors to rent a table on the Common for different intervals of time. Christian absolutely loved the idea so we decided to reserve a space for the entire season."

After experiencing the initial excitement of coming closer to pursing his dream, Christian knew it was time to get to work. First, he traded in his starter slushy machine for a newer, more functional version. He then ordered flavored syrups on the Internet, such as lemon, cotton candy, mango, orange, and the ever-popular Tiger's Blood (a mixture of strawberry and watermelon). Christian was finally ready to begin.

From the start, the slushy stand was a success and proved to be one of the busiest snack stands at the Farmer's Market. Customers enjoyed the simplicity of Christian's product: the machine shaves the ice into slush and Christian adds flavored syrup.

In order to maximize profit and to serve more customers, Christian enlisted the help of some of his eager classmates.

Christian Cunnie, 9, who is the youngest vendor at the Cohasset Farmer's Market, mixes up a variety of fruit-flavored frosties.

"My friends saw me on the Common and thought what I was doing was really cool. A lot of times, when I'm really busy, I ask them to come around and help, " he says.

Mrs. Cunnie notes that her son's natural sociability and his willingness to undertake any challenge are qualities that have made his stand so popular.

"There is no question that he's industrious," she adds. "Christian is an extremely hard worker and people see that at the Market. That's why he's become such a success."

Tony Roy, a fellow vendor at the Farmer's Market, who sells handmade wood products, expresses his admiration for Christian.

"I have never seen a kid so driven in my life," Roy says. "The Market is all about good people who enjoy each other's company, but there is something so special and different about Christian."

Roy also notes that, even though they supervise him, Christian's parents do not interfere with their son's operation of the stand. "He's such a go-getter and is running around at 100 miles an hour each week." Roy so trusts Christian's business acumen, honesty, and reliability that he sought the young entrepreneur's feedback on a "do-it-yourself" birdhouse kit for children that he recently created.

Anna Abbruzzese, a co-founder of the Farmer's Market, concurs with Roy's impressions of Christian. She explains, even though the Market normally only allows organic farmers to sell their vegetable and fruit products, they were so taken with Christian's proposition that they could not turn him away. "We knew he would be such a success," she says. "He is our youngest vendor and what he's been able to accomplish at this age is amazing to all of us."

Christian is proud of his accomplishments but is certainly not complacent. At the end of each week, Christian immediately puts half of his earnings back into the business and replenishes his supplies. He splits the remaining money with his friends and puts his earnings into the bank. "I definitely want to continue this," he says. "I want to go to different venues in different towns and I want to make the business even bigger."

Michael and Karin Cunnie are proud of their son's tremendous work ethic.

"I will never have to worry about him making a living when he grows up. He is driven and will be successful in whatever field he chooses," Michael Cunnie says.

Visit Christian and all of the other vendors every Thursday from 2:30-6:30pm at the Cohasset Farmer's Market on the Common.

"My Cardiologist is Smiling, At the Decreased Inches Around My Waistline And So Am I!"

COHASSET, MA – Cohasset resident Linda Franks reports record loss of inches around her waistline through her personal training program at the Cohasset Fitness Together Personal Training Studio.

After years of having her cardiologist preach the benefits of a sound nutrition and exercise program to no avail, Linda knew she needed a change– and boy did she ever get one! Linda reports the "secret" is the accountability, coaching and comprehensive system provided by her Fitness Together personal trainer.

"Like many people, I've belonged to many gyms. However it just wasn't very inspiring or creative and eventually I stopped going. Knowing that I needed to be in some kind of serious exercise program, I called Fitness Together," says Franks, "Not only did I get really inspired, but received encouragement, personal attention and a lot of inspiration."

Franks continues, "My trainer is always coaching me, moving me along to the next level, and creating different ways to complete the exercises - always checking to see if I'm okay. Gone are the days of mindlessly pulling weights down and pushing them up. At Fitness Together everything is done with intention. The Fitness Together trainers have really helped me create a healthy program I can now integrate into my lifestyle. My cardiologist is smiling at the decreased inches around my waistline and so am I! I'm hooked!"

Ground zero for EEE

We are entering the second year of high alert for the Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) virus. The state's first cases of EEE this summer has been detected in mosquitoes in Carver, home to vast acres of woodlands and cranberry bogs, and Raynham. The state Department of Public Health confirmed the presence of EEE on July 17. Last year, and undoubtedly this year, Plymouth County and nearby areas will be ground zero for mosquito borne illnesses.

Public health officials say the species of mosquito found so far prefers to bite birds, and is not usually interested in humans or horses. That's good news, certainly, as this is the time of year when everyone is outdoors enjoying the warm weather.

Still, public health officials warn that area residents should remain on alert for EEE, and also the mosquito borne West Nile virus, which has been detected in eastern Massachusetts this summer. West Nile virus was found in a mosquito in Needham on June 27. Last year, an 80-year-old Fall River woman died of West Nile virus.

Last year, area communities were reeling under the threat of EEE, closing outdoor recreation areas from dusk to dawn as soon as the first serious EEE cases were reported at the end of August. The restrictions on outdoor activities remained in effect in some communities until the first frost in October — the time when mosquitoes cease to be a threat as temperatures drop.

In 2005, all four human cases of the EEE virus were in Plymouth County. The virus claimed the lives of a 5-year-old girl from Halifax and an 83-year-old Kingston man. A Plymouth baby also fell ill.

Obviously, mosquito borne illnesses pose a serious threat, and one that is not going away easily. The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Board – which serves Cohasset — has been at the forefront in the efforts to combat the problem, spraying woodsy areas that are deemed at highest risk and where mosquitoes like to breed. The state has been working to eliminate mosquito-breeding areas. Last summer when the EEE threat reached a high point, spraying was extended to include schoolyards and public recreation spots.

In the end, what is most practical is for residents to remain aware of the problem and take steps on their own to protect themselves and their families from exposure to mosquitoes. That includes eliminating standing water from yards, wearing mosquito repellent, and staying indoors when mosquitoes are most active. Health experts are saying that the wet weather in June, followed by hot and humid weather in July, are good breeding conditions for mosquitoes.

It's too bad we have to worry about dangerous insects of all things during our beautiful New England summers, but that is the reality with EEE and West Nile virus posing ever greater risks to public safety. Let's hope that with increased public awareness, the summer of 2006 is not nearly as deadly as the summer of 2005.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Story headline misleading

TO THE EDITOR:

The title of an article in last week's Mariner, "AdCom votes down school budget transfer" was misleading and to the contrary. Although the title grabs ones interest, it is factually untrue.

Our School Business Manager Dave DeGennero and I did meet with the Advisory Committee to seek a transfer of funds to help pay a special education tuition. There was healthy discussion around special education and its budget. While discussing our FY06 Special Ed budget, we also entered into discussion around our potential projected special education tuition deficit which, as of that meeting, ranged from $131,000 to $460,000. We also explain that any funds left over from FY06 will be used to prepay Special Ed tuition for FY07, which will help reduce this projected deficit.

After our discussions, the Advisory Committee offered to defer their decision on the transfer until the school department had reconciled all of FY06. At that point, acting as the Chair of the School Committee, I withdrew our Request for Transfer of the $109,000. So, no vote was needed or taken! I assured the Advisory Committee that we would be able to pay this bill and still prepay an unspecified amount to our FY07 Special Education Tuition's which, at the end of the day, will help offset the projected deficits we are facing.

All in all, in my opinion, the meeting was a productive meeting of the minds.

Post-prom party supporters thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset High School Class of 2006 is leaving behind many great memories and a newly renovated space for Cohasset teens to enjoy for years to come. Thanks to the generosity of many donors and the work of volunteers, the space formerly known as the "Garage" was transformed into a hip party place "Midnight Blue" for the very successful Senior Prom Post Prom Party.

We would like to thank the following supporters for making the Post Prom Party a success and for making the "Midnight Blue" renovations possible. They are: The Clark Chatterton Fund, Second Congregational Church, Adrian Morris Hair Salon, Cohasset Collision, McKenna & Co., Steve Pinkus Electric, JFS Construction, St. John Masonry, Evans Home Improvement, Graham Waste, Strecker Eye Center, Red Lion, Pilgrim Cooperative, Dineros, South Shore Music Circus, Cohasset PSO, Goodwin Graphics, All the Best, Atlantic Bagel, Rooms in Bloom, Anderson Fuel, Lehr & Barnes Insurance Agency, The Good Sport, South Shore Community Center, Social Service League, Fion's Exxon, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Pat's Hair Styling, Feng Shui, Acapulcos and a very special thanks to Jack Worley and Brian Adams.

Also, we appreciate the presence of Cohasset Police Officer Patrick Kenney during the evening. Officer Kenney donated his time during the event to assure the event to assure the evening is problem free.

Stop by sometime to see the fresh coat of paint and the new look and name for "Midnight Blue." Many thanks to our supporters and to the many parents that contributed time and money to make this a safe and fun evening for all the prom-goers.

Parking problems around town

SAFETY COUNTS

POLICE CHIEF JAMES HUSSEY

During the summer months the Cohasset Police Department sees an increase in parking problems in town. We also receive complaints from residents regarding parking in town. The problems include vehicles blocking the road, the sidewalk or a driveway.

With the average traffic lane in Cohasset measuring about 14-feet in width, and the average car measuring 8- feet across, you can quickly do the math and see where problems arise: Cohasset's narrow streets provide little room to maneuver and very little room for error. That being said, traffic and pedestrian safety become a major concern for the police department.

Some areas in town are posted with "no parking" signs, while many others are not. For example, even though Jerusalem Road, from North Main Street to Atlantic Avenue, is not posted "no parking," you cannot park a vehicle on the street without blocking the travel lane. By blocking the travel lane you cause vehicles traveling in that lane to move across the road into an oncoming traffic lane. This obviously causes a hazard for both vehicle and pedestrian traffic. A vehicle blocking a travel lane is subject to a $25 parking ticket. If the hazard is deemed substantial, the vehicle may be towed away.

The best way to avoid a parking ticket or a tow fee is to take a careful look at where you are parking.

North Main Street, from Jerusalem Road to Red Gate Lane, also poses a challenge. During baseball season and through the summer, people sometimes park their vehicles on North Main Street, even though it is posted "No Parking Either Side" on this stretch of North Main Street. Others park vehicles, blocking the sidewalk. There is a reason why the "No Parking" signs were put there. With many youth using the ball fields and the swim center, vehicles parked here will make it difficult for children to be seen by motorists. Blocking a sidewalk may cause children to walk in the street. Please take the time to find a legal parking space in the area. It might be a little walk, but it will help keep everyone safe.

In Cohasset Village, we look to assist the businesses by enforcing the time limits for parking on South Main Street. It is important to our business community here that cus-

Parking spaces, sidewalk are in dispute

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

MBTA Dispute Resolution — To recap, the Town is in "Informal Dispute Resolution" with the MBTA over two issues we consider to be very important. First, in the Mitigation Agreement, the MBTA is obligated to provide 182 Public Parking Spaces for the Town as they reconstruct the Town Parking Lot. The actual design is approximately 21 spaces short. Anyone who uses the Town Parking Lot knows that the lot fills up quite often and we can't afford to lose any spaces at all.

The second item is that the MBTA originally said they would meet the edge of the Revitalization Project with the Pleasant Street/Town Parking Lot project. Now, they have cut their construction zone short so that the pedestrian sidewalks on Pleasant Street will not connect to the Village downtown area. Another Mitigation Agreement that has been bypassed is the MBTA must construct a roadway between Pleasant Street and Smith Place.

A meeting was set between the Executive Office of Transportation, Senior MBTA management and the Board of Selectmen for this past Wednesday, July 26th at 5 p.m. at Town Hall. Very suddenly, Tuesday, the MBTA called the Town Manager and cancelled the meeting. They said they would be forwarding a written statement of the reasons. But, as we go to press on Wednesday we haven't received anything from them. We suspect that their reason is that they are very uncomfortable with a public meeting format. We believe a public meeting format is required because the MBTA, who wrote the dispute protocol, required a majority of the Board of Selectmen be present. Open public meetings are required whenever the majority of a board meets, with very few exceptions. When we receive their written position, it may be an issue for Town Counsel to resolve. We wonder why they are so concerned about the public knowing what is being said. So, the more things change, the more they stay the same.

Town Parking Lot Reconstruction — As we printed last week, the Town Parking Lot was to have been closed this past Monday and Tuesday for reclamation, re-grading and the installation of a temporary surface. CBB's subcontractor responsible for grinding the old surface was to have started work first thing Monday morning. But, they actually arrived about 1 p.m. – six hours late. Then they promptly hit some granite with their wheel, blowing out a tire and bending a rim and then blew out an air hose. Clearly, this was not a good start. By the time the grinding machine was ready to work it was 4 p.m. CBB wanted to continue working into the night, but that's just too late to operate noisy equipment in the center of the village. So, they loaded the grinding machine on a truck and disappeared off into the sunset. Now, the plan is to close the parking lot next Monday and do the grinding and resurfacing in one day.

Smith Place – Sohier Street area construction — Those of you who live near this area know that CBB has been working vigorously in the right of way. Since they encountered shallow ledge where their drainage pipes will be placed, the residents have been treated to nearly constant pounding for the past several weeks, including last Saturday. Since one of us lives in this area we have firsthand experience in the pleasures of rock fracturing. Sometimes a root canal almost might be more pleasurable than the thump, thump, thump!

The good news is that the superintendent of this section of construction tells us that CBB has completed the ledge removal and that the "pounding machine" is being removed. Hallelujah! Let's hope they don't find any more ledge as they move further in this section of construction.

CBB will be replacing the drainage pipes that drain the swale next to the Post Office into James Brook. The reason is that the existing pipe is a 30-inch lightweight plastic pipe that will not withstand the constant pounding of the trains passing over it 24 times each day. Another very old 30-inch cast-iron pipe in the same area will be replaced with new pipe that will have a straighter path for better flow.

Revitalization — We are still waiting to hear from the Department of Transportation whether our Revitalization PWED Grant will be extended with more financing. If this happens, we will be completing Brook and Elm streets surface restoration (street, curbs and sidewalk) this fall. Keep your fingers crossed!

Recently, we heard from a local citizen who took a straw poll of 48 residents about the results of the Revitalization. Forty-four of the 48 thought the project looked nice and was a good addition to the village.

We've received several calls about the condition of the sidewalk in front of the Red Lion Inn. We agree it is a genuine safety hazard and that's why it is currently blocked off. First a bit of background… As a condition of the Red Lion's occupancy permit, the Red Lion agreed to reconstruct the sidewalk in front of the Inn to match with the Village Revitalization. We all know it has taken years for Revitalization to come to fruition. In April of 2005 we had a meeting with the Red Lion reminding them of this commitment. Their response was that they would do what was necessary. Multiple meetings have been held since then. Now revitalization in this area is complete and not a single shovel has been put into the ground at the Red Lion. The Town is still expecting that construction will be completed by the contractor hired by the Red Lion Inn in the very near future. So, that's the story for now.

State's other tunnel project

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It was the most magnificent of tunnel projects, one that introduced new concepts into the craft. Everybody said so.

It took years to complete, but it was worth it, they said. The costs overran wildly, but if you want the best, you have to pay for it, they said.

The Big Dig? Wrong! They called it "the Big Bore," and although there were no Chairman Matt or Governor Mitt or Bechtel to answer for it, the project bore a startling resemblance to what is going on now and has been for nearly 20 years in Boston.

The 4.7-mile tunnel that was blasted through Hoosac Mountain in the northwest corner of the state to connect the two ends of what was then the Troy & Greenfield Railroad took 21 years (1854-1875) and $20 million in state money to build.

The scandal that followed is described best in "Leading the Way," the history of the Massachusetts State Legislature, by Connie Dalton, the chief political writer of the old Boston Herald Traveler.

"The 'Agony of the Great Bore' had begun. Massachusetts' 1854 investment ($2 million) was to prove tremendously costly. Work on the tunnel dragged, and in 1861, the company's funds ran out.

"The company's failure forced the state to foreclose its mortgage on the partially completed tunnel. In an unprecedented move, the state determined it would protect its investment by completing the project itself.

"The expensive drain on the taxpayers' money had just begun. New, insistent demands were placed on the state treasury, and reports of public graft were rampant. Contractors came and departed.

"Not until 1875 was the tunnel completed so that a train could pass through it. By that date, the work had cost Massachusetts citizens somewhere between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000, and interest on the state's investment had become an onerous burden.

"A report of 1883 claimed that nearly one-half of the state's annual tax income was exhausted for such interest payments."

The cost of the Hoosac Tunnel, of course, did not approach the $14.5 billion that can be charged to the Big Dig and, to my knowledge, the roof has never fallen on anyone, but $20 million was big money in 1875 and nearly 200 workers died in the digging.

A gazetteer of the day effused that "the prospective benefit (of the tunnel) is above computation and the engineering skill and energy of the Brothers Shanly . . . are as worthy of admiration as the liberal policy of the state in furnishing the capital."

Where have we heard that before?

The tunnel is memorialized at Western Heritage Gateway State Park in downtown North Adams as "one of the 19th century America's greatest engineering feats," and it is recognized in the industry because of its pioneer effort in the use of nitroglycerine as an explosive.

Where have we heard that before?

The state park also features a replica of the tunnel with an audiovisual presentation that "takes visitors back in time with the sounds of dripping water, picks striking stone, nitroglycerine explosions, and political debate about the merits of the project."

And where have we heard that before?

HEALTH NOTES

Beware of Portuguese Man of War

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Infamous for their very painful, powerful sting, the Portuguese Man-of-War has reportedly been sighted at several marine beaches in Massachusetts from Westport to the Upper Cape and the Boston area.

Although "men of war" are generally found in the tropical and subtropical regions of the Pacific and Indian oceans, and the northern Atlantic Gulf Stream, similar jellyfish are common in the waters of Massachusetts but are seldom of a type that possess a venomous sting. The principal difference between native jelly fish and Portuguese Man of War are that the latter have an air sac called a sail which looks like a fragile blue bubble and consists of a gas-filled, bladder-like float (a polyp, called the pneumatophore) — a translucent structure, tinted pink, blue, or violet — which may be 3 to 12 inches long and may extend as much as 6 inches above the water. Some of the tentacles of the Portuguese Man-Of-War bear stinging nematocystic (coiled thread-like) structures used to paralyze small fish and other prey.

Beneath the float are clusters of polyps, from which hang tentacles of up to 30 feet in length. The "animal" moves by means of its sail, which causes them to be visible on the surface of the water.

Portugese Men of War in warm water can grow tentacles as long as 165 feet, however there is some evidence that those found in northern latitudes are much smaller. When washed ashore, swimmers and bathers should stay away because dead Portuguese men-of-war can still sting. Moreover, they are not always obvious in the water. Tentacles may break away in the surf and inflict stings just as potent as those from attached animals. Even dead specimens stranded on the beach can still cause stings. They can be handled using latex or rubber gloves and a trash bag, carefully avoiding all direct skin contact. The sting of the Portuguese Man-Of-War is very painful to man and can cause serious effects, including fever, shock, and interference with heart and lung action.

Cohasset residents should be on the lookout for Portuguese man-of-wars this summer. While they look like jellyfish, they have a much more powerful sting and can even secrete venom when dead and washed up on the beach.

Symptoms — The most common result of contact with the Portuguese Man-Of-War are the painful whip-like, red wavy, stringy welts on the skin from contact with the blue tentacles. The resulting lesions can last for minutes to hours. Other symptoms can include numbness in extremities or sometimes chest pain, difficulty swallowing, weakness, muscle pain, spasms, sweating, runny nose, watery eyes, red raised areas where stung, abdominal pain, nausea, alteration in pulse rate, headache.

Treatment — Pick off any visible tentacles using protective gloves. Rinse with fresh or salt water. Apply ice for pain. Protect affected area if possible. To remove remaining tentacles, use flour or shaving cream and scrape with a dull instrument such as a credit card.) Apply a cream containing a pain killer, an antihistamine, and a corticosteroid. Irrigate exposed eyes with copious amounts of room temperature tap water for at least 15 minutes. If vision blurs, or the eyes continue to tear, hurt, swell, or are light sensitive after irrigating, See a doctor.

For persistent itching or skin rash, try 1 percent hydrocortisone ointment four times a day, and one or two 25 milligram diphenhydramine (Benadryl) tablets every 6 hours. These drugs are sold without prescription. Diphenhydramine may cause drowsiness. Don't drive, swim or surf after taking this medication.

The toxin secreted from the tentacles of the Portuguese Man-Of-War is about 75 percent as powerful as cobra venom. Accordingly for those with weakened resistance, immediate medical attention may be required, as stinging may bring about shock.

Although formerly considered effective, vinegar, heat, even urine, are no longer recommended for Portuguese man-of-war stings. Meat tenderizer, baking soda, papain (Carica papaya, Vegetable pepsin, meat tenderizer), or commercial sprays (containing aluminum sulfate and detergents) on nematocyst stings have yielded mixed results. It's possible these substances cause further damage. In one U.S. Portuguese man-of-war fatality, lifeguards sprayed papain solution immediately on the victim's sting. Within minutes, the woman was comatose, and later died.

Most Portuguese man-of-war stings disappear by themselves, sometimes within 15 or 20 minutes. Accordingly, even harmful therapies often appear to work. A key concept in the first aid of any injury is: Do no harm. Therefore, avoid applying unproven, possibly harmful substances on stings.

Concern over parking lot configuration

COMMENTARY

NEIL J. MURPHY

In early June, while visiting my sister on Pleasant Street, I noticed that some of the proposed curbing had been placed along the southerly side of Pleasant Street at the north end of the Cohasset Center municipal parking lot. It appeared as if there would be two openings into the parking lot. The two openings were very close to the actual railroad crossing. The openings are also directly opposite a loading-unloading area already constructed for the Arts Center along the northerly side at Pleasant Street.

I went to visit the Town-MBTA railroad coordinators at Town Hall. Mark Brennan graciously forwarded me a copy of the design plans, which I received on June 12th. I had talked with Tom Gruber on June 9th. He had told me that it was too late to change the design.

After receiving the plans, I concluded that there were enough deficiencies in the design to warrant further action. I forwarded a letter to Mark on the 12th stating that the number of conflicts along the short section of Pleasant Street should be reduced. I met with Mark in my office to discuss the deficiencies further, to no avail.

On June 26, I prepared a second letter to the Town manager. I called him that morning and he agreed to meet me in his office. He explained that he would confer with his coordinators again and take the matter up with his board as well.

To date, I have not received answers to my two letters. I have had verbal communication, however, all indicating that "it is too late!"

I contacted an old friend, Mr. Gilbert Nelson of Hingham. Gill was once the head of the Bureau of Traffic Engineering, Baltimore County, Md. He was also a traffic consultant employed by Fay Spofford and Thorndike Inc. of Boston, now of Lexington. Presently he is considered an expert in the field of accident reconstruction. I discussed the issues with him and he is in agreement that there are a number of hazardous conditions proposed by design in the area along Pleasant Street between the intersection at Depot Court, Ripley Road, and Pleasant Street and the railroad crossing.

I met with selectman Ralph Dormitzer at my office on July 7. He suggested I use "my contacts" and arrange a meeting with the engineers for the MBTA.

Gil and I met with Cashman engineers at their office in Weymouth. They were sympathetic but stated their hands are tied. Design decisions can only be made by the MBTA and the Town.

Finally, one last call to Mr. Gruber on Friday, July 15th. His statement: "It's too late. It's going to be built. The MBTA engineers said it would be alright."

I have been persistent because I truly believe that hazardous conditions are being created by the design as presented by STV dated Nov. 23, 2005, coupled with the lack of design within the intersection of Depot Court, Ripley Road and Pleasant Street, for which the Town is responsible. Please consider the following, visit the site, and determine for yourself the validity of my concerns:

The MBTA through STV Inc. proposes a 24-foot wide drive opening 26 feet north of the crossing gate arm on the southerly curb line of Pleasant Street and a second 28-foot wide opening 22 feet northerly of the first opening. There is nothing shown to determine whether these drives are one-way or two-way, and if one-way, which drive is which. We suggested that a single 24-foot wide opening be provided as far from the crossing as possible. Directly opposite the two openings there is a loading-unloading area for the Arts Center, 90 degrees to the curbing at the apex of the curb in the west side of Pleasant Street, that has already been provided for and constructed by the MBTA.

There are four parking spaces on private property owned by Pat's Barber Shop, also directly opposite the northernmost drive at the parking area. The alignment of Ripley Road for vehicles traveling toward the parking lot drives, or southerly into Pleasant Street, is a sharp right-hand turn around the last parked car, at the Arts Center landing dock, with no available sight distance on a curve.

The intersection itself is too expansive. There is too much pavement for uncontrolled movement with no place for control signage. In fact, it is nearly impossible to determine where one street begins and another ends. Where will street signs if any be placed? The alignment of all three streets, Ripley Road, Depot Court and Pleasant Street, should be redefined.

The parking lot, in its planned configuration, is designed for two-way traffic. The specs are 90 degrees, 20 feet deep, and 9-1/2 feet wide. The aisle width between spaces is 24 feet, all accommodating two-way traffic. People will continue to use the lot as if it is all two-way traffic unless the spaces are changed, providing diagonal parking.

There are pedestrian generators in the area, which compound the creation of hazardous conditions all along the sharp curves of Pleasant Street.

Parents should be outraged

TO THE EDITOR:

Despite a $400,000 override being defeated for FY06 (school year just completed), the School District closed the year with $432,000 unspent as well as a $226,000 grant that they are sitting on.

The School Committee has rushed to increase a variety of existing fees while levying new ones. The School Administration has been efficient — it promptly mailed out billings. How much does the School Committee estimate that all these increased fees will raise? Why isn't there a similar sense of urgency to explore cost containment measures and exploit regionalization, distance learning and other measures to give our students added options? Why do the School Committee and Superintendent refuse to share financial data with the Town's Director of Finance or other town board's especially before meetings? Clearly, they fear that their ineptness will be on display.

Parents, why aren't you demanding answers? You are paying a broad spectrum of new and costly fees while the School District enters FY07 (the new school year) with about a $865K "in found money" ($432K+$226K+ $207K, the latter being the State's Ch70 increase) despite the defeat of both override ballot questions.

The combination of revenues generated by new fees and the "found money" should result in new hirings and other benefits for your students. Where are they? What did the Teachers' Contract really cost? As parents you have the worst of all worlds: a defiant teachers' union, a School Administration that is locked into "throwing money" at every problem, a School Committee lacking leadership and management skills, declining performance indicators and the distrust of the Community.

Perhaps you should sponsor a "Recall" By-Law that could lead to the "retirement" of School Committee members who have served two+ years and haven't learned how to demand understandable budgets. If any School Committee member and the Superintendent refuse to do transparent budgeting, they should be given "the boot (I believe Superintendent Walsh's contract is up for renewal next year)."

Will continue to ask questions

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading about the school department's disclosure of its large budget surplus, I got to thinking about how I would respond if I were in various positions affected by the news.

If I were a....

... Teacher in Cohasset — I would be discouraged about time and opportunity lost when I was told by my superiors last year that the programs, enrichment, and ancillary services I need to practice my profession were unavailable due to lack of funds. My students, classroom, and career suffered.

...Parent of a current student — I would feel duped, discouraged, and angered that my children were denied the services required to keep their education, my primary concern, abreast of their peers in similar communities. I also would feel used because I devoted countless hours supporting what we now know to be the unfounded posture of the school administration. They simply chose not to even address the questions asked of them by a majority of the voting community.

...Student — I'd be angry and disappointed that people "in charge" told me that the deterioration of my school's strengths, the decline of meaningful programs and activities were due to selfish, uninformed people in my town who didn't care about me or our schools. I realize now that nothing could be farther from the truth.

...Superintendent and business manager of our schools — I would understand that I should have responded to the questions and concerns of the public whom I/we serve rather than summarily dismiss them. I/we should have worked toward the goal of establishing premier education in our community, not turf lines.

... School Committee member — I would do what I was elected to do by my constituents: oversee the school department and advocate for our children not an administrative bureaucracy.

As a voter in Cohasset, I realize I must continue to ask questions and require answers we all can understand. Each resident, not just a select few, is entitled to live here. Cohasset is the home for all of us.

School budget process needs more sunlight

TO THE EDITOR:

There appears to be some fuzzy math going on in the Cohasset school business office. After a new full time business manager came on board Aug. 15, 2005, we were still making payments to a second, interim business manager, a former associate of Superintendent Walsh, through February 2006.

We also saw a budgeted $80,000 annual business manager salary ballooned to $85,000 for someone who started on Cohasset's payroll several weeks into FY'06. This $85,000 amount if paid for the entire year translates to an approx annual salary of $96,000, which appears to be an overpayment for services.

These facts brought to mind the following question

- Even though the business manager's budgeted salary has been increased from an FY'06 annual salary of $80,000 to $90,000 annually in FY'07 why has his biweekly check been decreased $234 as of FY'07?
- Who authorized these payroll irregularities?
- Why did the superintendent maintain the services of a second business manager for FY'06 who received payments October 2005 through February 2006 of $8,700?
- From which accounts did the funds come to pay the second business manager and the excess salary of the primary business manager?

It is astonishing that no one, especially the seasoned board members, have thought to question these peculiarities in this transparent, bottom up budget and the monthly financial statements.

Parking problems around town

tomers have access to convenient parking throughout the day. Hopefully, people working in the village will park their own vehicles in the town parking lot. It's always tempting to block the driveway(s) to "George's Citgo" after George has closed for the evening. Let's hope that it's not on a night when Citgo has scheduled a gas delivery for the station. If it is, we may have no choice but to tag and tow your vehicle, to provide a way in for the large tractor-trailer trucks delivering fuel.

In closing, the best way to avoid a parking ticket or a tow fee is to take a careful look at where you are parking. Just because the person in front of you parked there, doesn't mean it's legal. If it seems like you're encroaching on a sidewalk (a person should be able to get a baby stroller down the sidewalk), partially blocking a driveway or blocking a traffic lane in such a way that a fire engine or other emergency vehicle may have a problem getting by your parked car, pick a better (legal) place to park. Remember, you can be parked illegally even if there is no signage. Please be considerate toward your neighbors, fellow motorists and pedestrians. Let common sense guide you, and share the road responsibly.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on eight roll calls from the week of July 17-21.

$500,000 FOR LEGAL SERVICES FOR INDIGENT (H 5000)

House 146-9, Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's $500,000 veto reduction (from $9.4 million to $8.9 million) in funding for the Massachusetts Legal Assistance Corporation (MLAC). The MLAC provides legal representation for indigent and disadvantaged residents. Supporters of the $500,000 said that these services ensure equal access to the justice system for thousands of below-poverty level Massachusetts residents including accused criminals, senior citizens, battered women, tenants and Medicaid recipients. They argued that the MLAC actually saves the state money because it helps many people secure various federal benefits. Opponents of the $500,000 said that the MLAC often wastes money by representing people who bring frivolous lawsuits against the state. They argued that the state should not fund this account while more important programs could use additional funding. (A "Yes" vote is for the $500,000 A "No" vote is against the $500,000).

$133,954 FOR VICTIM AND WITNESS ASSISTANCE BOARD (H 5000)

House 153-0, Senate 34-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $133,954 veto reduction (from $596,776 to $462,822) in funding for the operation of the Victim and Witness Assistance Board. Supporters of the $133,954 said that the funding is important for the operation of this board that works to coordinate assistance and services to crime victims and their families and witnesses during their difficult involvement in the state's criminal justice system. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the $133,954. A "No" vote is against the $133,954).

$25 MILLION FOR SEWER RATE RELIEF (H 5000)

House 144-9, Senate 35-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the entire $25 million in funding for sewer rate relief for customers in the communities in the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) district, the South Essex Sewerage District and several other communities across the state. Supporters of the $25 million said that these funds would help more than 100 communities reduce skyrocketing sewer rates for their overburdened citizens. Opponents of the $25 million said that it is unfair to help only residents of a few communities and argued that there are other residents across the state that could use rate relief. (A "Yes" vote is for the $25 million. A "No" vote is against the $25 million).

$8 MILLION FROM LOTTERY ADVERTISING BUDGET (H 5000)

House 143-10, Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Romney's $8 million veto reduction (from $10 million to $2 million) in funding for the advertising of Lottery games. Supporters of the $8 million said that it would increase sales and raise additional Lottery revenue that is distributed to cities and towns as local aid. They argued that the Legislature should not micromanage the Lottery and its advertising. Opponents of the $8 million said that the Lottery's ad campaigns are misleading and are aimed at enticing low-income workers and senior citizens to spend their scarce, hard-earned money on gambling. They argued that this unfair advertising promotes a very regressive mechanism of raising revenue. (A "Yes" vote is for the $8 million. A "No" vote is against the $8 million).

$6.3 MILLION FOR WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT GRANTS (H 5000)

House 143-11, Senate 35-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $6.3 million veto reduction (from $9.6 million to $3.3 million) in funding for workforce development grants. The governor also vetoed some of the earmarking of the grants for specific programs. These funds come from the Workforce Training Fund that was established in 1998 and is financed by Massachusetts employers. Supporters of the $6.3 million said that it is important to fund these grants that provide resources to Massachusetts businesses to train employees and improve their skills. Opponents of the $6.3 million said that the funding is excessive and argued that the earmarking of the funds is unfair because it favors employers in specific areas across the state. (A "Yes" vote is for the $6.3 million. A "No" vote is against the $1 MILLION FOR YMCA (H 5000)

House 132-21, Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $1 million for the Greater Boston YMCA. Supporters of the $1 million said the funds are essential to help these facilities that provide important programs for many at-risk youths. In his veto message, the governor said that he vetoed the funding because the program was not recommended. (A "Yes" vote is for the $1 million A "No" vote is against the $1 million).

$158,000 FOR SEXUAL VIOLENCE PROGRAMS IN GAY AND LESBIAN COMMUNITY (H 5000)

House 133-21, Senate 36-0, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $158,000 in funding for intervention services and crisis housing for sexual violence in the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender community. The governor also vetoed language that would ensure that some of the $3.7 million in the state budget for domestic violence and sexual assault prevention and treatment programs be spent on the statewide Spanish language hotline for sexual abuse and a suicide and violence prevention outreach program for gay and lesbian youth. Supporters of the $158,000 said that it is used to fund the Gay Men's Domestic Violence Project (GMDVP) that raises awareness and education of same-sex domestic violence and manages a 24-hour crisis hotline that provides support, counseling, referrals and emergency shelter. They also argued that it is important to ensure that some funds are earmarked for Spanish-speaking victims of domestic violence and for gay and lesbian youth. In his veto message, Romney said that he eliminated language for programs that were not recommended. (A "Yes" vote is for the $158,000 and for earmarking money for the Spanish language hotline and gay and lesbian youth. A "No" vote is against the $158,000 and against the earmarking).

CREATE NEW COMMISSION ON GAY AND LESBIAN YOUTH (H 5000)

House 99-52, first sustained and then 104-44, gained the two-thirds margin necessary to override Gov. Romney's veto of the creation of a new Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth. The Senate overrode the veto on a 36-1 vote. The existing commission was established by executive order in 1992 by former Gov. William Weld. Supporters of the new commission said that it is important to establish a state law creating a new commission out of the reach of Romney who as governor has the power to unilaterally abolish the current commission that was established by executive order. They noted that the governor recently considered abolishing the existing commission. They argued that the commission works to combat the rising suicide rate among and incidents of violence and discrimination against gay and lesbian youth and helps promote school and community-based programs to work on these problems. Opponents of the new commission said that it is unnecessary and duplicative because a commission already exists. (A "Yes" vote is for creation of a new Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth. A "No" vote is against it).

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION? Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time that the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say that legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say that the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session.

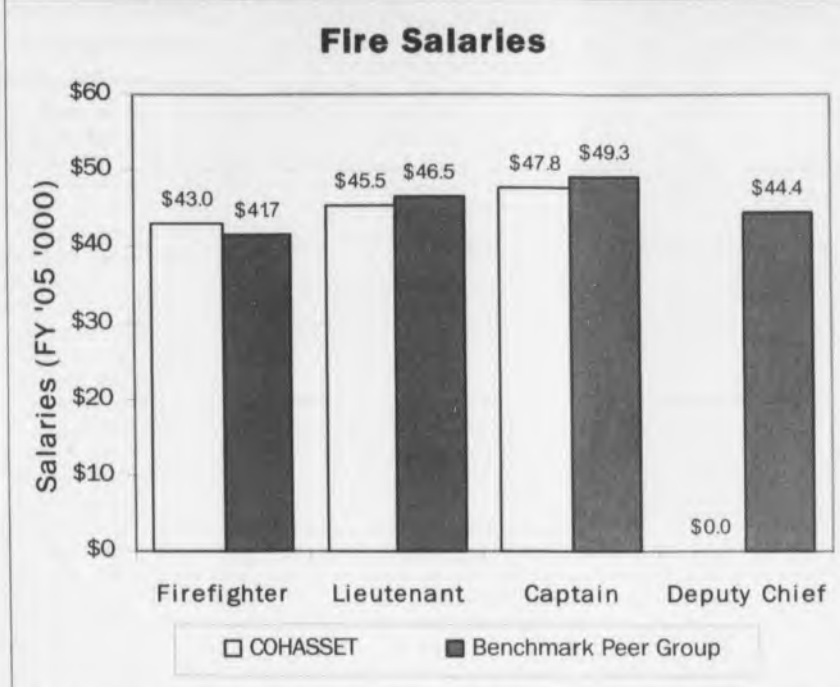
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). A value of zero indicates either that the salary data was not available or that the community did not have that position. Note that salaries reflect the average of the minimum and maximum base salary and do not cover items such as education bonuses, clothing allowance and the like.

This chart shows the 2005 average base salaries for four different positions within Cohasset's fire department. In most communities, these base salaries are augmented by bonuses for certain skills (such as being an EMT), clothing allowances and overtime. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. While they don't tell the entire story, by comparing base salaries, one can get a sense for well Cohasset pays its firefighters relative to other similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

For more information about Municipal Benchmarking go to municipalbenchmarking.com

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series. This is the fifth of six benchmarks about the fire department.

POLITICAL NOTES

Reed Hillman guest at GOP cookout

Reed Hillman, candidate for lieutenant governor.

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee announces its annual cookout on Sunday, Aug. 13, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m., at the home of Lou Harvey, 465 King St., Cohasset.

Special guest speaker will be Reed Hillman, candidate for lieutenant governor.

As superintendent of the State Police, Hillman was responsible for 2,600 law enforcement and support personnel and an annual budget of more than $200 million.

Invited guests will include: Kenneth G. Chase and Kevin P. Scott, candidates for U.S. Senate; Jeff Beatty, candidate for U.S. Congress, 10th District; state Sen. Robert Hedlund; Peter Forman, former representative and sheriff; Mary-Jeanette Murray, former representative; district attorneys Mike Sullivan and Tim Cruz; Sheriff Joseph McDonald; elected town officials and other candidates for office.

Democrats sponsoring Hingham rally

The Massachusetts Victory 06 Campaign, a coordinated campaign sponsored by the Massachusetts Democratic Party, is sponsoring a rally in Hingham on July 30, from 5 to 7 p.m., at the home of Phil and Debbie Edmundson, 55 Cottage St.

Speaking at the event will be U.S. Rep. William Delahunt of Quincy, who is the representative from the Massachusetts 10th Congressional District, which includes Quincy, the South Shore, Cape Cod and the Islands. Also expected at the event are State Treasurer Tim Cahill, Hingham state Rep. Garrett Bradley, Weymouth state Rep. James Murphy, candidate for state Senate, Matt Mulvey, as well as other Democratic candidates and office holders from around the South Shore. Victory 06 leaders including Joseph Kennedy and Matt Kennedy will also be in attendance.

The Victory 06 Campaign supports all Democratic candidates for public office and is engaged in voter information and recruitment campaigns for the 2006 election season. The focus of the campaign is to develop a statewide infrastructure of volunteers committed to electing Democrats. More information about the Victory 06 campaign is available at www.massvictory06.org. The event is open to anyone interested in supporting the Victory 06 campaign. The suggested donation for the event is $20.

Young detectives solve puzzle mysteries on Monday nights

Library program draws a crowd

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Murphy keeps an eye on all the goings-on while encouraging the groups to make new friends and work together.

Something really cool for kids takes place on warm, summer Monday nights in the children's room at the library.

That is where no less than two dozen young detectives are using their reading and problem-solving skills to assemble jigsaw puzzles and uncover the clues so they can solve a mystery.

At tables scattered around the stacks and the "nooks and crannies" of the children's department at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the young sleuths put their heads together as they pore over puzzle pieces of all shapes and colors.

Traveling from table to table is Marjorie Murphy, retired Deer Hill librarian, but very "unretired" summer Puzzle Club leader.

Murphy keeps an eye on all the goings-on while encouraging the groups to make new friends and work together.

Robbie Hillman, 11, who is going into the sixth grade in September, aptly described the activity as a "mind-boggling experience."

Robbie's table first read the story, as suggested, and then went on to tackle the puzzle.

"It requires teamwork," Robbie explained. "One person would have a hard time doing this alone."

Murphy encourages all the participants to start with the frame or perimeter of the puzzle, which makes the task less overwhelming.

Once the book is read and puzzle is put together revealing the clues, a team member opens the last page of book in front of a mirror to read the last few paragraphs (which appear in mirror writing) to solve the mystery.

Emily Zimmermann, 10, and her sister Kara, 8, are visiting their grandparents for the summer. They live in Hong Kong.

Emily said her favorite part of the Puzzle Club was spending time with her friends. Her table was trying to find out "Who is Kitty?" Soon the puzzle pieces started to reveal the clues: a collar, pet dish, and more.

"I think Kitty is the cat," Brigette Berube, 9, exclaimed.

The Puzzle Club, which is for is for students going into grades three and older., is a drop-in program. The library has all new jigsaw puzzles, from 100-piece puzzles to challenging 500-piece puzzles. Bring a team of puzzle makers or come alone and join a team. Puzzle Club meets in the Story Hour Room from 7 to 8:45 p.m., Mondays. Prompt pick up is required. The program is funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road. For more information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Evan Canney, 8, brings in the 250-piece Spider Tales puzzle to the table. Behind Evan is Marjorie Murphy, who has conducted the Puzzle Club at the library for many years.

Michelle Berube, 12, and Claire Pozniak, 13, work on a glow-in-the-dark puzzle, dubbed "Thunder," during Monday's Puzzle Club session at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The club is for kids in grade three and up.

Evan Canney 8, moves a puzzle piece into position.

Michelle Berube, 12, enjoys the teamwork and challenge of putting together a jigsaw puzzle.

Green hopes message will stick

Running grassroots campaign against Rep. Garrett Bradley

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Hingham native Robert R. "Bob" Green, a Republican, is planning a run against state Rep. Garrett Bradley this fall.

But before Green can challenge the Hingham Democrat, he has to get his name on the Nov. 7 State Election ballot.

To that end, Green is taking a page from Bradley's book by knocking on doors throughout the Third Plymouth District that consists of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and one precinct in North Scituate.

Green, who is 50 and a 1975 Hingham High School graduate, says he is listening to voters' concerns while trying to educate them on how to put a sticker on the Sept. 19 Republican Primary ballot so his name can appear on the ballot for Nov. 7 State Election.

"While I like Garrett and worked on his 1998 campaign, I think the district needs a fresh voice," says Green, who has worked in security at Logan Airport for the past four years.

Green had hoped to back William "Bill" Ramsey of Hingham, an Army veteran and assistant Plymouth County District Attorney. But when Ramsey decided not to run, Green stepped in.

Green, who reenrolled as a Republican in January after being unenrolled for several years, has also been a Democrat, albeit briefly. However, he stresses the GOP is where he feels the most at home.

"I have changed parties a couple of times, but always went back to being a Republican," Green says. "The Republican philosophy suits me." A fiscal conservative, Green says he is particularly concerned about rising property taxes.

"Too many people are telling me they can no longer afford to live here," he says.

Green says if elected, he hopes one of his first accomplishments would be to establish a real estate commission to look at soaring home assessments with an eye to possible regulation.

He also wants to find ways to help prospective first-time homeowners, who have been priced out of the district. Other issues of concern, he explains, include rising homeowners' insurance premiums in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina and the MCAS graduation requirement, which he would like to see abolished.

These issues, he says, he has not seen Bradley doing anything about.

Green explains he has to run the sticker campaign because – even though he submitted enough signatures to get on the ballot – the names were not separated by town, as required, and all appeared on the same sheets. By that time, it was too late to start over.

"It was a mistake and I blame myself," he says about the way the names were submitted.

Green needs 150 voters to put his sticker on the Primary ballot in order that his name can appear along with Bradley's on the State Election ballot.

He is optimistic he will get enough support. Then his run against Bradley, who is known for his ability to raise money in a campaign, begins in earnest.

"I'm going on the premise that I cannot try to match Garrett on raising money," Green says. "But all the signs and money in the world means nothing if people can't identify with you."

If elected, Green, who is single, says he would resign from his job and be a full-time legislator.

Bradley says he wishes Green well.

"I've known Bob for a long time and he is a well meaning fellow," Bradley said. "If he makes the ballot, I look forward to hearing where he stands on the issues."

Legion looks ahead to '07

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

The season for the Cohasset American Legion baseball team can best be described as a tale of two halves.

The first one was a good one that put Post 118 into position to grab one of Zone 6 East's five spots in the district playoffs. Post 118 was 5-2-2 at the halfway mark with a key win over third-place finisher Weymouth along with a 12-12 tie on the road with second-place finisher Braintree.

The second half, however, was quite a different story, as injuries took their toll and Post 118 managed just one more victory the rest of the way, a 5-0 blanking of Stoughton with Ryan Ferriter producing the pitching performance of the season with a one-hitter.

"We started out like gangbusters, but we fell into some injuries that contributed to our demise in the second half."
Post 118 coach Fred Caffrey

Michael Signorelli was expected to be the number one catcher, but fouled a ball off his knee at the start of the season and missed a month. Backup Kyle Pinkus, who filled in admirably, also injured a knee late in the season. Pitchers Greg Malley, Greg Ouellette and Chris Bryan all battled arm problems.

The 1-8 second half dropped Post 118 to 6-10-2 for the season, good for a seventh-place finish in the final standings, and Cohasset came up short of that playoff berth.

"We started out like gangbusters, but we fell into some injuries that contributed to our demise in the second half," said Post 118 coach Fred Caffrey. "We ended up missing the playoffs by three or four points, and the injuries certainly played a part. We also lost a couple of games we should have won, especially the game at Morrisette where we were up going into the bottom of the seventh and then allowed them to score three runs [to win the game]."

The Cohasset pitching was solid in the first half of the season. Malley, Ouellette, Bryan, Ferriter and Shane Caffrey all produced quality efforts as Post 118 finished the first half with three straight wins.

The 7-4 win over Weymouth avenged an earlier loss to Post 79 at Weymouth. That loss to Weymouth was one of only two setbacks for Post 118 in the first half of the season. The other was the gut-wrenching 6-5 loss to Morrisette at Quincy's Adams Field that saw Post 118 rally from a 3-2 deficit to take a 5-3 lead with three runs in the top of the seventh, only to see Morrisette answer with three runs in the bottom of the seventh to pull out the win.

Post 118 also recorded a pair of wins over Quincy in the first half, along with a victory over Stoughton behind a Ouelette three-hitter on the road, and a forfeit win over West Roxbury in the season opener.

The two ties came on back-to-back nights by identical 12-12 scores. The one at Braintree on a steamy Sunday night surely felt a lot better than the one a night later at home against Holbrook.

Post 118 did squander leads of 3-0 and 10-5 to Braintree, but scored two runs in the top of the seventh to salvage a tie against a program which has had 45 straight winning seasons and has won more than 20 Zone 6 championships.

The next night, Cohasset squandered a 9-2 lead to tie Holbrook and give Post 118 a strange 2-2-2 record after six games. Three wins followed and the second half seemed to start well with Cohasset taking an early 3-0 lead in the home rematch with Braintree at Scituate High School.

Chris Bryan named among area's elite

Marinerland All-Scholastic teams consider public school athletes from our 13 towns: Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Kingston (Silver Lake HS), Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Next week: girls lacrosse.

Chris Bryan – Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher/Third base – Cohasset

Chris Bryan

South Shore League All-Star did a little bit of everything for the Skippers: pitch, play the infield, and hit in the middle of the lineup…Led Cohasset with a .365 batting average, and knocked in 20 runs in just 18 games…Finished the season with a staff-best 4-2 record; included in that was a four-hit shutout against Carver that helped spark Cohasset's strong start to the season…Won the season-opener against Sacred Heart, striking out seven in six innings…Usually played third base when he wasn't pitching, but also played some shortstop when teammate Nick Zappolo went down with an injury…Also a solid contributor to Cohasset's South Shore League championship golf team last fall…Bryan will attend Lynn University in Florida, and intends to play baseball there…Cohasset coach Al Gallotta: "If we had a team MVP award, it would a no-brainer to give it to Chris. He did just about everything for us."

Tony Giannini – Junior
Right field - Abington

Just a sophomore, Giannini played well beyond his years this season, leading the Green Wave and the South Shore League in hitting this spring with a .538 average and 22 RBI from the No. 2 spot in the order…Also hit a grand slam this season…Speed was among one of this talented outfielder's greatest strengths as he was often able to stretch ground balls into a hit…Giannini wasn't slated to start at the beginning of the season, but got the bid when another player went down…Eased into his starting role in right field and helped solidify the outfield, recording only one error all spring…His consistent performance helped the Green Wave capture a share of the SSL title, splitting the honors with Carver with identical 9-3 records…The AHS boys went 13-7 this regular season and reached the semifinals of the Div. 3 South Sectional, where they fell to SSL rival and eventual state champ, Harwich…With two years still remaining, Giannini still has plenty of playing to do at AHS.

Steve Golbranson – Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher – Abington

After bursting onto the scene in a sophomore season in which he guided the Green Wave to the finals of the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney, Golbranson has been one of the most consistent performers on the hill for Abington…Proved that season he was a big-game pitcher and he did the same this spring…In the opening round of the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney, Golbranson tossed a complete game, 11 strikeout 3-2 victory, not allowing an earned run…"Steve should have had a shutout. He was just phenomenal," coach Steve Perakslis said of the victory…Had to pitch in all the tough games and more than held his own, shining much brighter than his .500 record would suggest for the 13-7 Green Wave…His consistency on the hill helped guide Abington to a share of the South Shore League title with Carver with a 9-3 mark…A four-year

Laxers honored at Statehouse

On Wednesday, July 19, the Cohasset High state champion boys lacrosse team and coaches Stew Curran and Ronan Buick were honored at the Massachusetts Statehouse.

Athletic Director Ron Ford, Principal Joel Antolini and Assistant Principal Mike Gill and a few proud parents also attended. The team was escorted through the halls of the state house to the Members Only lounge, where they were hosted by Rep. Garret Bradley and Sen. Robert Hedlund and their staff. A Cohasset High School alum, Rob Butman, who is Senator Hedlund's aide, organized what the players thought was a "great pizza" lunch.

Bradley and Hedlund each addressed the team, congratulating them on their outstanding achievement of a Division 3 state championship. Bradley acknowledged the team's wonderful achievement and how they'll always remember it and always be remembered as state champions.

The representative then took the group on a personal "inside tour" of the Statehouse. Bradley told numerous stories about the people who have served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives over the years. Team captain Ben Libby took the gavel at the podium.

Then it was on to the Senate and the Room of Flags and a special visit out on the balcony overlooking the public garden with a lively and very colorful history about the equestrian statue and General Joseph Hooker.

The team headed back to the House which was then in session and the Speaker of the House surprised the group pausing the proceedings to proclaim "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts on this day acknowledges the achievement of the Cohasset High School lacrosse team in winning a state championship." The Speaker banged the gavel and the team's championship was duly recorded as part of the official history of the Commonwealth. The representatives in session stood and clapped.

Everyone on the team was presented with personal proclamations from both the Senate and the House of Representatives. The boys traveled back to Cohasset with warm memories of this special event.

The Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters and the team would like to thank Bradley, Hedlund and their office staffs for the invitation and arrangements.

player on the football squad, Golbranson started at fullback and was an essential performer in the Green Wave's run to a Div. 3 Super Bowl title victory last fall…The recently graduated senior hopes to continue his baseball career in college.

Tim Wells – Junior (Capt.)
Catcher - Abington

Opposing pitchers might have cringed when Wells came up to hit as the Green Wave slugger was rarely off the bases…Was among the leading hitters on the AHS team from his No. 3 spot in the order, hitting .464 with 26 RBI, one homer…Demonstrated extreme patience at the plate, leading the Green Wave in walks and recording a .606 on-base percentage…Behind the plate, Wells was about as solid as it gets, allowing only one runner to steal a base…He threw out 10 would-be base stealers…His performance both offensively and defensively led the Green Wave to a share of the South Shore League title (9-3) and guided the Abington squad to a 13-7 regular season mark and berth in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney…There, AHS knocked off Seekonk and Marian to reach the semifinals…Also a talented quarterback/receiver at Abington High, Wells guided the Green Wave to a Div. 3 Super Bowl title last fall…Wells also plays basketball at AHS…He will play all three sports in his senior season and he hopes to continue his football career in college.

Chris Dominguez – Junior
Shortstop – Braintree

Performed beyond expectations with the bat this spring for the Wamps to earn a second team Bay State Conference All-Star nod…Batting leadoff, Dominguez hit .357 (second on the Wamps behind fellow All-Scholastic Brendan Wheeler) and led the league in hits with 30…Also played the strong defense that was expected of him at arguably the game's most important position…Had one of his best days at the plate in April 25 win over Needham, going 3-for-5 with two RBI…Hit a home run to spark season-opening upset of then-defending Division 2 state champion Lincoln-Sudbury…Dominguez is a talented three-sport athlete, as he is also a key figure on the BHS football and basketball teams…Braintree coach Bill O'Connell: "Chris was a big surprise with the bat this year. We knew he was a pretty good player, especially defensively, but his presence at the top of our lineup was a huge plus for us."

Tom Huddleston – Senior (Capt.) Centerfielder – Braintree

This is Huddleston's second appearance on a Marinerland All-Scholastic team this year after being named to the football team last fall…Bay State Conference first team All-Star got it done at the plate, hitting second for the Wamps, but it was his defense that drew raves more than anything else…Had four outfield assists (in just 21 games), and made several spectacular catches in center field throughout the season…Says playing defense is his favorite part of the game…Hit .324 with 10 RBI and a team-best 10 stolen bases…Had four hits in May 8 extra-inning win at Norwood…Hit a home run in state tournament loss to Catholic Memorial in what proved to be his final high school at-bat…Also caught game-winning touchdown in overtime on Thanksgiving Day against Milton, a play that set a new school record for TD receptions in a year with 11…Will attend Worcester State College, where he plans to study criminal justice…Braintree coach Bill O'Connell: "Tommy was the best center fielder in the Bay State Conference, by far, and he was a sparkplug offensively. He always got on base and he was always stealing bases."

Brendan Wheeler – Junior (Capt.) Catcher – Braintree

Brendan Wheeler

A first team Bay State Conference All-Star, Wheeler provided the pop in the middle of Braintree's versatile lineup…Led the team in batting average (.367), home runs (two) and RBI (16)…Has also developed into a top-notch catcher; Wheeler is adept at blocking balls in the dirt and threw out over half of the baserunners attempting to steal on him this season…Says his most memorable moments this spring were a walk-off double May 1 against Milton and a game-tying grand slam May 17 against Newton North; counts a 17-inning win against Walpole on May 26 as the team's most memorable victory…Has played football the last two falls for the Wamps, but is going out for the golf team in September…Lists golf, fishing, cars and watching movies as his favorite hobbies…Plans to play baseball in college, where he is interested in studying business or sports management…Braintree coach Bill O'Connell: "Brendan is a team leader and will be one of the best players in the league next year. He had many key hits and a couple big home runs for us this year."

John Leonard – Junior Pitcher – Hanover

John Leonard

One of the most feared pitchers in the Patriot League and for good reason…Leonard was nearly un-hittable this season, posting a 0.40 ERA while going a perfect 8-0 this spring…A three-year starter, Leonard gave up only three earned runs in eight starts…The PL All-star walked only nine batters and surrendered only 24 hits…Leonard struck out 66 batters in 53 innings pitched this regular season, helping to guide the Indians to a Patriot League Fisher Div. title (13-1)…Was an essential part of a Hanover team that went 16-4 in the regular season, shutting out five opponents and qualifying for play in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where it fell to eventual state champs, Somerset… Tossed a one-hitter in a 3-0 victory over Silver Lake this season, striking out 15 batters along the way…At the plate, Leonard was a consistent performer, boasting a .321 average with 17 RBI and 14 runs scored…When he wasn't pitching, Leonard started at second base…Leonard spent the summer playing for the Hanover American Legion squad and already has hopes of continuing his career in college.

John Granahan – Junior Third base - Hanover

One of the leading hitters on the Indians' squad, Granahan was a force at the plate for the Patriot League Fisher Div. champs…Granahan hit over .400 for most of this season for Hanover, who won the PL title with a record of 13-1…The PL All-star came up big in several games this spring for the Indians, including a 3-2 victory over Keenan champs and rival Duxbury…There, he singled and scored the tying run and laid down a sacrifice bunt to get the winning run to third…Granahan went 2-for-4 with three RBI in an 11-1 victory over Pembroke, which clinched the Indians' first league crown in five years…At third base, he was an essential part of an infield that rarely made mistakes and helped the team record a 16-4 regular season mark and qualify for play in the postseason tournament…Went 2-for-4 in a 13-1 win over Randolph during a stretch in which the Indians won 11-straight games and 12 of their last 13…Just a junior, Granahan will return to the Hanover baseball field next season.

J.P. Craven – Senior Catcher - Hingham

This talented senior was an extra-base hit machine for the Harbormen, despite dealing with a nagging knee injury sustained in the off-season…Craven hit .396 for Hingham, registering five doubles, one triple, and a homer, good for a slugging percentage of .604…The senior

All-Scholastic baseball team

drove in 17 and scored 10 runs himself…A patient hitter, Craven also drew 15 walks for a very solid on-base percentage of .547…The team's starting catcher missed almost the entire first month of the season, sitting out until after April vacation…Craven's consistent play helped guide the Harbormen to a second place finish in the Patriot League's Keenan Div. (4-4) and qualifying for postseason play in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney…There, the Hingham boys were edged in a 5-4 decision to Foxboro…Spent this summer catching for the Hingham American Legion Post 120 team, which reached the playoffs…Also a hockey player at AHS, Craven plans to continue his baseball career at Davidson College in North Carolina where he will major in chemistry.

Ian Sumner -Senior
Catcher- Holbrook

It had been a longtime since a boys sports team had reached the state tournament at Holbrook high school, but this spring the Bulldogs broke through with a 10 win season, doubling their win total from a year ago before falling to Ashland in the opening round.

Sumner was a big reason for the team's resurgence this year. At the plate he batted over .400 this year and came through with some clutch hits. He also went the entire season without striking out, a feat that spanned 84 at-bats. Behind the plate Sumner anchored a pitching staff that became very solid as the year went on. A three-year starter for the Bulldogs his presence will be missed.

Sumner also played legion baseball for Post 137 in Holbrook this season helping lift the young program into the right direction. He has already embarked on his future plans, having shipped off to basic training with the Marine Corps. earlier this month.

C.J. Haddad –
Senior (Capt.)
Catcher - Marshfield

The No. 2 hitter on the Rams squad was among the most consistent performers on the team…Had a very solid spring for Marshfield until a pulled hamstring forced him to end his season much earlier than expected…In a 5-2 victory over Falmouth in May, Haddad brought his team back from a 2-1 deficit with a bases-clearing double, but injured himself running on the base paths…To his credit, Haddad remained behind the plate to catch, but was lost for the season, ending the Rams' hopes for a playoff push (9-11)…He was hitting over .400 at the time of the injury…Played a key role in Marshfield's fifth-straight title win at the Hull Tourney, drawing a walk and scoring the first run in a 5-0 win over Hingham, then driving in a run in the championship game against Hull in a 4-0 win…Combined with teammate Zach Chipman to go 7-for-7 in with four runs scored, three RBI and two walks in a game that got away from the Rams against Falmouth…Haddad plans to attend college in the fall.

Andrew Aizenstadt – Junior
Pitcher – Norwell

Andrew Aizenstadt

Performed well as the Clippers' new ace, earning a nod on the South Shore League All-Star team…Says his best pitching performance came in the season-opener against Hanover, where he lost a 3-1 duel to fellow All-Scholastic John Leonard…In that game, Aizenstadt went the distance, allowing only four hits while striking out seven Indians batters…Tossed a complete game five-hit shutout April 10 against Abington, striking out seven…Was also one of Norwell's best hitters; says a game toward the end of the season at Mashpee was one of his best offensive performances… Had three hits and two RBI in an April 21 win over Westwood, while also earning the save on the mound in that game…Also plays golf for NHS…Enjoys playing volleyball, foosball and pool in his spare time…Has spent part of his summer playing Legion baseball and in various AAU tournaments, traveling to Connecticut, Virginia and Georgia…Aspires to play college baseball

Paul Chiampa - Junior
Pitcher/Catcher- Pembroke

Paul Chiampa

Pembroke, in just it's second year as a program earned a state tournament berth this season behind a pair of aces. Chiampa was one of those aces, along with teammate Jeff Llanes. Poor run support often plagued Chiampa and his record, but a 2.38 ERA and 44 strikeouts in 44 innings his season gave proof of his dominance in the Patriot League. His best game was a two-hitter he tossed in a complete game shutout win over Hingham, as well as a pair of 2-0 losses to Hanover and Duxbury. When not pitching he was a stalwart behind the plate for the Titans. He plays legion baseball for Kingston Post 387.

Chiampa is also a standout football player for Pembroke, and will serve as a team captain in the fall. He's an honor roll student, and National Honor Society member, who hopes to play baseball in college.

Jeff Llanes - Senior
Pitcher - Pembroke

Jeff Llanes

Youth and inexperience is common in Pembroke athletics as it continues to distance itself from Silver Lake, the baseball team was fortunate to have a couple seniors contribute, none more important than Llanes. Serving as the senior ace on the staff that coach Bob Flynn could turn to in a big game, he did not disappoint as he helped lift the Titans to a 12-10 season and a tournament berth. This season Llanes was at his best in a pair of wins of rival Silver Lake. In the first game he allowed one hit while striking out 13 in a 2-0 win. In the second win he struck out nine allowing three hits and going 2-4 at the plate. He also started the first tournament game in school history, a loss to Hopkinton. For his efforts he was voted team MVP this year for a second straight season while also earning Patriot League all-star honors. In his spare time he enjoys fishing and ping-pong.

Pat Martin – Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher – Rockland

One of the better pitchers in the Patriot League throughout his career, Martin had another solid season for the Bulldogs…The two-time PL All-star went 5-4 with a 1.52 ERA for a Rockland team that lacked consistency at the plate…Martin tossed 65 innings this spring and struck out 64 batters…All four of Martin's losses were suffered in very close decisions, two coming by 1-0 decisions, and another in a 2-0 final…In both 1-0 EB losses, Martin surrendered only four hits while going the distance…A two-year starter, Martin finished his Rockland career with a record of 14-8…Was also an offensive threat for the Bulldogs, leading the team with a .307 average and 12 RBI for 8-12 Rockland…Also the quarterback on the RHS football squad for the past two seasons, Martin plans to continue his baseball career at Wheaton College, which was a finalist in the Div. 3 College World Series this past spring.

Mark Rennie –
Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher – Scituate

Mark Rennie

Finished a superlative high school career with another Patriot League All-Star season… The three-time Mariner-land All-Scholastic lefty saved his best for last this spring; with his team needing a win in its season finale to qualify for the state tournament, Rennie tossed a one-hitter against Randolph for a 3-0 triumph…Also knocked in a run that afternoon…Shook off a couple rough outings early in the season to lead the Sailors down the stretch…Rennie played first base when he wasn't pitching, and hit over .300 this season…Went 2-for-2 with two RBI and two runs scored in a critical late-season win over Silver Lake…A league All-Star in track this winter, where he was one of the best high jumpers in the area…Will be attending Eckerd College in Florida

Eric Pitts – Senior (Capt.)
Pitcher/Second base – Silver Lake

Proved key to getting this young Lakers team through a difficult rebuilding season with his quiet leadership, classy style-of-play, not to mention his well-rounded on field contributions… was the pitching ace on a team that struggled mightily at the plate…despite posting a very solid 2.91 ERA with 68 strikeouts in 74 innings of work, Pitts finished with a record of 3-4…also a tireless horse, who pitched five complete games this season, including one shutout...finished second on the team in batting (.296), and led the team in RBI (15) and extra base hits (6 doubles, 2 triples, 1 home run)…a unanimous selection by Patriot League coaches to the all-star team…three year varsity team member, and two year starter…also played some third base and shortstop during his high school career…will attend Roger Williams College in Rhode Island this fall, where he hopes to play baseball… has played baseball the last few Summers for the Kingston Legion baseball team… also a standout hockey player, playing varsity each of the past two winters at SL.

Eric Pitts

Steve Doyle - Junior
Third base – Weymouth

At first glance a .362 batting average doesn't look so gaudy compared to the numbers of some of the other players on this page, but when you factor in that Doyle put those numbers up using wood bats for nearly every game it jumps out. This season the junior third baseman finished second in the Bay State League in hitting while helping lead a resurgence in Weymouth baseball that saw the Wildcats fall just short of the state tournament after a two win season a year ago. He was a first team BSL all-star and finished the year with 12 RBIs while proving to be one of the toughest outs in the league. Doyle is also a member of Weymouth's Post 79 Legion team that reached the Zone 6 playoffs this year. Next season he will be among the best players on the South Shore, and will be counted on to anchor the Wildcats offensively as well as on the mound as the staff ace.

Pitching a defense has long been the name of the game, and Page's pitching helped lead a turnaround in the Wildcats baseball program. While not overpowering his 0.63 ERA in 71 innings were a good indication of just how dominant Page was. He compiled a 4-4 record, but was often plagued with little run support. Also finished the year with 43 strikeouts and just 13 walks.

Page was voted team MVP this season as well as a second team bay State all-star for his efforts. Among his best games this year was a 1-0 loss in the season opener against defending EMass champion Walpole. He allowed only one u8nearend run in the first inning but still took the hard luck loss. Also played legion baseball for Weymouth's Post 79 club. This winter he served as a captain for the basketball team and is also an honor roll student. Next year he will continue his baseball career at Curry College.

Weymouth Coach Jim Dolan… He mixes his pitches up, you know what's coming and still can't beat him. If there is a better pitcher on the South Shore I'd like to meet him. When he's out there the team has more confidence and that all stems from him"

Honorable Mention:

Matt Jones – Sr. (Capt.) – Third base – Abington
Dan Gaughan – Jr. – Pitcher – Braintree
Chris Ofsthun – Sr. (Capt.) – Centerfield - Cohasset
Rico DeLuca – Jr. – Outfield/DH – Hanover
Mike Perkins – Sr. – Shortstop – Hingham
Pat McCarron –Sr. – Outfield – Holbrook
Ryan Warsofsky – Sr. – First base – Marshfield
Josh Scott – Sr. (Capt.) – First base - Norwell
Dan Messier – Sr. – Pitcher/Infield – Rockland
Ryan Little – Soph. – Infield - Scituate
Tony Luciani –Sr. –Shortstop — Weymouth

But Braintree then scored 12 unanswered runs as Malley had to leave the game in the fourth inning with an arm injury that would keep him off the mound for the rest of the season, and a late Cohasset comeback fell short.

It was a similar scene two nights later at Catholic Memorial High School as Cohasset took a 6-3 lead over West Roxbury into the bottom of the sixth inning, only to have Ouelette have to leave that game and WR scored five runs for an 8-6 victory.

It was all downhill from there for Post 118, with Ferriter's brilliant one-hit shutout of Stoughton the only highlight the rest of the way.

Top hitters for Post 118 were first baseman-pitcher Shane Caffrey, second baseman Tom Chase and Bryan, who played third base and served as the DH when he wasn't pitching. All of them hit over .300.

Other solid performers all season were center fielder Cody Morgan, shortstop Tim McGrath and infielder Kevin Signorelli. Ben Murphy also drew praise from Caffrey for his versatility as he did some catching after the injuries to Michael Signorelli and Pinkus.

Malley, Ouelette, Caffrey, Kevin Signorelli and Murphy finished their careers this year, and Caffrey feels the team that is returning can make a run at the playoffs in a tough zone next season.

"We're losing a few good players, but we have quite a few good young players returning, most of them for at least two more years," said coach Caffrey. "If we can develop a little more pitching depth next season, we should be pretty good. Overall, I'd say this was a good year. The kids were great and gave it their best."

Each player must report during their designated time. Official practice starts for all players at 5:30 pm on Monday, Aug. 14. All players must have their equipment by the start of practice; it will not be handed out starting Aug. 14.

A $300 refundable deposit (made out to SYF) is required at the time of equipment pick-up. All equipment will be handed out at the equipment shed located at the back of Scituate High School. For further information on Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football & Cheerleading, please go to www.scicohfootball.com or call the hotlines with any questions: football (781-556-0215) or cheerleading (781-556-0216).

Volunteers: If you have not already signed up, there will also be an opportunity for parents to sign up as volunteers for the upcoming season. SYF will be looking for parents to be game day volunteers, assist with our fundraising activities, as well as be a team parent for the season.

It takes hundreds of volunteer hours to ensure a successful season. Please consider this and volunteer to help.

South Shore Soccer Camp and Squirts Camp

Cohasset Recreation Department has announced that registrations are being accepted for South Shore Soccer Camp's summer clinics, which take place for one week only, Monday, July 31. through Friday, Aug. 4. Jon Anderson will direct the camp again this year at Milliken Field, Cohasset.

There are two camps offered this summer for two different age groups. For boys and girls, ages 7 to 14, the SSSC will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The boys and girls camps are operated separately. The one-week session is $255 per participant, with a $20 discount for a second child. The fee includes a shirt and a ball for each participant, available the first day of camp. For boys and girls ages 4 to 6, the Soccer Squirts Camp will be from 8 to 9:30 a.m., each day. The price is $90 per Squirt, with no discount for a second child.

Complete the application form in the brochure at the Cohasset Recreation Department office to register. Space is limited – early registration is advised.

Soccer goaltending course being offered

Mass Premier Soccer will host a NSCAA (National Soccer Coaches Association of America) Goalkeeping Coaching Course Friday, Aug. 4 from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the MPS Rockland Arena.

The overall objective of the State Goalkeeping Diploma is to explore some of the myths and mystiques surrounding the goalkeeping function. The course is directed towards the team coach - not the specialist goalkeeper coach.

The object is to empower the coach with knowledge and practice methods that will enable the coach to evaluate a goalkeeper in game situations and then design an appropriate practice program for goalkeepers in and outside of team practices. The course includes lecture (theory) and field (practical) sessions. Fee $35.

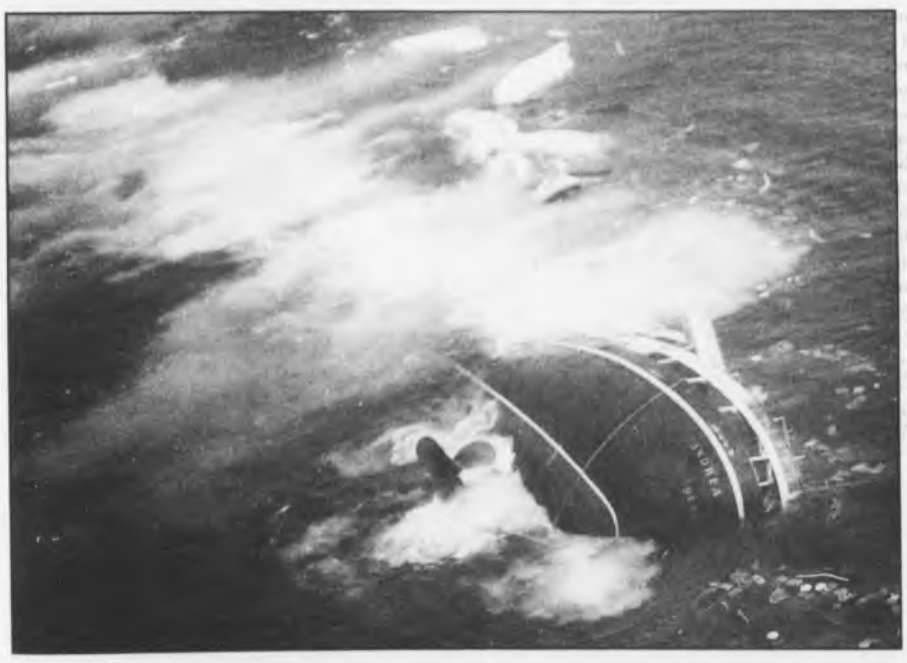
Cohasset resident records the Andrea Doria's last moments

The following photos of the sinking of the Andrea Doria earned Harry A. Trask of Cohasset, the Pulitzer Prize in 1957. The Boston Traveler photos were provided courtesy of Joan Trask.



The death of a Sea Queen

By Harry A. Trask

The first thing I knew, my wife was calling me to the phone at 2:30 in the morning to talk to Bob Kierstead from the office. Thinking sleepy but fierce things about a city editor who'd call a tired photographer at such an ungodly hour, I crawled out of bed to hear:

"Harry, there's been a crash out to sea, and I want you to get in here as soon as possible."

Just then bed seemed a lot more inviting than trying for pictures in the 2:30 a.m. darkness – especially out over the ocean somewhere. But I managed a yawning, "Is it big, Bob?"

"Two ships have collided south of Nantucket Island. More than 1,600 people involved," came the tense reply.

Suddenly wide awake, I said I'd do what I could, hung up, and began throwing on clothes. What information I had I passed on to my wife, adding, "I have no idea when I'll get home; this story may take a couple of days to clean up. I'll keep in touch as well as I can."

The drive from my home in Cohasset to the Boston Traveler building usually takes about 50 minutes; that night I was at the office in a half hour.

There, Kierstead filled me in on the details of the crash. All he knew was that the inbound Italian luxury liner, Andrea Doria, had been rammed by the ice-cutting prow of the Swedish ship, Stockholm, outbound from New York. Both ships were still afloat, but a great many lives were in dangerous balance.

Bob had contacted John Dowd, a reporter who had shared the midnight-to-dawn beat with me when I first became a staff photographer for the Traveler. John and I were to go to Revere Airport, where the owner, Julie Goldman, had a Piper Tri-Pacer and a twin Cessna for hire. The twin had been taken by a rival paper, so we got the single-engine Tri-Pacer – which was unsafe for flying over the ocean. Julie said this would take us to Nantucket where another plane would fly us over the wrecked ships.

We took to the still-dark skies at 4:30 a.m. and landed at Nantucket in an hour. Meanwhile, our rival in the twin Cessna had not been given landing clearance on the island so flew right out to the wreck scene. With him went our hopes for a better plane. Our pilot flatly refused our request to fly us over the scene. He said he couldn't risk it.

The Nantucket Airport was a crawling confusion of planes and newsmen who had chartered them. A look around revealed not a plane left untaken. So, while John buzzed here and there getting story material, I started anxiously trying to hitch a ride for us. Each inquiry brought a refusal. They were carrying extra gas and had no space left; someone else had been promised a ride; the helicopters needed room for possible survivor rescues, etc., etc. A little more desperate now, I even approached the Coast Guard and Army pilots, but they couldn't take civilian passengers.

All I could do was grab a few pictures of survivors being flown in as I watched rival papers, including Boston friends, take off for the picture of the crippled ships. It didn't help any to hear the comments as they returned exclaiming about the "terrible sight out there."

By 8:30 word had come back that the Stockholm would be able to limp back to New York, but was standing by to pick up passengers from the badly listing Andrea Doria. It became clear that pictures of rescue operations and the battered ships would have to be gotten soon or the action would be all over. And there Dowd and I were, probably the only two newsmen on the island who hadn't been out to see what was going on.

I felt bad enough standing around with no plane and no pictures at that hour, but it was worse to think of returning to the Traveler with none at all. I knew our wire service coverage would provide something, yet I dreaded the shame of going back empty-handed.

That's why I was ready to hug Dowd with joy when he came up with an idea that brightened the picture from black to – well, medium. gray, anyway. He thought of calling the Traveler for a list of airports and pilots on the eastern seaboard in hopes that one pair of wings somewhere could come to our rescue. The Traveler came through. The aviation editor gave John a complete list, but, as more edition minutes ticked by, he called number after number in vain. Toward the end of the list was the name, Bob Walker, from Martha's Vineyard. Thank God, he agreed to be our angel.

My first look at Bob's small, single-engine Bonanza lowered my hopes a few thousand feet. I would have liked to have seen a larger, more capable-looking angel. I rattled off questions – about gas, about performance, about her condition – trying to calm my jitters. Despite all the confidence and reassurance in Bob Walker's answers, I was still nervous as I put on a Mae West. It occurred to me that I'd be putting it to full use if anything should happen to the plane's one engine. When, about 9:30, it finally came time to take off, I was glad enough to get going, but couldn't choke down a glum, "Let's get it over with."

We flew south through hazy skies; visibility below was lousy. I was relieved when, after about 20 minutes, Bob said he thought he could make out the Doria dead ahead. Dowd and I peered and soon saw not the Doria but the upright white hull of the Stockholm. Then, to the left, suddenly we saw the terrible sight. It did to me what no horror movie had ever succeeded in doing. I sweated and blanched as we came upon the Andrea Doria, the $30 million Sea Queen wallowing on her starboard side. Even from the sky she looked huge – like a big, graceful animal, wounded and rolled over in pain.

Walker broke the spell by asking for instructions. I suggested circling the Stockholm for a few shots and then taking our time with the Doria. It was then almost ten o'clock.

I was feverish and cold, soaked with sweat. Aching knots in my stomach pulled tighter as I recorded the death drama just 75 feet below.

The plane was so cramped that, sitting up front with Bob, I had to have him lean forward each time I made a picture so that I could shoot through his window. I was crowded too close to mine. At the same time he made the plane roll practically on its side to get the wing out of the way.

We had just tried these sickening maneuvers a couple of times when my heart, instead of my stomach, came up to the back of my throat. I had noticed the Doria's smokestack closer to the water than when we first saw her. She was tipped further onto her side.

"Bob, circle the Doria as fast and as close as possible. I want a lot of pictures. She's sinking."

I was feverish and cold, soaked with sweat. Aching knots in my stomach pulled tighter as I recorded the death drama just 75 feet below. It hurt to see the big ship giving up the struggle – letting the ocean win. Each time we dove and passed there was less and less of her. Finally, I focused on a ring of violent bubbles, and then there was no more need for pictures. It was 10:09 a.m.

Altogether we had circled the ship nine times in nine minutes. I had made nine pictures. Somewhere in the dizzy seconds between reloading my camera and trying to keep my balance, I had noticed that no other still photographer was in the sky over the Andrea Doria just then. That meant that if my pictures were any good, I might have earned for the Traveler one of those magic things – an exclusive. I began to feel excited and was anxious to get back to develop my film.

Bob Walker sped us directly to Logan International Airport, a 20-minute taxi ride from the Traveler. On the return trip, Bob confessed that even he, an ex-GI jet jockey, had felt nauseated, overwhelmed more by what he had seen than by the plane's gyrations.

I guess John Dowd's lead story in that day's Boston Traveler expressed the personal sadness we all felt. He wrote that what he remembered most vividly of the Doria, was a brilliant mosaic seahorse in one of her swimming pools that looked as if it was "diving to the bottom."

Back at the office, I was happy to learn that most of the ship's passengers had been rescued, and all were out of danger. And I was no less happy to learn that the pictures I had made were good. All the discomforts of the day faded when the Traveler replate hit the streets with the exclusive photos of "The Death of a Sea Queen."

Funny thing, the newspaper business. In such break-neck competition it isn't always being first that counts. Sometimes it pays to be the very last.

Trask wins Pulitzer Prize in photography

This week marks the anniversary of the sinking of the Andrea Doria off the coast of Nantucket on July 26, 1956.

The following year Harry A. Trask, a Cohasset resident and photographer for the Boston Traveler — which was part of the Herald-Traveler Company — won the Pulitzer Prize in news photography for his dramatic series of pictures of that fateful event.

Then 28, Trask had only been a staff photographer at the Boston Traveler for two years.

According to the Spring-Summer 1996 issue of the Voyager, Trask "arrived just nine minutes before the Andrea Doria sank, and despite airsickness, took a series of photographs that won him journalism's highest honor."

Trask, who started with the Herald in 1944, left in 1972 to pursue a master's degree. He started his teaching career in 1973 first as a social studies teacher, and then teaching photography at the Jeremiah Burke School where he wrote the curriculum and set up the photography department. He retired in 1990 and worked at his son Mark's tackle shop for years. He passed away in 2002.

Harry's wife Joan still lives in their Bancroft Road home where the couple raised seven children.

Joan said the couple used the $1,000 Pulitzer Prize award to buy their home.

Here in Harry's own words, written just two weeks after the event, is the story of the Andrea Doria's last moments. His handwritten account along with his camera, and copies of his photographs, are in the Newseum in Arlington, Va.

About the Pulitzer Prize

Pulitzer Prizes are annual awards for achievements in American journalism, letters, drama and music. The prizes have been awarded by Columbia University in New York City since 1917, on the recommendation of a Pulitzer Prize Board. Fourteen prizes are given in journalism. The award is named after Joseph Pulitzer, American newspaper publisher, who endowed the journalism school and the awards.

Harry A. Trask of Boston Traveler was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in 1957 for his dramatic and outstanding photographic sequence of the sinking of the liner Andrea Doria, the pictures being taken from an airplane flying at a height of 75 feet only nine minutes before the ship plunged to the bottom. (The second picture in the sequence is cited as the key photograph.)
